VOL. XXIV No. 37

ITHACA, N. Y., JUNE 22, 1922

THE GHOSTS of reuning grads, in immanence rather than recollection, still frequent Campus and Hall. The sense of finality, the feeling that the Reunion is over, has not yet come vividly to those left in Ithaca. It is as if alumni, by returning and leaving here the stamp of physical presence, had made themselves anew a part of the University.

A DAUGHTER was born last week to Mr. and Mrs. Primitivo R. Sanjurjo, of the Department of Spanish.

PROFESSOR PRESERVED SMITH received the honorary degree of Ph.D. from Muhlenberg College at its recent annual Commencement.

MISS MARTHA ELLIOTT '22 and Houlder Hudgins '23, both of New York City, were married on May 6. They will make their home in Ithaca.

BUSINESS CHANGES along State Street include the retirement of H. A. Buttrick from the firm of Buttrick and Frawley and his assignment of a large part of his interest to his former associates in business, who will continue the firm name; and the retirement of A. R. Sawyer from active connection with the firm which bears his name. Mr. Sawyer has sold his interest to men from out of town.

COACH JOHN CARNEY of the Baseball Team received from the team a substantial token of appreciation of his season's leadership, in the shape of a shotgun, suitably engraved, which was presented to him as the climactic feature of the team's banquet held in the Dutch Kitchen on June 15.

JOHN HOYLE'S LAUNCH, on its way through lake and canal to Poughkeepsie and service in aiding the coach to train the crews, was marooned by mud and debris in the Barge Canal near Herkimer as a result of the recent storms. After unavailing efforts to release the craft had been made for days, the "Cornell" was finally floated and reached Poughkeepsie on June 17. Meantime the coach, unable to procure a launch, directed from the river-bank the training of the crews, who arrived in Poughkeepsie on June 15.

THE HIGH LEVEL of water at this end of Cayuga Lake, increased to the danger point by the recent storms, has forced riparian property owners to petition the State Superintendent of Public Works to avert potential damage by proper control of the Lake's outlet. The lighthouse pier is now entirely submerged.

A NOVEL SCHEME to insure identification by his classmates during the Reunion, was executed by John P. Gage '72, of Vineland, N. J., who wore upon his coat lapel a photograph of himself taken when he was a student here. Gage, attending his first reunion in the fifty years of his life as an alumnus, occupied the same room, No. 132, in Cascadilla Hall that he had as a student here.

EDWARD G. WYCKOFF '89 has announced that he is a candidate for the Republican nomination for member of Assembly from Tompkins County at the coming primaries. As announced in last week's issue, he will be pitted against James R. Robinson '08.

THE PULITZER AVIATION race to be held at Detroit in September will number among its entries two Ithaca-made aeroplanes. These are all-metal pursuit planes, manufactured by the Thomas-Morse Aircraft Corporation, the first of their kind produced by the local plant.

HYMAN C. BERKOWITZ, of the Department of Romance Languages, accompanied by Mrs. Berkowitz, sailed on June 14 for Le Havre, to spend July at the University of Madrid.

THE BASEBALL TEAM, at a meeting preceding the game against the alumni, elected as their captain for the coming year, Ernest C. Woodin, Jr., '23, of Pawling, New York.

PROFESSOR HENRY S. JACOBY and Mrs. Jacoby left Ithaca on June 18, for a trip through the American and Canadian Rocky Mountains.

BLIN S. CUSHMAN '93 and Mrs. Cushman (Jessie R. Manley '96) have announced the engagement of their daughter, Margaret Allerton '23 to John R. Fleming, '22, of Brooklyn.

A LIFE SAVING CORPS under the American Red Cross has been organized in Ithaca. Its committee includes Dr. Albert H. Sharpe, formerly football coach at Cornell and now director of the Ithaca School of Physical Education, and Professor Robert M. Ogden '00, dean of the Cornell Summer School.

PROFESSOR E. LAWRENCE PALMER, Ph.D. '17, will give at the summer session of the southern branch of the University of California, a course in nature study, specially adapted for city and county supervisors and normal school teachers.

PROFESSOR JAMES D. BREW '12, on June 7, addressed the Rotary Club of Watertown, N. Y., on municipal milk supply.

DR. FARRAND's sixth doctorate of laws was conferred upon him by Princeton on the occasion of the annual Commencement of that University on June 20.

382 CERTIFICATES entitling their holders to one-half of the return fare from the Reunion, were presented to local railroad agents by returning alumni. This total was 132 in excess of the minimum set by the railroads as prerequisite to such reduction, thus effecting a saving of one half the return fare on all railroad tickets.

CORNELL'S COACHES have donned the mantles of mere human beings for the summer. John Carney has returned to his family in his summer home in Hudson, New Hampshire. Jack Moakley finds that the golf course in Ithaca has come to outweigh the enticements formerly offered him by the neighborhood of Boston, and will stay here for the summer. Gil Dobie is also an ardent golfer, and, remaining at his home in Ithaca, will spend the summer solving tactical problems in golf and Wall Street.

THE LAKE SHORE COLONY along Cayuga as far as Glenwood, has developed to such proportions that the local electric light company has felt warranted in extending lighting service thither this summer.

PROSPECTIVE MOTORISTS in this part of the State will be interested to know that the State highway connecting Ithaca and Owego, so long under construction that it has elicited public criticism of the authorities in charge, has been definitely promised to public travel by September 1.

DELTA DELTA DELTA, national sorority, will hold its triennial national conference in Ithaca during the week beginning June 25. A special "tri-Delt" train will bring the delegates from the Middle and Far West.

HAROLD BALLOU '22, of Ithaca, and Miss Jennie Dubin of New York, a student in the Ithaca Conservatory of Music, were married at Groton, N. Y., on May 26. Mr. and Mrs. Ballou are residing in Forest Home.

THE DEPARTMENT OF BOTANY will on July 1 be transferred to the College of Agriculture. Professor Rowlee will be officially assigned to the Department of Forestry. Robert Shore, who for many years has had charge of the Sage Conservatories, will in future be connected officially with the College of Agriculture, to which will be given such of the contents of the Sage Conservatories as the newly organized Department may consider of use to it. It is rumored that the Sage greenhouses will be torn down at an early date.

Associate Alumni Elect

The annual meeting of the Associate Alumni of Cornell University was held on Saturday, June 17, in the main auditorium of Barnes Hall. In the enforced absence of the president, E. E. Sheridan '11, vice-president Thomas Fleming Jr. '05, presided. Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: President, Thomas Fleming, Jr. '05, Pittsburgh, Pa.; vice-presidents, Dr. Mary M. Crawford '04, New York, Nicholas J. Weldgen '05, Ro-

Alumni Trustee

William Metcalf, jr., '01
of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

chester, N. Y.; treasurer, William W. Macon '98, New York; secretary, Foster M. Coffin '12, Ithaca, N. Y.

Five directors, to serve three years each, were elected as follows: Benjamin O. Frick '02, Philadelphia, Pa., Anton Vonnegut '05, Indianapolis, Ind., William H. Forbes '06, Cleveland, Ohio, Edwin N. Sanderson '87, New York, and Alfred W. Mellows '06, Milwaukee, Wis.

The following three members of the nominating committee were elected to serve three years: Newton C. Farr '09, Chicago, Ill., H. M. Rogers '07, Philadelphia, Pa., and Stanton Griffis '10, New York.

The board of directors is composed of fifteen elected members, the nominating committee of nine members.

The report of the board of directors for the year was read by the secretary and adopted. The report stated it was the belief of the board that the third annual convention of the Associate Alumni, to be held in Pittsburgh on October 14 and 15, would combine the experiences of the conventions in Cleveland and Chicago to the benefit of the convention idea and that the permanent plan for future conventions will be the Pittsburgh adaptation of these two previous experiences.

On the subject of the work done by committees the report stated "Now that the long expressed need of the association for a full time paid secretary has been realized, though in rather a different sense from what it was once thought it would come, many of the functions of the association, formerly performed by committees, have been handled more or less by the secretary, either as such, or in his capacity as alumni representative, and the office force at his command has been used to do the necessary work not only of the Associate Alumni, but of the Association of Class Secretaries, of the Federation of Cornell Women's Clubs, and, to a certain extent, of some of the local clubs."

The report pointed out that substantial progress has been made in the development of the local clubs during the year, in that four new clubs have been established, four dead clubs revived and five clubs that had been little more than "annual banquet clubs" have begun to function.

The treasurer reported a balance on hand of $1621.81. Receipts for the year amounted to $727.70, with disbursements of $427.08. The report indicated a much more active interest on the part of the constituent clubs, proven by the fact that dues were received from twenty-two clubs in the current year as compared with five in the year 1920-21.

According to the report, the total cost to the Associate Alumni of the convention held in Cleveland in May, 1921 amounted to $283.50.

The report of the directors stated that the board recognized that the question of some such organization as a federation of Cornell clubs had become a live issue and should be carefully considered at this time, and voted to recommend that the president be authorized to appoint at the annual meeting a committee to report at the convention in October. Acting on this recommendation, at the meeting it was moved, seconded and unanimously carried that the president be authorized to appoint such committee, its size to be left to his discretion.

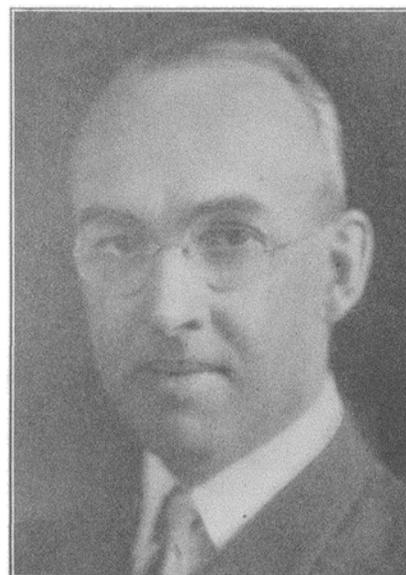

THE HOUSE of Mrs. C. E. Courtney, on Eddy Street, given to Cornell's "Old Man" by admiring alumni, was badly damaged on June 17, when a delivery car which had been left on the steep grade on Catherine Street opposite, ran down the hill, crossed Eddy Street, and crashed into the house. The porch must be in great part rebuilt.

PROFESSOR AND MRS. Charles V. P. Young of 112 Lake Street left on June 19 for Professor Young's camp in Ontario, Canada, where they will spend the summer.

Wakeman and Metcalf Win

With a total vote that was so large that the third candidate for alumni trustee received more votes than any winning candidate had ever before received, S. Wiley Wakeman '99, of Quincy, Massachusetts, and William Metcalf, Jr., '01, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, were elected trustees of Cornell University for the five year terms beginning in 1922. Of the 6,816 votes that were counted, Wakeman received 4,580, Metcalf 4,459, and Mrs.

The highest number of votes ever before cast was 4,111, given to Charles C. Dickinson in 1910. The vote shows that more than thirty-five per cent of the qualified electorate cast their ballots. Only persons holding Cornell degrees are eligible to vote.

Successful Reunion Marks Inauguration of New Plan

New Record Set as 1,161 Cornellians Register for Huge Alumni Gathering—1912 Wins Individual Honors for High Total

Cornell alumni of the eighteen classes which held formal reunions over the last week-end and others of intervening classes who were in Ithaca are enthusiastic over the success of the inauguration of the new reunion plan, which brought back to Ithaca on the same occasion so many members of classes which were associated during undergraduate years in the University. They are also enthusiastic over the success of the largest Cornell reunion that has ever been held excluding the general return to Ithaca at the time of the Semi-Centennial celebration in 1919.

New records were set on Friday and Saturday of last week both in total registration, which reached 1,179, in the number of classes holding organized reunions, and in Cornell enthusiasm. Beginning with the first general lunch held in the Drill Hall on Friday noon, enlivened by the music of several class bands, class cheers, and songs, through the formal close of festivities in the form of a program of entertainment for the visiting Cornellians held in Bailey Hall under the auspices of the Class of 1907, on Saturday night, there was not a dull moment.

The large number of reunion classes made possible an unusually striking array of colors in the costumes, which varied from the plain hat-bands to Spanish boleros of red and blue, jackets of red and white, blazers of green and white, red and white full dress coats and stove pipe hats, and blue and white polka-dot pajama suits. The color of the costumes was most striking in the parades around the Drill Hall and as the classes were grouped in the stands at the baseball game.

Strawberry Festival

The Class of 1902 followed its custom, inaugurated at its last reunion, of playing the host to the reunion crowd in a strawberry festival, called "The Dedication and Installation of the Strawberry." It is rumored that the City of Ithaca went strawberryless for two days as a result of the generosity of the Strawberry Class. The strawberry festival was the first episode of the reunion program, having been held on Friday morning after the congestion at the registration booths had cleared away. The University served lunch in the Drill Hall to several hundred alumni and members of the University community on Friday. The afternoon was spent in multitudinous ways by individual classes, each of which followed a program of its own. In the evening, a large number of members of the four scholastic honor societies attended the second annual honor societies banquet.

Official meetings took up a good deal of the time on Saturday morning, the "semi-professional" alumni attending annual sessions of the Cornellian Council, the Association of Class Secretaries, and the Associate Alumni of Cornell University, and The Federation of Cornell Women's Clubs. The detailed accounts of these meetings are given in full elsewhere in this issue of the ALUMNI NEWS. On Saturday noon the University was host to the alumni, seniors, visitors, and members of the Faculty in a huge luncheon get-together in the Drill Hall, and the luncheon was immediately followed by a parade to the baseball diamond, where Cornell met Pennsylvania in its annual Alumni Day baseball game.

One of the outstanding features of the reunions was the performance of President Farrand in speaking to eighteen groups of diners between six and ten o'clock on Saturday evening. His tour took him to each of the dinners of men and women of the nearly 1,500 guests of the Class of 1907 which staged a highly successful final get-together.

Following some pleasing organ selections by Professor James T. Quarles, Winthrop W. Taylor, president of the class of 1907, gave the official address of welcome on the part of the hosts, and he then introduced Harold D. (Bub) North '07, as master of ceremonies—the official traffic cop opened the way wide open so that the meeting would be a go from the start. The program commenced with Cornell songs and yells, followed by samples of undergraduate "jazz" by "Tige" Jewett's orchestra, and selections by the band imported from parts unknown by Clarence B. (Kid) Kugler '03 for the occasion. Erskine Wilder '05, assisted by the entire class of '05, sang the Alumni Song, and the chairman then introduced Former Acting President Smith '78, who won the hearts of the hundreds of alumni in an interesting talk on Cornell and some reminiscences. "Uncle Pete" was followed by "Rym" Berry '05, who told his famous oyster story, and "Looye" Fuyertes '97, who told his audience about snores—illustrated. President Farrand, in his nineteenth talk of the evening, brought the program to an auspicious close.

Individual honors for attendance went to the class of 1912, holding its ten-year reunion. This class was represented by 135 members who registered in the Drill Hall, 24 women and 114 men. The class registrar has a total of 145, ten more than signed officially. This is the highest reunion number on record. '17 came second with a total registration of 107, of whom 27 were women and 80 men. The fifteen-year class was third with 75 men and 12 women, and '97 was fourth with 85 members on hand. Eight hundred seventy-six of the alumni who registered were members of the reunion classes, the others being scattered through every graduating class.

ON JUNE 10, as a part of the Pennsylvania commencement exercises, the Philomathean Society gave a performance of Thomas Dekker's "Old Fortunatus."

Table of Registration of Reunion Classes

reunion classes and also to the senior banquet. With characteristic adaptation to his audience, he gave varied talks to the eighteen groups, meeting each class with a contact which was refreshing and greatly appreciated by the hundreds of alumni who heard him speak for a few minutes.

Fifteen-Year Class Hosts

The reunion program was brought to an official close by the celebration of the customary plan of entertainment by the fifteen-year class. The auditorium of Bailey Hall was comfortably filled by

SENIOR WEEK UNDER WAY

Cornell's 54th Commencement started with an impressive baccalaureate sermon by the Rev. Francis J. McConnell, Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in Bailey Hall on Sunday afternoon. The message brought by the eminent divine to the members of the graduating class was one of good will towards their fellow men. He urged upon them the development of a greater social consciousness in order that the people of the world might be enabled to live more agreeably together.

A large number of parents of the graduating students, together with friends and groups of alumni who remained in Ithaca from the reunion celebration of the preceding days, were on hand to witness the start of the commencement program. As usual, the line of march commenced in front of Goldwin Smith Hall, the seniors of the various colleges lining up in front of their respective buildings. Bailey Hall was filled by the holders of tickets, which were distributed only to members of the graduating class for their parents and relatives.

On Monday afternoon, the Dean of Women, the Wardens of the women's residential halls, and the women of the graduating class entertained at a reception in honor of the Faculty, and on Monday evening the Cornell Masque gave its annual senior week show at the Lyceum Theater. The program for the rest of the week called for class day exercises on Tuesday morning, the musical clubs' concert Tuesday evening, commencement exercises on Wednesday morning, and the senior ball as the closing social function of the year in the Old Armory on Wednesday evening.

MEDIC'S COMMENCEMENT

The degree of M.D. was conferred upon forty-three members of the graduating class of the Medical College at the twenty-fourth graduation ceremony conducted on June 8 in the college assembly room at Twenty-seventh Street and First Avenue.

President Farrand was the only speaker. His message was an appeal for the class to continue its studies to help prevent disease.

"Do not drop all ideas of education," he urged, "but realize the importance of the knowledge within your possession and use it to the utmost."

The John Metcalfe Polk Memorial prizes of $300, $125, and $75 respectively were awarded to Ainsworth Lockhart Smith '22, of Brooklyn, Carl H. Smith '22, of New York, and Julius Nathaniel Craig. Carl H. Smith won the first prize of $50 for efficiency in otology and Charles Stahl '22, of Newark, the second prize of $25.

The William M. Polk Prizes in gynecology went to Ainsworth Lockhart Smith, first prize of $125; Leon Isaac Levine '22, of New York, second prize of $75, and Edwin Toal Hauser '22, of New York, third prize of $50.

White '90 Heads CouncilCornellian Council Reports Collection of $67,019 and Undergraduate Pledges of $211,000

The Executive Committee of the Cornellian Council announced at the annual meeting on June 17 that $67,019 had been collected by this organization up to the time of the meeting. Of this sum $21,636 represented principal and interest payment on undergraduate Endowment subscriptions, payable through the Cornellian Council. In addition to this amount collected on past subscriptions, it was reported that 1,127 new subscriptions had been received during the year, the larger part of which had come from two undergraduate classes, totaling $211,000.

J. DuPratt White '90, a member of the Board of Trustees and the chairman of the Semi-Centennial Endowment Committees, was elected president and George D. Crofts '01 of Buffalo, vice-president of the Cornellian Council for next year. The Executive Committee for the coming year will be comprised of J. DuPratt White '90, Walter P. Cooke '91, Frank E. Gannett '98, George D. Crofts '01, Raymond P. Morse '03, Thomas Fleming, Jr., '05, president of the Associate Alumni, and Hamilton B. Bole '11.

The following members-at-large of the Cornellian Council whose terms of office had just expired were reelected for a period of five years: Mrs. Anna B. Comstock '85, Ezra B. Whitman '01, Daniel A. Reed '98, Archibald T. Banning, Jr., '04, and Frank S. Washburn '83.

The resignations of Warren G. Ogden '01 of Boston, an at-large member, and Lewis Henry, the representative of the Class of 1909, were accepted and Creed W. Fulton '09 of Boston was elected to succeed Mr. Ogden. The Class of 1909 has been requested to elect a successor to Mr. Henry.

The Executive Committee in its report to the Council stated that no intensive campaign or drive had been conducted during the last year to solicit funds from alumni, but a quiet solicitation had been carried on among the alumni who had not already given to the Semi-Centennial Endowment Fund or to the Alumni Fund. A strong nation-wide organization, however, has been created which will represent the Cornellian Council in all future appeals to the graduates and former students.

An amendment to the by-laws of the Council was passed providing for a representative on the Council from the earlier classes in addition to the representatives of the forty last classes graduated.

A provision was also made for honorary membership on the Council.

Of the unallocated funds raised by the Cornellian Council during the current year the Council has recommended to the Board of Trustees that $10,000 be appropriated toward the further cost of construction of Bolt Hall, the new unit of the dormitory group now under construction, and that the balance, after a few definite commitments have been paid, be placed at the disposal of the Board of Trustees as an emergency fund for such purposes as they deem most advisable.

An important step was taken by the Council at this meeting in recommending to the Board of Trustees that a Cornell Alumni Endowment Fund be created as a repository for the principal funds to be raised by the Council. Most of the subscriptions made by the present undergraduates, in fact by all of the graduating classes since 1909, are on a principal and interest basis, and the Council has expressed itself as believing that whenever principal is paid in on these subscriptions it should be added to permanent endowment.

The Executive Committee of the Council also expressed itself as believing that it might be advisable from time to time to add a part of the current funds raised by the Council to the permanent Alumni Endowment Fund.

The following members of the Council were present at this meeting: Walter P. Cooke '91, president, Harry J. Clark '95, Edwin N. Sanderson '87, Ebenezer T. Turner '83, Randall J. LeBoeuf '92, Robert T. Mickle '92, Francis O. Affeld, Jr., '97, Herbert D. Schenck '82, Henry J. Patten '84, Julian A. Pollak '07, George D. Crofts '01, Walter A. Bridgeman '13, Erskine Wilder '05, Thomas Fleming, Jr., '05, Kenneth Fraser '97, George J. Tansy '88, Alpheus W. Smith '19, Mrs. Anna B. Comstock '85, Mrs. Willard Beahan '78, Paul Schoelkopf '06, Maurice Whinery '02, Lewis L. Tatum '97, and Harold Flack '12, secretary.

TULSA PLANS IMPORTANT LUNCHEON

The newly organized and flourishing Cornell Club of Tulsa, Oklahoma, will meet at the University Club of Tulsa at a 12.30 o'clock luncheon on Wednesday, July 5 for the purpose of discussing the organization of a Cornell alumni club for the state of Oklahoma. The Tulsa Club, which has already become an active Cornell organization, has an increasingly fertile field to work in, as the number of Cornellians in that part of Oklahoma is rapidly increasing. The Cornell lunch on July 5 is open to all Cornellians in the state, and any who may be visiting there.

THE THREE ONE-ACT PLAYS which have been presented with so much success through this season in the Campus Theatre, were repeated under the auspices of the Cornell Masque at the Lyceum on June 19. The Dramatic Club gave "The Pot Boiler," by Alice Gerstenberg, and "The Soul of a Professor," by Professor Martin W. Sampson; and the Cosmopolitan Club repeated its performance of "Her Heart was Richer than Gold," likewise by Professor Sampson.

Trustee Harriet T. Moody Reports—Makes Plea for University Press

At the close of a second term as Alumni Trustee of Cornell University, it seems more natural to turn my thought forward into the University's future, than to look backward into its immediate past. Cornell is sending out what might be called its midsummer new growth, and the eye naturally catches, and the thought prefers to dwell on its new manifestations of internal vigor.

An outstanding figure in the opening of our University's second half century is our new President. The Committee appointed by the Board of Trustees to nominate a President found their task difficult of achievement. They were guided by a determined purpose to find the man who, in the present-day reconstruction of human life, would best be able to promote and protect the necessary new adjustments between the past and the future, in the University's organization and in its ideals. The names of more than ninety possible candidates for the vacant presidency were carefully considered by this Committee, which was composed of representative Trustees. The situation was discussed with prominent educators from all over the country, and many of the men eligible for this vacancy were seen and advised with. Among the first names given to our Committee was that of Dr. Livingston Farrand, in whom the Committee felt an immediate and keen interest; but Dr. Farrand was in Europe engaged in Red Cross work when we first met, and it seemed improbable that we should be able to secure him. Immediately after his return, however, one of our members induced him to visit Ithaca and shortly after this visit he signified his willingness to accept the Presidency. He was then unanimously elected by the Board of Trustees. It is impossible to lay too much emphasis upon the new vitality the University began to manifest upon all sides after Dr. Farrand's acceptance.

The central thought in his inaugural address was that the character of the world's work was changing and demanded the utmost that the thinkers of today could bring to its service. To this service Dr. Farrand summoned all the resources of the University; and all the energies of the administration, the Faculty, and the students; with the idea that our resources must be examined, developed, and brought into the line of their utmost efficiency; a summons looking toward a complete revision and new connoting of the University's methods, purposes, and coordinated energies, as well as to its need of development along new lines.

Cornell has now secured her President. Her future policy must be to devote herself to securing the men most representative in their various fields for her professorial staff, and to providing adequate monetary compensation for the abilities she demands.

Toward this end, and for all other vital needs, Cornell can look with confidence to her alumni, who, organized under the name of the Cornellian Council, have become the University's most powerful ally. The Cornellian Council "was founded to stimulate alumni interest in the financial support of the University." From the first it has been their keenest desire to have the professorial salaries increased, and in every way to contribute to the strength and welfare of the Faculty. They became the most important factor in raising the Semi-Centennial Endowment Fund, and have now returned to their original work with renewed energy. They enlist the interest of the undergraduates, and by this means secure an ever increasing group of members pledged to carry on their plans. One of their most useful services is the annual apportionment of an unassigned fund, to be used for needed purposes at the discrimination of the administration. The value of such a fund cannot be overestimated inasmuch as gifts to the University are usually limited to specified purposes, and unprovided-for expenses constitute therefore one of the serious problems of the budget. The activity and dedication of the Cornellian Council is the University's greatest pledge to the future.

Among the immediate needs of the University is the establishment of a College of Fine Arts. Our scientific and professional schools, our College of Agriculture, and in some respects our Arts College, have developed from within, manifesting new growth from year to year; but those important branches of human advancement, known collectively as The Fine Arts, and embracing music, painting, sculpture, and the drama, have not yet had suitable opportunity for development. Our University has only to define firmly a plan for a college of Fine Arts, and the means for carrying out this plan will be forthcoming. It is my belief that America will always be found ready to do any needful thing for educational advancement, provided the plan advocated is sufficiently far-reaching; and it is therefore my sincere belief that important foundations can be secured, now better than ever before, for developing a College of Fine Arts, if the intention is to make this college a place where the various branches of the fine arts may flourish creatively, as well as educatively. Such a plan will be difficult in the achievement, but it will not be impossible, and the solution of this great problem must inevitably lie in the University's future.

In creating this fairly new department, the University will ally itself to a modern educational movement which is manifested in various parts of the world: a movement which looks to the alliance of organized society through a united interest in its highest idealism. It is based upon a belief that the strongest influence towards the development of an international sense of human fellowship, and toward that consciousness of human unity upon which the stability of the future rests, is to be found in the immediate appeal of the so-called Fine Arts, which everywhere present human idealism striving for expression, and is, so to say, a common, human language.

Another important and necessary development in our University is the establishment of a thoroughly competent University Press, one which shall give adequate support to the mature, scholarly work done in the University; and which shall reemphasize to the world the importance of the books, theses, and documents produced by those members of the University Faculty and students who are engaged in the advancement of learning in any of its aspects. By publishing their works through a Cornell Press, they will ally them more closely to the University in the public mind, and in that way contribute to the University's reputation.

A literary critical review, definitely Cornellian in name and authorship, to be contributed to by Faculty and friends of Cornell, would add materially to the intellectual leadership towards which Cornell must strive. There is available from such sources enough material, of breadth of view, of a dignity and authority of thought, to give such a Cornell review a standing on a par with most other reviews of the country. Definite steps toward the foundation of such a publication should be taken now, at the beginning of the intellectual reawakening of the country, when the public is the readier to absorb and be influenced by such a publication.

The Heckscher Fund, a most serviceable resource to scholars, has already provided material for many invaluable University publications. Books, treatises, brochures, on topics of grave importance as widely separated in their human interest as the range between "The Laws of X-Ray Absorption" and "The Psychology of the Poet's Mind," have to a large extent been the immediate outcome of Mr. Heckscher's gift, and the far-reaching usefulness of this foundation will, let us hope, attract other gifts of a similar nature, and so build up a department in the University which will supply the means of its own growth, and will stimulate all other University developments.

Considerable prominence has been given in the last few years to the idea of inducing American men of literary distinction to become residents in universities. This idea has many valuable aspects, and many which, whether regarded from the university standpoint or from that of the recipient, may not seem so valuable. It is however non-negligible, for consideration, since it is being tried-out in several universities with valuable results. Would it not be a good substitute for this idea to have an endowment fund, the income of which could be offered to an important writer, with the stipulation that his books should be issued from the University Press? This plan would bring him into close contact with University life, without imposing any limitation on the sense of personal freedom essential to literary production; it would also give students many opportunities for personal intercourse with him; and the prestige of the University would be enhanced through his publications.

In any event, the establishment of a master University Press at Cornell, long talked of, is now so necessarily indicated that it must be dealt with as an immediate issue. As Professor Lane Cooper has said in a most interesting article on this subject, printed in the ALUMNI NEWS of December 22, 1921, "We need a great university press in America, and it should consist not only of a printing plant, but also and more especially, of a publishing-house richly endowed for important scholarly and scientific ventures. It should not only rival, but surpass, the greatest of scholarly and scientific presses of Europe, as our country surpasses others in wealth and undertakings for the good of men. Such a press is likely to be founded anywhere and at any time in America. Why not at Cornell?" And again: "... we may expect ere long to see a great scholarly and scientific press founded somewhere in this country. Why not at Cornell?"

Two such important things as the establishment of a College of Fine Arts and the founding of an adequate University Press are not the achievement of a moment. They represent fundamental ideals, toward the realization of which the University must strive as earnestly and ardently as possible; but both these institutions are so essential that the University Trustees should prepare constructive plans in advance, which may be presented to prospective donors with definite estimates of cost, in order that there may be no unnecessary delay in the establishment of these departments when opportunity offers.

Another most important change immediately indicated in the development of Cornell University is the appointment of a woman or women on the Arts Faculty. Cornell is an institution committed to co-education. It is therefore eminently necessary to see what can be done to make it one of the valuable and strengthening features of University life. Is it not a reasonable policy to make it a place which attracts the highest type of women students; as well as a place where women may work under the most advantageous conditions? To both these ends nothing can be more contributive than the fact that women are held in high esteem there, but this will never appear to be the case until there are women on the University Faculties.

A measure was passed by the Board of Trustees in January, 1915, providing for the appointment of a woman professor in the Arts Faculty. This movement was supported by a memorial from the Faculty, expressing their belief that women should be considered as well as men in seeking new eligibles for professorial chairs, and in making new appointments to these chairs. We have in our Dean of Women, Dr. Georgia White, the type of woman we desire to see on the University Faculties. Her work commands attention throughout the country; but she has great need of women colleagues on the Faculties and in the Board of Trustees.

A difficulty with which Dr. White has been forced to reckon is the inadequate provision of homes for women students. The need of dignified halls of residence for both men and women has been a continually recurring topic at Cornell University, and it is obvious that suitable homes and halls of recreation, places for study and social intercourse, are among the most educative influences in University life. Much has been done toward securing such residential halls, but no adequate provision has as yet been made at the University for the numbers registered there. The difficulty of placing undergraduate women in homes where their needs can be met, and of giving proper consideration to these needs, has been one of the most baffling of the Dean's problems, to the solving of which she has devoted anxious time. I have reason to believe, however, that our immediate prospect is good for securing a notable gift, which will provide residential halls for the University women adequate to their present needs. More definite information on this subject will probably be forthcoming soon; but there is a reasonable hope that arrangements for starting to build units of the women's dormitories will be made by the time the new plans are completed for the laying out of the University campus.

I am moved in closing to speak of a question which has excited my interest for the past few years: namely, that of students' tuition fees. It is a matter of the gravest importance to all concerned in the welfare of the University, that the student body should increase in intellectual and spiritual vigor in direct ratio with the growth of the University. This presupposes a process of student selection which must not be mitigated by any extraneous influences. I am opposed to the idea of advancing tuition fees for students, both because this policy makes a false basis of selection; and also for definite logical business reasons. It has often been said that there is something "pauperizing" about a student's receiving a more expensive education than he himself pays for in his tuition fees. I have heard it argued that a student would increase his self-respect if he paid in full the cost of his course in the University; even if he pledged his future for such payment. This idea appears to me to be illogical and unfounded. In the first place, the student in gaining his education is not acquiring a capital for his own exclusive advantage. He is as surely fitting himself for public service as are secondary school students, whom local and Federal governments educate under systems known as compulsory education. An educated man ultimately gives back more in public service through his trained faculties than is in any way represented by the cost of his education. In fact if our youth were not themselves enlisted for university education, the Government would be forced to make it compulsory in order that we might hold our place in the modern world. Again, in the upper classes much of the cost of education is for research work, which is only indirectly for the benefit of the student. High tuition fees to be paid on any of the proposed methods might not only exclude precisely the students best adapted for the highest future usefulness; but a plan which included mortgaging their future, would put them on a false economic basis. I feel deeply that the wisest policy for the University to follow is to require moderate fees from its undergraduates; and to rely on the energies of its graduates, and on the appreciation of its work by the great benefited public, to provide needed funds for sustaining the expenses of undergraduate education. In the last ten years the tuition fees have been advanced from $100 and $150 to $200 and $250, and there is talk of further increase in these fees, in order to meet the budget expenses. I am opposed to the policy of advancing fees.

In closing I must say once more that I am grateful for having had the privilege of sitting on our Board of Trustees, and so of learning at first-hand something of the idealism toward which the University is striving, often indeed upstream, and against a tide of almost unconquerable difficulties, but steadily, nevertheless, and guided by earnest, disinterested, and dedicated effort. The growing consciousness of values induced by participating in the discussions of the Board does more than anything else can do to revitalize the bonds which ally an alumnus to the University. I venture to say that no alumnus can sit for a term in the councils of the Board of Trustees, without dedicating himself anew to the University's service.

Honor Societies Dinner

Well Attended and Most Successful—Dr. Shaw Detained by Illness

The second annual Honor Societies Day was celebrated by a well attended dinner of the four societies, Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Xi, Tau Beta Pi, and Phi Kappa Phi, in Prudence Risley Hall on Friday, June 16. One hundred and ninety-six persons sat down at the tables, thus comfortably filling the hall.

There were four speakers, Dr. David Starr Jordan '72, chancellor emeritus of Stanford, President Farrand, Professor George R. McDermott, of the College of Engineering, and Louis A. Fuyertes '97. Professor Clark S. Northup '93, chairman of the committee on arrangements, presided as toastmaster.

Dr. Jordan indulged in some reminiscences of early Cornell and then gave an optimistic review of the work being accomplished by American institutions of higher learning and expressed the belief that in comparison with European universities, colleges and universities in this country have progressed with great rapidity.

Following the thought suggested by the first speaker Dr. Farrand stated that in his opinion the quality of work being performed by American institutions is superior to that of the older European seats of learning. He said that in France at the close of the war it was anticipated that the American students and teachers who had formerly gone to Germany to complete their scientific and professional courses would change and go to France, but it had turned out that they had stayed on in America to finish their education. He was of the opinion that they had found in this country what they had formerly obtained in foreign universities.

Professor McDermott drew a striking analogy between the building and launching of ships, in which field he is primarily interested, and the building of character in college and the graduation of students.

Fuyertes bespoke for general scientific research cooperation among such learned societies as those represented at the meeting. He suggested that although the fields of research differ widely, they have much in common that should be taken advantage of in a manner that would be mutually helpful. The painter, the naturalist, the physicist, the chemist, and the botanist can do much to solve one another's puzzling problems. A striking illustration of this is the notable work done by Professor Wilder Bancroft, a chemist, on the problem of the coloration of birds.

Dr. Albert Shaw, editor of The American Review of Reviews, was to have delivered the annual address, on the subject of "Individualism in the New Social Epoch"; but owing to illness he was unable to come.

OBITUARY

Dr. Herbert E. Baright '89

Dr. Herbert Edwin Baright died in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., on May 27, after an illness of several months following a general breakdown suffered in January.

He was born in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., on January 3, 1868, and received the degree of B.S. at Cornell in 1889. He was master of the chimes from 1886 to 1889, class treasurer in his sophomore year, and a member of the C. U. C. A., and was one of the ten delegates from Cornell to the first Young Men's Conference held in Northfield, Mass. In 1893 he was graduated from the University of Michigan, later studying in Vienna, Austria. In 1897-8 he taught in Mount Herman School, and for the next four years he was a physician at the Hudson River State Hospital at Poughkeepsie. Then for eight years he was a physician at the Clifton Springs, N. Y., Sanitarium, and while located in Clifton Springs, he started the publication of The Daily Bible. Since leaving there he has conducted a sanitarium in Saratoga Springs. He was a fellow of the Academy of Medicine.

Surviving him are his widow, Irene Benham Baright, his mother, Dr. Julia S. Baright, and his sister, Mrs. Leon R. Alexander.

Class Secretaries Elect

At the annual meeting of the Cornell Association of Class Secretaries, held in the West Dome of Barnes Hall on Saturday, June 17, Andrew J. Whinery '10 was reelected president of the organization for the ensuing year, Charles D. Bostwick '92 was elected vice-president, and the treasurer and secretary, Clark S. Northup '93 and Foster M. Coffin '12 were reelected. The following three members were elected to comprise the executive committee: R. G. H. Speed '71, Willard Austen '91 and Ross W. Kellogg '12.

Twenty-five classes were represented, twenty by secretaries and five by delegates. The following is a list of those present; the delegates' names are in italics:

R. G. H. Speed '71, Henry L. Stewart '72, William O. Kerr '77, Hiram H. Wing '81, Dr. Henry P. de Forest '84, Dr. Luzerne Coville '86, Dr. Veranus A. Moore '87, Willard W. Rowlee '88, Willard Austen '91, Clark S. Northup '93, Benton S. Monroe '96, George N. Lauman '97, Charles V. P. Young '99, Cecil J. Swan '04, Dr. Mary M. Crawford '04, Harold J. Richardson '05, Bernhard E. Fernow '06, Antonio Lazo '07, Seth W. Shoemaker '08, Mrs. Robert W. Sailor '09, Andrew J. Whinery '10, Foster M. Coffin '12, Nina Smith '12, George H. Rockwell '13, Gertrude A. Marvin '13, Charles G. Seelbach '19, Silence Rowlee '20, Allan H. Treman '21, Hazel A. Dates '21.

Women's Federation Meets

Nine Cornell Women's Clubs Represented at Annual Meeting

The meeting of the Federation of Cornell Women's Clubs in the Drill Hall on Friday, June 16, was well attended and included official representatives from nine clubs.

Mrs. Charles W. Curtis '88 of Rochester, New York, who has been president of the Federation for the past two years, was unanimously reelected to serve another term. Mrs. William Vaughn Moody '76, of Chicago, was unanimously elected as second vice-president. Emily Hickman '05 and Mrs. Blin S. Cushman '96 remain as first and third vice-presidents respectively.

Two important changes in the constitution were effected:

1. The election of the secretary-treasurer of the federation was delegated to the executive committees.

2. The entire section in the constitution regarding the nomination of alumni trustees was stricken out. It was voted to leave it to the executive committee to decide whether or not a woman candidate shall be put in the field, but each club at its first meeting of the year shall send to the secretary names of two nominees.

The treasurer reported that the French Scholarship Fund had been completed, with a surplus of $95.15, which, it was decided, should remain in the treasury for further use.

At future alumni conventions to which the Federation sends a representative, expenses of that delegate will be paid from the treasurer.

Mrs. Anna Botsford Comstock '85 reported on the fund left by Florence W. Dearstyne '85, for small loans to women working their way through college. Before Miss Dearstyne's death it had been her intention to leave a library to the Yantes Institute in the South but she died before accomplishing her desire and the money came to Cornell in accordance with her will. The committee in charge of the fund decided to have the recipients of loans repay one-quarter of the loan, the amounts received to be sent to the Yantes Institute to buy books to add to the large number already sent there by Cornellians. For a number of years, however, no word has been received from the institute, and it was deemed advisable to send nothing more. The Federation voted that the money be allowed to accumulate.

Dr. Georgia L. White, Dean of Women, reviewed conditions at Cornell during the past year, speaking particularly on the housing situation and the development of plans for the new Dormitory group, on the self-government convention held at Cornell during the winter, on limitation of registration, and on the French scholarship held by Miss Maurer.

Published for the Associate Alumni of Cornell University by the Cornell Alumni News Publishing Company, Incorporated.

Published weekly during the college year and monthly during the summer; forty issues annually. Issue No. 1 is published the last Thursday of September. Weekly publication (numbered consecutively) continues through Commencement Week. Issue No. 40 is published in August and is followed by an index of the entire volume, which will be mailed on request.

Subscription price $4.00 a year, payable in advance. Foreign postage 40 cents a year extra. Single copies twelve cents each.

Should a subscriber desire to discontinue his subscription a notice to that effect should be sent in before its expiration. Otherwise it is assumed that a continuance of the subscription is desired.

Checks, drafts and orders should be made payable to Cornell Alumni News.

DEMOCRACY OF DORMITORIES

The reunion from which we are still throbbing had many aspects in which it was second only to the Semi-Centennial. Records of various kinds were set, including that for total registration, registration for a single class, amount of rainfall, and other salient features that are after all of little real importance except to statisticians.

The outstanding gain for reunions was the heartily approval of the so-called Dix or contemporary class group plan of reunion, and the obvious and pleasing democracy of the whole affair. Concerning the former, one can scarcely say that the plan was absolutely demonstrated to be more desirable than the quinquennial plan. The testimony, however, of the "Dixees" was that it was a decided improvement.

In the matter of a complete breaking down of clique, fraternity, and social club distinctions the reunion seems to have been uniformly successful. It was evident early in the affair that auld lang syne meant more to everybody than the bonds of eternal fidelity sworn to at periods separated by intervals of five to fifty years. Fraternity houses were virtually void of alumni visitors and social organizations might as well never have existed.

It is safe to assert, and no one who was present would contradict, that the principal contributing factor in making the reunion democratic and successful was the use of the dormitories by all but the older classes.

If any one thing can demonstrate the value of dormitories to the University it is to invite alumni to live in them for even a brief period in company with their classmates. The market price on building one room is $2800. To those who have accepted their shelter the cost will seem low compared with their value. A few more reunions in the dormitories, and the whole cow lot ought to blossom with dormitories as freely as it now does with daisies.

LITERARY REVIEW

Religion and the Poets

Religious Thought and the Greater American Poets. By Elmer J. Bailey, Ph.D. '09, Assistant Professor of English in the University of Pittsburgh and Examining Chaplain to the Bishop of Pittsburgh. Boston. The Pilgrim Press. 1922. Sm. 8vo, pp. x, 258.

We naturally and properly turn to the great poets for light on the deeper problems of life. It is at the moments of supreme exaltation, of clear inspiration, of enthousiasmos, that the greatest poetry is produced; it is then, too, that the veil is lifted and the soul obtains glimpses into the Land of the Eternal Verities. Argument, logic, calculation are thrust into the background; the soul sees things as they are.

What have the greater American poets to say about the religious problems that have troubled men's minds from time immemorial? To theological speculation they have directly contributed nothing; indirectly they helped to discredit a good deal of more or less muddled theology, thereby performing a lasting service. From different angles they saw that God is good, a Father who has regard for even the least of His children. Jesus they regarded from various points of view. Emerson and Whitman thought of him as a great teacher. Bryant, Lowell, Longfellow, and Holmes, thinks Professor Bailey, viewed him as "in a true sense a new revelation of God to man." Not one of them, Bailey concedes, took the view of Jesus which "the Church has always held to be its fundamental doctrine." And this is a curious phenomenon, from which every reader will draw his own inferences. Nor have they accepted the doctrine of the Holy Spirit as a third member of a Trinity; but Bailey thinks that Emerson's Oversoul, Whittier's Inner Light, and a certain spiritual activity recognized by Whitman may correspond to the idea. The great poets have agreed that man's destiny is in his own hands; they have abhorred the idea of the passive life; unanimously they have taught aggressive activity on the side of the good. They did not wholly solve the problem of evil, or why the guiltless suffer with and for the guilty. The puzzle of vicarious suffering "has always been inscrutable to man." But they all firmly believed in immortality; Resurgam was their cry.

We have read Bailey's book with pleasure and profit. In some trifling details we may differ with him, as for example when he speaks (p. 47) of Emerson's making "such desperate work of rhyme and rhythm that not infrequently he fell short of giving his message clear utterance," a statement which seems somewhat of an exaggeration, or again in some other place where his orthodox point of view may have prevented him from seeing what is evident enough to others. But in the main it is a good and commendable book, safe, systematic, and remarkably sympathetic (for it will be remembered that not one of the poets represented belonged to any of the communions generally regarded as orthodox). And it should be followed by other volumes in which Bailey and others shall examine the contribution of all the modern poets in the chief languages to the great problems which have baffled alike the poet of Job and the author of In Memoriam.

Books and Magazine Articles

In Science for June 9 Vice-Dean William H. Chandler, of the College of Agriculture, writes on "Doctorates in Agriculture." In the issue for June 16 Dr. David Starr Jordan '72 discusses "The Origin of Species." Dean John F. Hayford '89 reviews William Bowie, "Geodetic Operations in the United States, January 1, 1912, to December 31, 1921."

In The Journal of Forestry for April Professor Arthur B. Recknagel discusses "The Standard Graph as a Means of Regulating the Cut in the Selection Forest."

Furman L. Mulford '92 has lately published a small treatise on "Trees for Town and City Streets." It is an illustrated pamphlet of forty pages and forms Farmers' Bulletin No. 1208 of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, from which it may be procured.

Dr. Robert P. Sibley, of the College of Agriculture, in The Educational Review for June, under the title of "In Loco Parentis?" discusses the relation of professors and students.

A new work entitled "Our Old World Background" by Professors Charles A. Beard and William C. Bagley, Ph.D. '00, of Teachers College, has lately been published by the Macmillans. Its main thesis is that European influence on America did not cease with 1492.

In The American Economic Review for June Dr. John R. Turner's "Ricardian Theory of Rent" is reviewed by Dr. Clyde O. Fisher, Ph.D. '19, of Wesleyan. Miss Hazard's "Organization of the Boot and Shoe Industry in Massachusetts Before 1875" is reviewed by Isaac Lippincott. Professor James E. Boyle's "Rural Problems in the United States" is reviewed by George M. Janes. Dr. George P. Watkins '99, of Washington, reviews "Income in the United States: Its Amount and Distribution, 1609-1919," volume i, summary, by Wesley C. Mitchell and the elementary staff of the National Bureau of Economic Research, Inc. Professor Rasmus S. Saby contributes abstracts of articles in Danish and Swedish periodicals.

In The Engineering News-Record for June 15 Frederick W. Kelley '93 writes on "Solving Problems of the Portland Cement Industry." He is chairman of the committee on technical problems of the Portland Cement Association."

A revised edition of "A System of Farm Accounting" by Professor Carl E. Ladd '12 has just been published under the editorship of J. S. Ball. It contains 23 pages and forms Farmers' Bulletin No. 572 of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

In the May number of Asia Miss Gertrude Emerson, daughter of Former Professor and Mrs. Alfred Emerson, writes on "Gandhi, Religious Politician." In the June number she discusses conditions in India under the title, "Raw Material for an Indian Nation."

In The Outlook for June 7 a correspondent signing himself X., whom we suspect to be a member of our Faculty, asserts that "Podunk Is," thereby restoring to the map, as it were, our neighboring hamlet, which boasts not only of having contributed a useful name to the dictionary but also of the first oldest temperance society in the United States and also of the fact that here was coined the word "picnic" in connection with the social gathering of its first Sunday School.

In The Philosophical Review for May Professor William K. Wright, of Dartmouth, formerly of Cornell, writes on "Situations and Experience." "The Reign of Relativity" by Viscount Haldane is reviewed by Professor James E. Creighton, Ph.D. '92. Professor Frank Thilly reviews "An Introduction to Philosophy" by Wilhelm Windelband, translated by Joseph McCabe; "Freedom and Liberty" by William Benett; "Der kategorische Imperativ," second edition, by Ernst Marcus; and "La Théorie de la Certitude dans Newman" by C. Bonnegent. Professor Ernest Albee, Ph.D. '94, reviews "The Philosophical Writings of Richard Burthogge," edited by Margaret W. Landes. Dr. Delton T. Howard, Ph.D. '16, reviews "A Study of the Theory of Value" by David Wight Prall, '11-12 Grad., of the University of California.

SPORT STUFF

It was a good reunion and the first of many better ones. It was less like the general run of former reunions and in spirit was more like the semi-centennial of 1919. Most of the time folks laughed, but there were moments out there on the quadrangle under the stars when other emotions were stirred and hard boiled grads failed pitifully in their efforts to conceal the tears.

There weren't nearly enough matches and it became difficult at times to replenish supplies of Camels and Bull Durham. Otherwise Foster Coffin and the University staff crashed through handsomely in providing for all the creature comforts and keeping the machinery noiseless.

Every veteran I saw—and I saw a lot of them—swore he was coming back next June whether or not his class was holding a reunion. You can discount a lot of that for exaltation of soul but even so the frame of mind is a gratifying one.

And Commencement, too, was a happy occasion. It looks as tho the lubricating system was functioning pretty well throughout the entire machine.

ATHLETICS

Alumni Team Wins

Coming up from behind in the fifth inning, the Alumni baseball team sent the Varsity down to defeat on the new baseball field last Friday afternoon by a score of 6 to 4. N. I. Brookmire '19, who pitched for the old grads, had a little difficulty in settling down to business, with the result that in the first inning the Varsity got away to a lead, but after that frame Brookmire had them eating out of his hand and nary another Varsity player crossed the plate.

The grads sent Wolff who started on the mound for the Varsity, to the woods in the second inning, hitting him safely four times in two frames. Schreiner, who succeeded Wolff, pitched fairly effectively but was given poor support. The Alumni got four hits off him in seven innings. Brookmire gave but six hits in all and allowed but one base on balls. His underhanded ball had all of the Varsity guessing and he fanned seven men.

The alumni team batted as follows: J. R. Donovan '15, third base, H. P. Murphy '20, third base, L. A. Corwin '19, second base, G. E. Cross '19, left field, P. A. Eckley '17, short stop, Clyde Mayer '21, center field, F. J. Clary '17, catcher, H. H. Fritz '19, right field, N. I. Brookmire '19, pitcher, Chandler Burpee '17, right field. C. V. P. Young '99, who hasn't missed an alumni game since he graduated, did not play as a regular, but got into the game in the ninth as a pinch hitter for Mayer.

The Alumni broke the ice in the first. Donovan was hit by a pitched ball, was advanced to second on a base on balls to Murphy, and scored on Corwin's single. The Varsity came back in their half of this inning, scoring four runs. Woodin walked and stole second. Capron singled and Fox beat out a bunt. Davies cleaned the bases with a triple and then scored on a squeeze play, Cowan laying down a pretty bunt.

In the second inning the Alumni scored two runs. Clary tripled and scored on Fritz's single. The latter advanced to second on a base on balls and scored on Donovan's single. In the fifth three varsity errors gave the grads another run, and in the sixth two bases on balls, a single by Murphy and a sacrifice by Eckley contributed two more runs and victory.

Frank Clary, ex-varsity catcher, starred at the bat, rapping out a triple and a double.

James J. H. (Jimmie) Hardin, all dolled up in the regulation blue, officiated as umpire and despite considerable razzing he lasted the full nine innings. The box score:

Varsity Beats Dartmouth

The varsity won the final game of the season Monday, defeating Dartmouth at Hanover by a score of 4 to 3. Cornell had one big inning the sixth, when a double by Rollo, a triple by Davies, Woodin's single and two bases on balls gave the Red and White four runs, enough, as it turned out, to win.

Dartmouth started with a rush scoring twice in the first inning. Smith walked and Caswell beat out a bunt. Thurston then hit to deep center scoring both runners. In the fifth Tracey singled, was advanced by a base on balls and scored on a single.

Both Rollo and Tracey pitched good ball, the Dartmouth pitcher allowing five hits to seven off Rollo. Sharp fielding behind Rollo cut off several Dartmouth rallies.

The game was called at the end of eight and a half innings to allow Cornell to catch a train.

Penn Victor on Alumni Day

The Varsity lost to Penn 4 to 1 last Saturday in the last game of the home season. The Quakers thus made a clean sweep of a two game series having won the Memorial Day game at Philadelphia. Penn gave Huntzinger effective support and played sharper baseball than Cornell.

Although Maloney, who pitched for the Varsity, allowed but five hits to eight secured by the home team off Huntzinger, the latter was much steadier and more effective in pinches. He gave but two bases on balls to six for Maloney. The latter blew up in the seventh forcing two runs across the plate. In the third Cornell twice had the bases full, but scored only one run.

INTERCOLLEGIATE NOTES

CORNELL placed men in more events in the recent Intercollegiate Track Championship than any other team entered. Cornell's summary of points was made up from ten out of the fifteen events. California, winner of the meet, placed men in but nine events; whereas Princeton, which took second place, scored in six events.

CHARLES P. ALEXANDER, Ph.D. '18, formerly instructor of entomology at the University, has been elected assistant professor of entomology at the Massachusetts Agricultural College. Dr. Alexander's work in systematic entomology, particularly on the flies, is recognized as authoritative both in this country and in Europe.

A TENNIS TEAM made up of members of the Faculty got an even break in their second meet with the Binghamton Tennis Club, playing on the Binghamton courts. In a previous contest this year, played on Ithaca courts, the Faculty took all but one match of singles from the Binghamtonians. The Faculty team is composed of Messrs. James R. Wilson, Charles V. P. Young, Lewis Knudson, M. P. Moon, J. E. Reyna, M. L. Nichols, H. C. Curran, and D. R. Maynard.

Books and Magazine Articles

In The Cornell Countryman for June Professor Ralph S. Hosmer gives some "Random Reminiscences of a Period of Sabbatic Leave," consisting of notes of travel in and about the forests of France and Northern Europe. The article is illustrated by photographs taken by the author. Vice-Director William H. Chandler discusses "Research in the College of Agriculture." Professor Alma L. Binzel demands "A Square Deal for the Parent." There is good poetry by Professor Bristow Adams ("Gold"), Philip C. Wakeley '23 ("The Plough Boy"), M. E. Hill '25 ("Amelanchier"), Charles M. Stotz '21 ("Buttermilk Falls"), David W. Kimball '24 ("Plough Boy") George R. Van Allen '18 ("Row after row they turn the field"), and James H. Gilkey, a clerk in the business office of the College of Agriculture ("From Sod—to God").

In The New York Times for June 11 "Bennett Malin," the new novel by Elsie Singmaster '02, is favorably reviewed.

The Philippine Journal of Science for December last included an article on "The Dissociation of Hexaphenylethane from the Viewpoint of the Octet Theory of Valence" by Howard Irving Cole, Ph.D. '17. In the January issue he wrote on "The Identification of Ambergris."

In The American Journal of Diseases for Children for August last Dr. Gustave J. Noback, associate professor of anatomy in the Medical College of Virginia, Richmond, published "A Contribution to the Topographic Anatomy of the Thymus Gland with Particular Reference to the Changes at Birth and in the Period of the Newborn." In The Anatomical Record for April Dr. Noback published "Simple Methods of Correlating Crown-Rump and Crown-Heel Lengths of the Human Fetus."

An address by Professor Henry H. Foster '98, of the University of Nebraska Law School, on "Pitfalls in the Property Law of Nebraska" has lately been published in the Proceedings of the Nebraska State Bar Association for 1921.

An article on "Recent Developments in the Chemistry of Rubber" by William C. Geer '02 appears in The Journal of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry for May. It has been reprinted in pamphlet form in an octavo of fifteen pages. There are about ten million automobiles now in the United States and about twenty-four million homes. The optimistic rubber man looks forward, therefore, to a good market for tires.

PROFESSOR WALLACE NOTESTEIN will sail on June 24 from Montreal for England, where he will spend next year in study and research on a leave of absence from the University.
