WORKMEN of the Department of Buildings and Grounds in mid-March removed the top-most peak of Sage Tower with its four small windows, which had been a distinctive landmark on the Campus since the building went up in 1873. This was the first exterior sign of the extensive remodelling of the old dormitory which has been authorized by the Board of Trustees to prepare it again to house women students. Our cover picture, taken for the News by Fred W. Klotzman '51, shows the flat-topped tower that remains. For more on the remodelling, see page 387.

President Emeritus Edmund E. Day Stricken Suddenly in Ithaca

SAGE CHAPEL was banked with flowers and filled to the doors, March 26, in solemn tribute to the University's fifth President, Edmund E. Day, who had died suddenly of a heart attack, March 23, at the age of sixty-seven. Before eight o'clock that morning, he had set out from the new home on Cornell Heights with his daughter, Martha Elizabeth Day, and was driving his car on Hanshaw Road, just east of the Campus, when he was stricken.

The evening before, the President Emeritus had attended a ninetieth-birthday dinner in Statler Hall for Professor Walter F. Willcox, and during that day had visited his former offices in the Administration Building, seeming in good health and the best of spirits. He had come back to Ithaca on the sleeper the night of March 20 from a two-day conference in Washington, D.C., of the American Council on Education. He had suggested this conference to consider problems of accelerating education to meet emergency conditions, and presided at discussions attended by some 300 representatives of colleges and universities and educational organizations. The conference agreed on the need of an extensive "re-examination of the present content, length, and articulation of elementary, secondary, and higher education" to be undertaken by the American Council. Before he left Washington, President Day by telephone made initial proposals to foundations there for financial support of this study.

Active in Retirement

Since he resigned as Chancellor of the University, January 31, 1950, President Day had been consultant on general education to the State University of New York; was elected a trustee of Vassar College in May, 1950; had been a councillor of the National Industrial Conference Board since 1939; and had continued his national leadership in matters of education. When he resigned the Presidency, July 1, 1949, after twelve years as head of the University, he remarked that he had "joined the coronary club a couple of years ago" and must slacken his pace. He had travelled some 36,000 miles and made countless ad-resses to alumni groups and others in the interests of the Greater Cornell Fund to raise $12,500,000 for the University; had met the many problems of increased enrolment, training, and financing occasioned by the war; and had overseen unprecedented expansion of the University's physical plant.

University Grew Mightily

During his Presidency, the State School of Industrial & Labor Relations was established here and the University acquired the Aeronautical Laboratory in Buffalo and organized the School of Nutrition, School of Business & Public Administration, Graduate School of Aeronautical Engineering, and Laboratory of Nuclear Studies, with gift of its building from Floyd R. Newman '12. Among the new buildings erected are Moore Hall for the Veterinary College, Olin Hall of Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering, Clara Dickson Hall, Savage Hall, the Administration Building, new service buildings and housing for Faculty and veterans, and temporary classroom and laboratory buildings. In his administration, also, arrangements were made for the Albert R. Mann Library for Agriculture and Home Economics, and Anabel Taylor Hall, now under construction; for the projected Men's Sports Building, Electrical Engineering Building, and the Materials and Processing Laboratories for the College of Engineering; and for the future relocation of the Veterinary College and construction for Industrial & Labor Relations on its site, and several additional buildings for the College of Agriculture.

President Day was a member of the State commission which recommended the establishment of the School of Industrial & Labor Relations and of the temporary commission appointed by the Governor to study the need of a State University in New York. He was chairman of the board of trustees of Associated Colleges of Upper New York; president of the State Citizens Council, Association of Land Grant Colleges & Universities, and World Student Service Fund; a member of the Educational Policies Commission, chairman of the American Council on Education, and a director of the National Bureau of Economic Research and of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

Graduate of Dartmouth in 1905, he was a member of Theta Delta Chi and Phi Beta Kappa. He received the MA at Dartmouth in 1906 and the PhD at Harvard in 1909 and taught economics at Harvard for thirteen years. In 1923, he went to University of Michigan and there organized and was the first dean of the school of business administration, becoming later dean of the University. After a year with the Laura Spellman Rockefeller Memorial in New York City, in 1929 he joined the Rockefeller Foundation as director for the social sciences, and from 1930 until he became President of Cornell in 1937, he was also director of general education for the General Education Board.

The New York Herald Tribune summarized his standing as a leader in education in the following editorial:

Education has lost one of its great personalities in the death of Dr. Edmund Ezra Day, who had recently retired as president of Cornell University. It is not only on the Cornell campus or among the far-flung alumni group that Dr. Day's loss will be felt. The warmth, humor and friendliness which characterized his relationship with all who knew him remain in memory.

His great administrative ability has left such landmarks as the University of Michigan's School of Business Administration, which he organized and whose first dean he became; the studies of social sciences which he directed for the Rockefeller Foundation; his work for the State University of New York; the National Science Foundation projected by a committee of which he was chairman. The growth and development of Cornell

PRESIDENT EDMUND E. DAY

University during the dozen years he devoted to it as president and chancellor are an enduring tribute to his energy, vision and the liberal tradition which he fostered. On a host of public service assignments, Dr. Day brought wisdom and a great capacity for understanding economic and human problems.

It was not alone the development of university education which challenged Dr. Day's interest. He recognized the need to lengthen formal schooling for our young people and the necessity to provide better vocational education in order to strengthen youth's concern with the maintenance of our democratic way. He believed that there should be many different kinds of educational programs to provide the best opportunities for meeting individual needs and utilizing the abilities of all, in training citizens worthy of a free society.

Dr. Day envisaged and worked for a system which would permit young people to continue their education, whether academic or technical or professional, until a time when they could reasonably expect to see their skilled capacities put to work. He believed that only on such a basis would American public education meet its fundamental and continuing obligations to American democracy.

Members of the University Board of Trustees; presidents of numerous colleges and universities; heads of many educational, business, and professional organizations; public leaders; and Cornellians from all over the country paid tribute to President Day by attending the funeral services and in messages of condolence to his family and the University. Cornell Club of Milwaukee, Wis., through its president, Carl C. Joys III '39, has sent a contribution of $100 to the Alumni Fund in memory of President Day, "instead of flowers," and hopes to increase the gift to "at least $1000." Funeral service was conducted by the Rev. Vivian T. Pomeroy, pastor of the First Parish, Milton, Mass., who has come to the Campus each year since 1943 as a Sage Chapel preacher and was a personal friend of the President.

Just a month earlier, President and Mrs. Day and Miss Day had moved from the President's House to a home which had been purchased and remodelled for their occupancy with gifts made for the purpose to the University by their friends of the Board of Trustees. The address there is Highgate Road, RD 1, Ithaca. Besides their daughter at home, the other children are Dr. Emerson Day, Professor of Public Health & Preventive Medicine at the Medical College in New York; Mrs. Frederick C. Copeland of Williamstown, Mass.; and David C. Day '45, graduate instructor in engineering at the University of Illinois, Urbana.

FOLLOWING THE STARS OF OTHER YEARS

By ROBERT J. KANE '34, DIRECTOR OF ATHLETICS

2.—Courage: On the Field and in the Crescent

IN THIS JOB, one becomes very sensitive to the manifestations of courage. It is a quality found in great abundance in the young men who frequent the halls of Schoellkopf, but one which never fails to refresh the spirit and stimulate the intellect of those of us who see it and stand in continuous admiration of it.

There was the well-remembered demonstration of spirit in the 1949 Pennsylvania football game when a seemingly hopelessly-beaten Cornell team assimilated a spark at half-time which made it invincible for the rest of the game. And characteristic of the team performance was that of its quarterback, little Pete Dorset, who broke his nose in the discouraging first half, didn't even take time out, and played the best football of his life in that delightful second half.

There were those similarly-achieved Dartmouth victories in 1926 and 1948 when resurgent Cornell teams came from behind with a tremendous lift and won out in the closing moments, the winning margin provided in both instances by place kicks: "June" Carey's field goal in 1926, making it 24-23, with seconds to go; Bob Dean's point after touchdown in 1948 with 2 minutes, 40 seconds to go, bringing the score to 27-26 for Cornell.

Of course there are many, many football stories of this nature because football demands courage of its participants at all times. But all sports have their fearless heroes: David "Spike" Sisson at West Point in 1942, for instance, in a nightmarish hockey game which matched an out-manned, out-conditioned, and out-experienced Cornell team against a very tough Army six. During the first period Spike Sisson, virtually lone-handed, kept Cornell in the game. When it became evident to Army that all it had to do to stop Cornell was to stop Sisson, its defense concentrated on him, employing all the horrendous devices permissible in hockey but which comprise assault and battery under any other circumstances. The rest of our team couldn't skate, but they sure could fight! So it got to be quite a Donnybrook. But Sisson could fight and play hockey, too, and the embattled Cornell team was doing all right. Finally, the Army captain called time-out and in a huddle with the officials the two captains declared a truce. Playing according to the rules reduced the odds, but Sisson continued his superb and inspired work and Cornell won out, 8-6. I was undoubtedly the only Cornell partisan there, but everyone in that audience stood up and cheered a fearless and completely exhausted Cornell team as it left the ice.

There are stories enough of the athletes in school now to fill a book. Every time Charley Moore runs a race, Bobby Gaige plays football, and Frank Bettucci wrestles, you see raw courage at work.

But in my experience, they all compare as pale and insignificant to one manifestation of God's favorite attribute I shall never forget. It happened at the 1949 Columbia football game in Ithaca, but the drama took place in the stadium and the players in it were spectators at the game. Quite unexpectedly, the game started off like a real battle and excitement was rife as inspired Columbia fought off a favored Cornell team. The President of the University, Dr. Edmund Ezra Day, was at his usual place in the colonnades of the Crescent and as usual he was pacing back and forth, playing every play, living the game. He loved football. It appealed to his strong, vibrant, forthright personality. He never compromised his principles or Cornell's for football, but no one enjoyed winning more than he or suffered so much when we lost.

So on this bright October day, with just a few minutes to go for the half, Pete Dorset threw a long, accurate pass to Harry Cassel which brought the ball down near the Columbia goal line. The crowd rose to its feet with a roar. The President shouted "Who caught that?" "Cassel" was the reply. The President moved into his box to get a better look. As he did so, he dropped down hard to the seat under him, his head falling to his chest, his body slumping ominously to one side. As a horrified witness I was struck completely immobile, inept and tongue-tied for what seemed to be an eternity, and then managed to cry out for Dr. Norman Moore who by divine chance was just a few feet away. Dr. Moore, without a word or a wasted motion, worked vigorously and with a practiced hand for some minutes until, almost magically, a pulse which had disappeared for some thirty seconds started functioning again, the President's eyes opened, and the coloration returned to his face.

The President straightened himself in his chair, almost instantly regained his composure and with that familiar little chuckle exclaimed, "Well, that was a funny thing, wasn't it? Am I all right now, Norm?"

"You are all right. Just sit quiet for a few minutes."

"Where's my hat?" he asked as he looked around for the hat which had dropped to the floor of his box.

After a few minutes, Dr. Moore suggested that he leave for home. I offered to drive him and Dr. Moore because my car was closest to the entrance. As he arose from his chair, he carefully arranged his tie, adjusted his hat at a rakish angle, called out, "Well, gentlemen, let's go." I reached for his arm. "Here, here, young fellow, I need no help," he said, pushing my hand away. "I'll walk under my own power." With his head in the air, a smile on his face, and some bantering remarks to friends on the way, he actually strutted out of the stadium. As he rounded the corner near Barton Hall, there was a tremendous clamor from the football field. "What was that?" asked the President. "Stop by that police car and find out what happened." "Cornell scored again on an intercepted pass," shouted the cop. "Well, I feel better. I guess we'll win now." As he alighted from my car at his home, with a sly glance at Dr. Moore, he said: "Dr. Moore tells me that was my last football game, Bob. I'm glad it was a good one. Many thanks for the ride."

That was his last football game. Two months later he expressed his wish to retire with a typical flippancy that he had "joined the coronary club." Continuing active and vigorous right up until the moment of his death last Friday, he lived a full and productive life and Cornell was a beneficiary. So were all of us who had the privilege of working for him. He was a man of magnificent courage.

Discuss College Phases

QUARTERLY of the American College Public Relations Association for January reprints "The Alumneurosis" by Romeyn Berry '04, which appeared in several Ivy League football programs last fall. In the same issue, George F. Zook, PhD '14, writes on "The Challenge of the Future" for American higher education. Whitman Daniels, recently assistant to the President of the University, discusses "The Crisis in the College Fraternity."

Penn State Club Elects

CORNELL CLUB of Penn State met for its annual meeting and election of officers, March 29, at Nittany Lion Inn in State College, with forty-five attending. Dean E. Lee Vincent, Home Economics, spoke on "Current Events at Cornell." Assistant Alumni Secretary Pauline J. Schmid '25 spoke briefly.

Russell C. Miller, PhD '25, was elected president of the Club; Edwin J. Anderson, MS '25, vice-president; and Mrs. Francena Lownsbery Nolan '42, secretary-treasurer. Chairman of the committee and pianist at dinner was Leland S. Rhodes '11. Dean Vincent and Miss Schmid were entertained at tea at the Penn State school of home economics.

Four Candidates Nominated For Election of Two Alumni Trustees

SOME 49,000 ALUMNI who hold degrees from the University are being mailed official ballots for the annual election of Alumni Trustees. Four candidates are nominated, two to be elected for five-year terms, succeeding Edward E. Goodwillie '10 and Victor L. Butterfield '27, whose terms expire June 30.

Ballots must be returned, in envelopes provided, to the University Treasurer not later than noon, June 4. Result of the election will be announced at the annual meeting of the Alumni Association in Ithaca during Class Reunions, June 8. To be elected, a candidate must receive at least one-third of the total votes cast. The two elected will take office on the Board of Trustees, July 1. Any degree holder who does not receive an official ballot may obtain one from the Treasurer of the University.

Committee Recommends Candidates

The four candidates this year are all recommended by the Alumni Association standing committee on Alumni Trustee nominations. Conceived in 1942, this committee is charged with "the duty of stimulating interest in Alumni Trustee nominations through the various alumni groups without, however, interfering with the election procedures prescribed by the University Charter." It ascertains each year the particular qualifications of Trustees needed on the Board, invites suggestions from all alumni organizations, and arranges for the candidates it finds to be specially qualified to become nominees for Alumni Trustees. Purpose was to foster election of Alumni Trustees who would represent all alumni interests and be best qualified to serve the University; and by establishing procedures for informing voters of the qualifications of all candidates, to eliminate election campaigns. The committee is composed of one representative from each alumni organization and an incumbent Alumni Trustee.

Candidates were nominated, as provided in the University Charter, by ten or more degree holders filing nominations for each with the Treasurer on or before April 1.

President Urges Balloting

A folder accompanying the ballots contains pictures and biographies of the candidates, together with messages to voters from the president of the Alumni Association and the chairman of the committee on Alumni Trustee nominations. Harry V. Wade '26, president of the Association, says:

Enclosed with this announcement is a ballot to be used by you as Cornell alumni in electing your representatives on the University's Board of Trustees. I strongly urge you to use it. As educated men and women, it is your duty to exercise your suffrage on important matters such as voting for Trustees of an institution of Cornell's standing.

Don't let your lack of acquaintance with the candidates keep you from voting. All of them are fine outstanding Cornellians. Read the biographical information, then vote for any two of them. You, or more important still, Cornell, can't lose regardless of the results of the election, but it is your job to vote. So discharge that obligation right now.

Don't complain about the death of free institutions if you aren't willing to take the small amount of trouble to vote for the Trustees of one of America's great bulwarks of freedom: Cornell University.

Let's have a record vote this year to show our new President-elect, Deane W. Malott, that we have a University in which the alumni are deeply interested.

Vote today! Don't put it off; June will be here before you know it.

Describes Committee Findings

Birge W. Kinne '16, chairman of the committee on Alumni Trustee nominations, has this message:

In arriving at its recommendations for this year's election, the first step taken by your Committee was to confer with present members of the Board. From them, we secured information as to which types of experience would be most helpful in the Board's operations during the next five years. After this information was studied, it became clear that experience in four specific fields of endeavor was needed most, namely:

- A. Business and Finance
- B. Education
- C. Engineering (Executive)
- D. Public Relations

All four of these categories are, of course, important. Unquestionably, in running an institution of the size and preeminence of Cornell, the guidance of a business and financial specialist experienced in today's manifold economic problems is extremely desirable. Likewise, it is quite obvious that a person whose life has been spent in the field of education can bring to the Board a very valuable point of view. And, with new buildings planned to be added to an already extensive plant operation, more engineering counsel and help are definitely needed. Also, with the growing importance of its relations with the public, as well as its alumni, Faculty, and students, experience in this field of public relations can be more than helpful in the years ahead.

As might well be expected, there were a number of outstanding alumni in each of these groups whose names had been suggested to your Committee as possible candidates for Alumni Trustee. It became our task to review thoroughly the qualifications of each. This was done and, after months of painstaking effort, our selections were made. Each of the four persons agreed upon was then approached, and each one indicated his willingness, if elected, to serve with a full realization of the responsibilities of Alumni Trusteeship.

Your Committee is pleased to recommend to you as candidates these four alumni whose training, experience, and abilities so well suit the present needs of the Board and the University.

Members of the committee on Alumni Trustee nominations this year, besides Kinne, from the Agriculture Alumni Association, are Dr. Preston A. Wade '22, Alumni Trustees; H. Cushman Bal-lou '20, Association of Class Secretaries; Marjory A. Rice '29, Federation of Cornell Women's Clubs; R. Harris Cobb '16, Federation of Cornell Men's Clubs; Frederic C. Wood '24, directors of the Alumni Association; William M. Van-neman '31, Alumni Fund Council; Irvin L. Scott '23, Architecture Alumni Asso-ciation; William M. Reck '14, Society of Engineers; Mrs. John Vandervort (Helen Bull) '26, Home Economics Al-umnæ Association; Henry B. Williams '30, Society of Hotelmen; Frank B. In-gersoll '17, Law Association; Dr. Wade Duley '23, Medical College Alumni As-sociation; Dr. George H. Hopson '28, Veterinary College Alumni Association.

The committee's recommendation of each of the four candidates follows the picture and account of the activities of each.

Mrs. John W. Arnold '18

Mrs. John W. Arnold (Dorothy McSparran) '18 is assistant professor of English and dean of women in Washington Square College of Arts and Sciences, New York University. She is a member of faculty committees on curriculum and standards, chairman of the committee on the University Commons and a member of the residence committee, faculty adviser to Pan Hellenic, and chairman of the board of control for women's athletics. Elected to Phi Beta Kappa as a Senior at Cornell, she is a past-president of the chapter at Washington Square College.

Mrs. Arnold entered Arts and Sciences in 1914 from Perkiomen Seminary, Pennsburg, Pa., and received the AB in 1918. She studied at Yale, taught English at Bryn Mawr and the Universities of Illinois and Minnesota, and in 1923 was awarded the Bennett Fellowship at University of Pennsylvania. She was a director of the Cornell Alumni Association from 1944-48; from 1946-48 was second vice-president. Former vice-president, acting president, and now a director of the Cornell Women's Club of New York, she represented the Fed-eration of Cornell Women's Club on the Alumni Association committee on Alumni Trust-tee nominations from 1948-50.

A former president of the Zonta Club of New York, for eight years she was chairman of a Zonta International committee which established and awards the Amelia Earhart Scholarship in Aeronautical Engineering. During the war, she was official adviser to the New York chapter of the American Red Cross on collegiate units; is a director of the Judson Health Center.

In 1924, she was married to John W. Arnold, graduate of the University of Illinois now a communications engineer with National Scientific Laboratories, Washington, D.C. Mrs. Arnold's sister is Mrs. Ruth McSparran Abrom '20 of Allentown, Pa. The committee on Alumni Trustee nominations recommends Mrs. Arnold with this statement:

"Experienced as a teacher and administra-tor, she has an expert knowledge of the prob-lems of education, which would make her an able member of the Board of Trustees. She is a leader of unusual ability with many cultur-al, social, and community interests. An inter-ested and active Cornellian throughout the years, she has already demonstrated how valu-able her knowledge and experience can be to Cornell. She has enthusiasm, a delightful sense of humor, a genuine interest in people, and that rare ability to see other points of view: qualities admired by both men and women."

H. Victor Grohmann '28

H. Victor Grohmann '28 is president of Needham & Grohmann, Inc., advertising agency with offices in New York City, which he founded in 1931 with the late William R. Needham '25. The firm acts as advisory counsel on public relations to the School of Hotel Administration, and Grohmann has for many years given lectures and a summer course at the School on hotel advertising and promo-tion.

Grohmann has been since 1940 the Class of '28 Alumni Fund representative, was for three years a member of the executive committee of the Alumni Fund Council, served on committees for the Greater Cornell Fund campaign, and is a member of the Cornell University Council. Since 1939, he has been chairman of the placement committee of the Society of Hotelmen and was president of the Society for two terms, 1942-44. For twenty years, his firm has given an annual Needham & Grohmann Scholarship for Hotel Administration, and Grohmann established in 1949 and annually contributes to the Victor Groh-mann Endowment Fund for the Christian Science Organization connected with CURW.

He was appointed to the Alumni Associa-tion committee on Alumni Trustee nomina-tions when it was organized in 1942, and was its chairman for three years, from 1945-48. He was a founder of the Cornell Club of Ber-gen County, N.J., in 1946, and its first presi-dent, serving for two years; is president of the Cornell Interfraternity Alumni Associa-tion; a director of the Phi Gamma Delta As-sociation; and treasurer of the Class of '28.

Grohmann entered Agriculture in 1923 from Rutgers, transferred to Hotel Adminis-tration, and received the BS in 1928. He was on the football squad and captain of the Hotel swimming team; was a Varsity cheer-leader as a Senior; vice-president of the Hotel Association; and a cadet officer in the ROTC, member of Scabbard & Blade and the Officers Club and of Sphinx Head. He lives in Tenafly, N.J., where he is president of the Com-munity Chest, and owns and operates a dairy farm in Sussex County, N.J. Recommending Grohmann, the committee on Alumni Trustee nominations says:

"His exceptional record of achievement, his remarkable faculty for getting things done, his long relationship with all phases of Uni-versity activity, and his great love and loyalty for Cornell would make him a helpful mem-ber of the Board of Trustees. Of particular value would be his experience and guidance on the important aspects of public relations and fund raising. A man possessing dynamic qualities of leadership and organization, a man of recognized talents and sterling char-acter, he has the ability, enthusiasm, and stature to become an excellent working Trustee."

William H. Hill '22

William H. Hill '22 is president of Bald-win-Hill Co., manufacturers of thermal insu-lations, with main plant in Trenton, N.J., and subsidiaries the Therminul Corp. of Kala-mazoo, Mich.; Western Rock Wool Corp., Huntington, Ind.; and Marine Manufactur-ing & Supply Co., New Brunswick, N.J. Hill organized the parent company in 1935 with Frank C. Baldwin '22, Dean of Men.

Hill entered Sibley College in 1917 from Hopewell, N.J., High School. He was in the Marine Corps in 1918-19 and received the ME in 1922. He played Freshman baseball.

He was secretary-treasurer of the Cornell Club of Plainfield, N.J., from 1930-34, and served two terms as president of the Cornell Club of Trenton, N.J., 1938-40. He has been active in the secondary schools work of the Club, bringing boys to several Cornell Days, and since 1942 has been chairman of the New Jersey alumni committee to interview candidates for the McMullen Regional Scholarships in Engineering and recently for the National Scholarships. He was an organizer and vice-chairman of the New Jersey chapter of the Cornell Society of Engineers and was its chairman in 1942-43 and for six years a member of the executive committee of the Society. He was a member of the executive committee of the Federation of Cornell Men's Clubs and last fall was elected vice-president. He was co-chairman of the Greater Cornell Fund campaign in Trenton; is a director of Trenton Banking Co., Trenton YMCA, and Trenton United Fund.

A member of Phi Kappa Psi, Hill is a director of the Interfraternity Alumni Association. Mrs. Hill was May Thropp '20, formerly a member of the New Jersey State Assembly. Their daughter is Barbara T. Hill '52. Committee on Alumni Trustee nominations says:

"Hill represents the qualities of ability, integrity, and vision that Cornell needs in an Alumni Trustee. Eminently successful in his business and community activities, one of the most public-spirited citizens anywhere he operates, Hill is also one of Cornell's most tireless workers, with an excellent knowledge of University affairs. Hill's practical business experience, his ability to organize, his great interest in Cornell, would bring to the Board a hard-working, able, and particularly useful member to fulfill its expressed need for an engineer with a business background."

Reese H. Taylor '22

Reese H. Taylor '22 is president of Union Oil Co. of California, with offices in Los Angeles. Son of the late Waller Taylor '95, he entered Sibley College in December, 1918, after service in the SATC at California. In 1920, he transferred to University of California and received the AB there in 1922.

He became superintendent of Llewellyn Iron Works in 1924 and was a director until 1929, when he went to Consolidated Steel Corp. as production manager. There he became successively vice-president, executive vice-president, and was president from 1934 until 1938, when he became president and a director of the Union Oil Co. and its subsidiaries. business functions," which Taylor instituted.

Taylor was chairman of the special gifts committee for Southern California in the Greater Cornell fund campaign, and is a member of the University Council. He is a member of Zeta Psi. Recommending him as a candidate, the committee on Alumni Trustee nominations says:

"Reese Taylor is at the peak of a brilliant business and public career. Experienced in both technical and financial fields, he has also maintained broad cultural interests. He has an enviable record in both fields and as a member of the Public Policy Committee of the Advertising Council has taken a key part in national programs in the public interest. His varied talents and his past and present activities in behalf of Cornell would make him a valued counselor on the Board of Trustees and an outstanding representative of our Western States."

Brewer '40 Directs Alumni Office Field Secretary is Krieger '49

R. SELDEN BREWER '40 became April 1 General Alumni Secretary of the University. He was appointed by the Trustees at recommendation of the directors of the Alumni Association, to succeed Emmet J. Murphy '22, who resigned to become assistant to the president of The College of St. Thomas in St. Paul, Minn.

As Assistant Alumni Secretary and Alumni Field Secretary since July 1, 1946, Brewer has directed arrangements for Class Reunions and Cornell Day and worked with Cornell Clubs and assisted with Class activities and reorganizations. Anabel Taylor Hall Goes Up PICTURE on this page shows progress being made in erection of Anabel Taylor Hall, for which Trustee Myron C. Taylor '94 gave $1,921,000 to the Greater Cornell Fund for an Interfaith Center and World War II Memorial, named for Mrs. Taylor.

The steel framework now outlines the form of the building. The wing at left in the picture will be a high-vaulted chapel seating 144 persons. Into it will come music from an organ placed in the central tower. This organ is the gift of Jacob P. Estey, in memory of his son, Jacob Estey '46, who was called to the Army as a Freshman and was lost at sea, March 13, 1945, in an accident to his troop ship.

Principal entrance will be in the base of the tower, to a memorial foyer where the names of Cornellians who gave their lives in World War II will be inscribed. The wing at right will have on its first floor the Founder's Lounge, where will be hung portraits of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor being painted for the building. In this wing also will be a library, CURW offices, a number of meeting rooms for students, and on the second floor, an auditorium seating 436 persons.

Next floor below the street level, built into the westerly slope, will contain rooms for nine University pastors and denominational groups, a general activities room and kitchenette. Below that, opening to the west, will be a large social hall and kitchen. A stone-paved terrace will connect to the terrace from Myron Taylor Hall.

Principal architects for Anabel Taylor

Hall are the firm of Starrett, Van Vleck & Marsh, of which Ernest A. Van Vleck '97 is a founder and which includes also Reginald E. Marsh '06 and Ernest Brooks '03. Structural engineers are the firm of Seelye, Stevenson & Value, which includes Elwyn E. Seelye '04, Albert L. Stevenson '13, and Harold S. Woodward '22, with Norman E. Schlenker '37 their engineer-in-charge. Plans and specifications for heating, lighting, plumbing, and placing of elevators were done by the mechanical engineering firm of Cary, Jones & Miller, of which Edward B. Cary '20 and John Paul Jones '13 are members.

Library Gets Napoleonana

A VALUABLE COLLECTION dealing with Napoleon has been given to the University Library by the widow of the late Claude G. Leland '96, who died January 22, 1950, in New York City.

The 450 volumes and several hundred autographs and letters cover Napoleon's career from his first consulship until his exile. A number of the books are from Napoleon's private library. Library Director Stephen A. McCarthy says the gift is the most important addition on French history since President Andrew D. White gave his collection on the French Revolution in 1887.

Leland, a member of Delta Phi, was superintendent of school libraries for the New York City Board of Education for forty years until his retirement in 1943. His interest in French history was intensified when he served in France during World War I as a captain of Infantry. He was the brother of Lillian Leland, periodicals librarian at the University Library, and Emmons W. Leland '07, Agronomy; and of the late Guy H. Leland '07 and Roca G. Leland '11.

Quarry Operates Again

NATIVE STONE for the outer walls of Anabel Taylor Hall is being cut at the University quarry on the slope of Snyder Hill, four miles east of the Campus. The same stone was used for Myron Taylor Hall, Willard Straight Hall, Balch Halls, and the most recent of the men's dormitories; but the quarry had not been worked since because of the high cost of labor involved in getting out the stone and laying it up.

Last fall, however, the University leased the quarry to Ormsby Dolph, who has installed the most modern machinery to reduce greatly the cost of cutting and handling the stone. Power drills replace the old hand drilling and make smaller holes more quickly than before for the "plugs and feathers" which blow it loose. A huge hydraulic "guillotine" chops the back and end faces of the blocks to dimensions required, thus eliminating the need for much skilled and tedious trimming by stone masons as they lay them in the building.

Taylor '94 and named for Mrs. Taylor. The Gothic structure on Central Avenue at Campus Road will harmonize with and complement Myron Taylor Hall adjoining, which Taylor gave for the Law School in 1932. Fenner

Under the terms of the lease, the University has first option on the best quality stone required, at a fixed price above cost, and receives royalty on all other sales made from the quarry. A consultant in the quarry operation and sales is John J. D. McCormick '13, president of Longmeadow Brownstone Quarries in Holyoke, Mass.

Robert M. Mueller '41, Superintendent of Buildings & Grounds, says that some 900 tons of stone has been quarried this winter for Anabel Taylor Hall. He estimates that some five million tons can be gotten in the ninety-two acres of quarry site owned by the University, enough to last for forty generations of builders.

For Business Executives

CORNELLIANS who are executives or stockholders in business and industry will be interested in a brochure on "Corporations and Higher Education" which has been prepared by the Office of University Development. It sets forth succinctly and convincingly the "stake" that industry has in the adequate training of young men and women, and suggests four cogent reasons for directing support to Cornell.

The booklet includes pertinent statements from numerous business executives in support of its theme. Among those pictured and quoted are Neal D. Becker '05, president of Intertype Corp. and chairman of the University Board of Trustees; John L. Collyer '17, president, B. F. Goodrich Co.; Theodore P. Wright, Acting President of the University; Francis N. Bard '04, owner of Barco Manufacturing Co. who gave the Bard Professorship of Metallurgical Engineering; Floyd R. Newman '12, co-founder of Allied Oil Co. and donor of the Newman Laboratory of Nuclear Studies; John M. Olin '13 of Olin Industries, who spoke for his father, Franklin W. Olin '85, at dedication of Olin Hall; Walter C. Teagle '00, former chairman of Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey and donor of the Men's Sports Building; Nicholas H. Noyes '06, chairman of the finance committee of Eli Lilly & Co.; Herbert F. Johnson, Jr. '22, president of S. C. Johnson & Son, donor with others of the Herbert Fisk Johnson Professorship of Industrial Chemistry; and Mrs. Ellsworth M. Statler, trustee of the Statler Foundation which erected Statler Hall for the School of Hotel Administration.

"Corporations and Higher Education" may be obtained from Willard I. Emerson '19, Vice President for University Development, Administration Building, Cornell University.

Now In My Time!

Comyn Perry

THE NEW PRESIDENT will arrive, hang up his hat and go to work in July. That's all arranged and all there is to it.

But how about inaugural ceremonies in the fall? Five times now, we've had elaborate ceremonies on such occasions, along with attendant festivities that occupied the better part of a week. Precedent and protocol seem to demand it, but there is now building up at Ithaca a body of opinion in favor of skipping all that this time and settling for a short and dignified induction attended only by our own people.

These things are largely a matter of medieval survivals and academic fashions. They are impressive, to be sure, and lots of fun for the masses. But they are not inexpensive, and after a man has married off five daughters in big church weddings preceded by any number of bridal parties, there develops in him an unspoken hope that the sixth girl will elope, or anyway, be content with a quiet house wedding with just the immediate families, chicken salad, and a firmly-limited amount of domestic champagne. The big shows served a useful purpose and caused no great inconvenience when they were comparative rarities; when participation by other foundations was not imagined on a world-wide basis and any head of a sister institution who showed up and made a witty speech could reasonably expect another honorary Doctorate in the not-distant future. But the invitations have multiplied in recent years and arranging proper representations at all the shows has become a cause of embarrassment on many a quadrangle.

Your reporter is still mildly thrilled by his memories of President Farrand's inauguration. Dean Bosworth stage-managed that one and presented a noteworthy spectacle. There was something else going on in America at the time—we don't recall what—that had drawn to this country a quantity of European scholars and they'd all brought along their most striking robes and headpieces. This group was assembled in Ithaca at the proper time and Dean Bosworth, with his Beaux Arts background and keen sense of theatre, made the fullest use of them in his pageantry. Any time the proceedings showed signs of reverting to drab Tompkins County, canal-town standards, Dean Bosworth would throw his colorful Foreign Legion into the line and there you were back in the fifteenth century once more!

Don't get the idea that your correspondent doesn't respond wholeheartedly to all the implications of academic millinery, stained glass windows, organ music, and echoes of ecclesiasticism in their relation to current practice in education at the university level. Such things have their unquestioned place and importance. But they've been overdone, we suggest, and are in danger of becoming burdensome and grotesque by repetition.

And where could a big show be staged at Ithaca in the fall of 1951? Bailey Hall sufficed for Farrand and Day, but for a decade and more it has taken Barton to house Commencements and all other general convocations of the tribes. Barton Hall, however, has become something you can't count on any more for any event likely to lure a larger gate than commonly appears for an intercollegiate fencing match with Columbia. Even the availability of the place for Commencement exercises in June is obscured by doubt, and the way tanks, jeeps, trucks, guns, and jet-propelled monstrosities are rolling into Ithaca these days for instruction purposes, it seems not unlikely that Barton Hall will be filled to the roof with death-dealing devices before the time comes for inaugural ceremonies. No, I suspect we'd better drop the whole idea of a big show this time, soothing the disappointed with the reminder that we have a Centennial coming up which is likely to satisfy their every desire for academic pageantry.

At this point, it might be timidly suggested that perhaps the man who would be the central figure in an inaugural ceremony, if we had one, is entitled to one vote on all this. The point is well taken. But it's reasonable to suppose that the new man visualizes pretty clearly what lies ahead of him. He must see all those neat little packages of questions that have been saved up for his decision; all the wounded spirits in the anteroom waiting to show him their sore toes, a chance to win his sympathetic understanding of their woes. After all the questions and sore toes, we'd hazard the guess that the poor fellow would beam with delight if he did not have to be inaugurated, too, on top of all those other things!

Visitors Flock To Farm & Home Week

FROM AN orchid collector's back yard through "An Alaskan Adventure" to Grandma Moses's originals and the rest of the more than thirty movies, 150 exhibits, and 385 speakers, the story of the fortieth annual Farm and Home Week is one of variety and great vitality.

Registration for the week, March 19-23, reached 16,312; 200 short of last year's all-time record. Lack of a women's program on Monday was given as a possible reason for the decrease, although Ithaca's petulant weather may have kept some people away. Homeward-bound visitors barely missed the season's first thunder storm an hour after Friday's program closed.

In many of the up-to-thirty topics offered each hour, salient effects of world conditions were evident. Too many people, Americans included, look upon the US as an inexhaustible larder, Professor Herrell F. DeGraff '37, Agricultural Economics, told one audience which crowded Warren Hall auditorium. Our food production has not increased since 1944, he said, but our population has increased at the rate of two and a half million yearly; unless Americans make pronounced changes in their diet, it is unlikely that this country will be a source of food for the world. In another talk, Professor DeGraff said that although Russia's agricultural output is but two-thirds that of the US with some fifty million more people to feed, we shouldn't underestimate the capacity of the Russians to "tighten their belts." Russia is not as strong as we are, but perhaps we are vulnerable because we need so much to keep going, he suggested.

Speakers Discuss Inflation

Speaking of inflation, Dean William I. Myers '14 said, "The big rise is over;" New York farm prices have risen 13 per cent since last June, but they are still 11 per cent below the peak of June, 1948, and 4 per cent below parity. Professor Frank A. Pearson '12, Agricultural Economics, who compared price controls to the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, believes that the general price level will not rise more than 5 per cent this year, compared to the 25 per cent increase since last June.

Dr. Richard F. Bissell, deputy administrator of the Economic Cooperation Administration, said that keeping inflation under control at home is "perhaps the greatest help the United States can render her allies during the present world crisis." He strongly urged help to rearm Europe "if we are to avoid undoing the work of the last three years under the Marshall Plan." In another key address, Professor Knight Biggerstaff urged an audience liberally sprinkled with Oriental students to develop better relationships with Asiatics, citing the need for allies. He observed that some of them understand Far Eastern problems better than Westerners do.

Alumni Trustee Mary H. Donlon '20 urged women to fight tyranny with peaceful weapons, decrying the belief that the death or defeat of a Caesar or Stalin will destroy tyranny and insure peace. "This time we shall keep right on fighting for freedom, after the military victory is ours, in order to win and keep the peace," she said. A former president of WSGA, Miss Donlon earlier talked to its student House of Representatives on "Responsibilities in Government."

Exhibits Attract Many

Most talked-about exhibit revealed the intimacies of milk production and showed a cow literally cut in half. A new milk concentrate, introduced on the Boston market, March 1, was demonstrated and this reporter could taste no difference from fresh milk in the samples given. The concentrate when diluted two-to-one with water is nutritionally equivalent to fresh whole milk and will probably be classified as fluid milk. A frozen concentrate, similar to that of orange juice, was also mentioned.

Don't count your eggs, but look at their size, was the advice of an egg-buying guide, while a nearby marketing chart showed that cut roses and carnations cost least in July, gladiolus in August. Patronizers of Hotel Ezra Cornell's food concession in Barton Hall witnessed the operation of the first facsimile network in the history of radio, with programs originating at Columbia University in New York City. The facsimile receivers produced a printed "faxpage" every three and a half minutes, with a five-hour daily broadcast equalling twenty standard newspaper pages.

At a free health clinic, more than 1,000 people were examined for high blood pressure, diabetes, anemia, and tuberculosis and told that the greatest malnutrition in this country is an excess of caloric food. On the same floor in Savage Hall, mouth-watering candied New York State fruits and nuts suggested new uses for farm products. In the Plant Science Building, cut flowers were held in suspended animation at 31° F, a movie about Grandma Moses required extra showings to meet the demand, visitors saw and heard beans grow, and some 900 people queried the experts on African violets and gardens.

Enjoy Concert, Speaking

Evening entertainment was provided by the Sage Chapel Choir, the University Orchestra, and three soloists, Kieth Falkner, Music, and guest artists Suzanne de Derian and Harold Haugh in Dairy Maid Queen—Patricia J. Behrman, '51 Home Economics, set a new record in the third annual Farm and Home Week co-ed milking contest, obtaining 7.7 pounds of milk in two minutes. Runner-up in the expert class was Jane F. Robens, '53, Agriculture, daughter of William G. Robens '23. Nancy B. Helm, '53, Arts, led the novices with 1.6 pounds in two minutes. Winnie Wildman, '51 Architecture, was second.

an enjoyable presentation of the melodic "Creation," by Haydn. The Rice Debate State was won by Richard E. Redmond '51, with Lawrence W. Specht '51 in second place; and the Eastman Stage, by Charles L. Dodson '52 with Arthur P. Ives '51, runner-up. Elizabeth A. Lightfoot '52 was first in the Elsie Van Buren Rice Public Speaking Stage, followed by Elaine Ross '52. Winners in the three contests received a total of $375 in prizes.

Agriculture Alumni Elect

ALUMNI ASSOCIATION of the College of Agriculture, at its annual meeting during Farm and Home Week, elected Charles K. Bullock '26, president. He is associate secretary of the New York State Farm Bureau Federation, with office in Roberts Hall. Bullock succeeds William H. Sherman '36, and becomes a director of the Cornell Alumni Association.

James R. Hazlitt '24, Monroe C. Babcock '31, and Joseph P. King '38 were elected vice-presidents, and Professor A. Wright Gibson '17, Director of Resident Instruction in Agriculture, was re-elected secretary-treasurer. Professor Van B. Hart '16, Agricultural Economics, and Harold J. Evans '17 were re-elected to the executive committee and Sherman was added.

This was the thirty-eighth annual meeting of the Association. Seventy members gathered for luncheon in Willard Straight Hall, March 22, with Sherman presiding. Edward S. Foster '25 was designated chairman of a committee to have a portrait painted of the late Dean Albert R. Mann '04 to be hung in the new Agriculture and Home Economics Library building which was named for him at recommendation of the Association. Birge W. Kinne '16 reported as chairman of the Cornell Alumni Association committee on Alumni Trustee nominations.

Dean William I. Myers '14 reported on activities and prospects of the College of Agriculture, and paid tribute to Professor Ralph H. Wheeler '09, who will retire next June as Director of Finance and Assistant Treasurer of the University, and to Emmet J. Murphy '22, who resigned as General Alumni Secretary.

Plan Theater Party

BENEFIT PERFORMANCE of the coming Broadway musical comedy, "Flahooley," by Yip Harburg, is arranged for May 24 by the Cornell Women's Club of New York for the Federation Scholarship Fund. The play is scheduled to open May 14, ten days before the party. Tickets may be reserved through Mrs. Joseph J. Klein (Janet Frisch) '12, 101 Central Park West, New York City 23.

Give January Degrees

THE UNIVERSITY conferred 382 degrees as of January 31, at the end of the first term. Of these 227 were first degrees and 155 advanced degrees. For the first time since 1943, there were no mid-year Commencement exercises. The custom of mid-year exercises was started during wartime acceleration, and continued while there was a considerable number of graduates completing courses interrupted by the war. This year's January graduates are invited to return for the regular Commencement in June.

Sixty graduates received the AB. The BS was granted to seventy-seven in Agriculture, twenty-eight in Industrial & Labor Relations, twenty-six in Hotel Administration, and ten in Home Economics. Eleven students received the BArch, four the BCE, four the BChemE, three the BFA, three the BEE, and one BME.

The PhD was awarded to sixty-four advanced students, the MS to sixty, and the AM to nine. Of the MS, nine were in Industrial & Labor Relations, five in Agriculture, and three in Education. Six persons received the MEE, and one each the Doctor of Education, the MBusAd, the LLB, and the MChemE. Two each were awarded the MEd, Master of Food Science, Master of Nutritional Science, Master of Regional Planning, MCE, and the MME.

Master of Business Administration is Captain Robert W. DeWolfe, USN, retired. He enlisted in the Navy in 1921, graduated at the US Naval Academy in 1926, and spent twenty years in Naval Aviation, retiring in January, 1947. His service included nine years in the Far East. He was attached to the British Royal Air Forces as an observer, served with General Claire Chennault and the American Volunteer Group in China, and was Naval attaché at the American Embassy in Chungking. Later, he became assistant chief of staff of the 10th

Air Force under General Louis Brereton in New Delhi. He entered the School of Business & Public Administration in 1948, was on the Dean's list for three of his five terms and one term stood fourth in his Class. He joined Theta Delta Chi, to which his father, the late Willis H. DeWolfe '96, belonged. Captain DeWolfe hopes to do administrative work in the aviation industry.

Sage College to House Women Again University Remodels Old Building

SAGE COLLEGE has been given a reprieve and will again become a women's dormitory. Earlier plans to put an Electrical Engineering Building on that site have now been changed and the Board of Trustees authorized a complete renovation of the seventy-seven-year-old dormitory at a cost of $360,000. Workmen of the Department of Buildings & Grounds began on it last month, as shown on our cover, and are busy with needed exterior repairs.

The new Electrical Engineering Building, given anonymously through the Greater Cornell Fund, is now planned to go in the area between East Avenue and Hoy Field and between Campus Road and the new road along Cascadilla Creek. This brings it more closely into the projected development for the College of Engineering.

Need Dormitory Space

John E. Burton, Vice president-Business, explained that the difficulty of obtaining the substantial funds necessary for new dormitories and the uncertainty of building conditions led the Board of Trustees to invest in the renovation. "They felt there could be no justification for demolishing the hall in the face of the shortage of dormitory facilities and the economy represented in rehabilitating Sage," he said.

Tentative plans for Sage are to house women students there again in 1952-53 or possibly the following school year, according to Milton R. Shaw '34, Manager of Residential Halls. Increased enrollment of women next fall will be accommodated by converting Cascadilla Hall into a women's dormitory. Cascadilla has housed Freshman men for the last two years. Sage will be used for Freshman men next fall.

Sage was opened in the fall of 1874 as a college for women, with classrooms as well as living quarters in the building. Given by Henry W. Sage, it was erected at a cost of $210,662. Later the classrooms were converted into reception rooms which in turn gave way to offices when the Naval Reserve established headquarters there during World War II. The Department of Botany had quarters in the original building and a greenhouse connected with it. Since the war, it has been occupied entirely by men, except when thirty-five women students were briefly housed in a segregated east wing.

Because Sage had been marked for destruction, no improvements beyond immediate repairs have been made in the building for years. The renovation now underway includes needed repairs on the exterior and complete remodeling and redecorating inside. Exterior repairs and rebuilding are being done this spring with interior remodeling planned for this summer and the next. Included in the remodeling will be new heating and water systems, including new bathrooms; repainting; new lighting; and some new furniture. When the work is completed two years hence, Sage will house 200 students and again provide eating facilities. The Photographic Science Laboratory which now occupies the space where dining rooms once were will go elsewhere.

Since the improvements will permit the continued use of the Hall as a permanent dormitory for the foreseeable future, it will be some time before historians can get at the articles placed under the cornerstone, including a letter addressed by Ezra Cornell "to the coming men and women" which he said "will relate to future generations the cause of the failure of this experiment [co-education] if it ever does fail, as I trust in God it never will."

Students To Pay More

Slightly higher dormitory charges for both women and men students will go into effect next fall. The University charge for board, room, and laundry for women will be $895 a year instead of the present $850. Charge for rooms in the men's dormitories will be increased 10 per cent from the present rates, which range from $166 to $323 a year.

The new rates were announced after consultation with WSGA and other student representatives which brought agreement for some reductions in services given. Rising costs made the increases necessary. Vice-president Burton said, "We are planning to operate the dormitories at the lowest cost possible without sacrificing basic standards. We regret that the increases are unavoidable and will do everything possible to hold the line at this scale."

Red Cross Needs Workers

AMERICAN RED CROSS announces 400 paid openings for college graduates. It needs men to serve as assistant field directors at military installations, women with medical and psychiatric social work background for assistant field directors in military hospitals, trained recreation workers, and stenographers to work in Red Cross field offices in this country and abroad.

Application may be made to Red Cross headquarters at 615 North St. Asaph Street, Alexandria, Va.; 230 Spring Street, Atlanta, Ga.; 1709 Washington Avenue, St. Louis, Mo.; and 1550 Sutter Street, San Francisco, Cal.

INTELLIGENCE

Emerson Hinchliff '14

ALTHOUGH Andrew D. White had resigned as President of the University twenty-seven years earlier and was eighty in 1912, his Diary for that year shows that he still took active interest in Cornell. He and Mrs. White frequently entertained distinguished visitors, Trustees, and Faculty families at the President's House and were guests at various fraternities.

Excerpts from the Diary for 1912 follow.

Jan. 11, 1912—Founder's Day Address by Presdt Garfield of Williams College. . . . Lunched with him & party of Professors at Presdt's Schurmans & he afterward (5 P.M.) took tea at our house where we talked of his father & showed him tablet on mantelpiece in library, etc.

Jan. 21—Lyman Abbott preached admirably—morn. & afternoon—taking tea with us afterward.

Feb. 1—Dinner with Prof. Catterall (H. & self) very pleasant. Mr. & Mrs. E. L. Williams & Mr. & Mrs. Chas. Treman being of the party.

Feb. 4—At luncheon Arthur Newberry & his fraternity friend Mr. Coffin—a "Sun" editor.

[On the Wednesday and Thursday of Junior Week, in the afternoon, he visited Chi Phi, Psi Upsilon, Sigma Chi, Telluride, Kappa Sigma, Beta Theta Pi, and Zeta Psi and "met many kindly & pleasant people."]

Feb. 11—Hugh Black preached morning & afternoon—tho evidently greatly weary. He had been out in R.R. stations or snow drifts all night, and, indeed, all previous day. Weather coldest I remember here—17° below zero in town & 10° below 0 at my house.

Feb. 14—The Ithaca High School was utterly destroyed by fire—Hydrants being frozen.

Feb. 16—Call at my house from Gen. Baden-Powell.

Feb. 19—N.Y. The opera was La Bohème—Immense crush—to hear Caruso & Miss Farrar—Some what interesting but not at all what I generally like. [Wagner was his dish. He attended the Metropolitan frequently when in New York, once remarked that "Parsifal" was better done than at Bayreuth.]

Feb. 22—Roosevelt's Columbus speech comes & shakes my faith in him.

Feb. 23—Presided over Eastman Prize debate. . . . Very interesting. Speeches excellent.

Feb. 27—To Mr. Hamilton Holt's lecture on Commercialism & Journalism. Talking with Mr. H. at my library in evening. His lecture very interesting. [I spent a couple of hours with Mr. Holt on his visits, showing him the Campus.—E.H.]

Feb. 28—Luncheon to Hamilton Holt. . . . Crane, Schmidt, Hayes, Willcox, Newman (Trustee), Edlund (Pres. Sec'y), Olmsted, Hull.

Mar. 1—Debate. . . . I feel with Columbia's contention but Cornell won victory.

Mar. 3—Addressed the Cornell Chapter of Alpha Delta Phi . . . on the Diplomatic Service of the U.S. Very courteously & kindly listened to.

Mar. 21—Prof. R. S. Tarr, one of the most valuable men in the Cornell Univ. Faculty, (Dept. of Geol. & Geography) died suddenly.

April 24—Rejoice to find that Goldwin Smith's bequest to University amounts to about 700,000 dollars & that the Legislative appropriation is nearly a million of dollars.

May 5—John R. Mott preached. . . . Dined in evening with Schurmans to meet Mr. Johnson, Presdt of Baldwin Locomot. Works & wife.

May 23—Dedication of Rand Hall. Speech giving keys to Presdt Schurman by Mrs. Lang was a real gem—and the whole thing, with speeches by Westinghouse, Halsey, Schurman, & Dean Smith, passed off capitably as did the inspection of Rand Hall afterward. We had at lunch, Dean & Mrs. Smith, Prof. & Mrs. Kimball, Mr. Kidde, Mrs. ? Mother of Mrs. Lang.

June 24-28—In Ann Arbor, staying with President Angell. "Floods of recollections." Made the final speech at the Michigan Commemoration Day dinner. In Commencement procession with Dr. Angell and next to President Hutchins. A.D.W.'s speech at dinner afterward "not particularly good."

July 28—At 4 P.M. laid cornerstone of the new Ithaca City Hospital.

Sept. 29—First sermon of the Academic year was preached by Rev'd. Mr. Fosdick—an exceedingly brilliant discourse on Spiritual Life.

Oct. 9—Mr. & Mrs. Oscar S. Straus arrived about 9 A.M. & took breakfast with us. Also ex Senator Davenport, Prof. at Ham. Coll. Straus being candidate for Gov. & Davenport on the Progressive ticket. Attended their meeting down town afterwards. It was fairly large & enthusiastic—leaders being some of our young Profs—Sill, Burr et al—but I am far from converted to Recall of Judicial Decisions.

Oct. 21—Finished my "Letter of an Octogenarian to the Students of Cornell" or "Twelve Counsels." [for the Era]

Oct. 29—In the evening to Repub meeting at Lyceum addressed very eloquently & convincingly by Governor Harding of Ohio. . . . Prof. Rowlee presided & I led the Vice Presidents.

Nov. 7, 1912—My 80th birthday. Addressed the great body of students in the rain in front of Goldwin Smith Hall. Most heartily & kindly received. Lunched with Trustees & afterward received all sorts of delegations. . . . Telegrams from President Taft, Emperor William, Ambassador Bernstorff, & a great multitude of others. Letters from Ambassador Bryce & a vast mass of others. Had as guests Mr. Boldt & Mr. Ickelheimer. Dinner party in evening, etc., etc. Nice letter from [daughter] Karin, which especially rejoiced me. [He received 600 telegrams and letters in all.]

Nov. 29—[N.Y. Lively discussion with Theodore Roosevelt and Charles Francis Adams at an American Historical Association dinner at the Metropolitan Club.]

Dec. 11—Washington. At 9:30 P.M. Great "Red Cross Reception" at Miss [Mabel] Boardman's. Magnificent rooms filled with the elite. Interesting talks with Pres'd' Taft (on his retiring into Yale) Ambassador Jusserand (on Anatole France's Les Dieux ont Soif) Judge (Former Gov.) Hughes on Crime Pardoning Power, etc. He dislikes a Pardon Board. Mrs. Hughes on our daughters at Vassar—and both on my "Seven Statesmen". Ambassador & Mrs. Bryce very cordial. Continuous Reunion Club

EDITOR: At the Reunion in June, 1906, some of the Class of '03, returning to celebrate the end of their third year after graduation and their first regular Reunion, formed the Continuous Reunion Club: C.R.C. My Class of '07 had just become Seniors, and some of us were elaborately initiated and the Club got away to a grand start.

The Club for many years provided a magnet that drew together returning alumni at Ithaca who wanted to meet others than their Classmates whom they knew as undergraduates and afterwards. But two world wars and other things interfered with the Club serving its purposes.

C.R.C. will have its forty-fifth birthday in June, 1951, and there is much interest in it being reactivated. The secretary's records are not available, so the names of old-timers and applications for new members, together with their mail addresses, would be welcomed by "Chief Continuous Reunioner" Clarence B. ("Kid") Kugler '03, Kugler's Restaurant, Widener Building, Chestnut near Broad Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Old Time Flavor

EDITOR: "Now, In My Time!" in the February ALUMNI NEWS will doubtless reactivate (Washington, D.C. gobbledegook) many memories of stirring times in the old Lyceum.

In mentioning William J. Faverham, Mr. Berry recalled a particularly flavorsome event. After a performance, in "The Fawn" I believe, this handsome actor accepted the invitation of the Savage Club to attend a session. At this session, the writer of these lines, in the capacity of a neophyte Savage, was assigned to help draw and serve the beer. After serving all the beer that could be drawn in the usual manner, the "quarter" was tilted up to drain the remaining beer into a large pitcher. With the last drops from the keg came an exceedingly quiet, well-soused mouse!

Needless to say, the neophyte remained almost as quiet.—SAVAGE 1912

Correction: "Evening Song"

EDITOR: The usually impeccable Saturday Review of Literature let slip a minor error in its review of the Alumni Association's "Cornell Music" Record, and I see that you have perpetuated it in the March 15 issue of the always-valuable ALUMNI NEWS.

The "Evening song" is not, as Wilder Hobson, in SRL, would have it, to the tune of "Gaudeamus Igitur," but rather to that of "O Tannenbaum," whose origin before it became a part of German folk music I do not know.

"Gaudeamus Igitur" is indeed a noble anthem and it's too bad it doesn't appeal to collegians nowadays the way it used to. My fraternity, Theta Delta Chi, used it in the interfraternity song contest of 1948, and it was quite popular afterwards for informal singing around the house. There was quite a discussion for a while between the classicists and the musicians, like myself, over the pronunciation of the "G's" and the "J's" in the Latin text; for singing, we finally agreed that church Latin, with the soft consonants, was better.

With best wishes for continued success
I am —SIDNEY T. COX '43

New Sun Board Takes Over

CORNELL DAILY SUN, as it has for years, reappeared after the spring recess, with its editorial page devoted to the list of staff members elected for next year and a statement of policies by the new editor. This year's "Editorial Preface" is headed, "The Function of a Newspaper," and occupies one-third of the page.

Heading the new Sun board are Alvin Friedman '52 of Brooklyn as editor-in-chief, and David B. Stone '52 of Cortland as business manager. Friedman succeeds Charles D. Graham, '51 and Stone, who is the son of Mrs. Leslie P. Stone (Imogen Noyes) '25, succeeds N. Elmo Franklin '51.

News and editorial board of twenty-eight men and seven women will be directed by Edward C. Hanpeter '52 of St. Louis, Mo., managing editor, and Michael Scott '52, son of Irvin L. Scott '20 of Hastings-on-Hudson, associate editor. J. Harry Alexander III '52, son of J. Harry Alexander, Jr. '21 of Gerden City, circulation manager; Joseph D. Post '52 of Brookline, Mass., advertising manager; and H. Carol Chalupski '52, daughter of Victor Chalupski '25 of Brooklyn, women's business manager, head the business board of three junior managers and nine other men and one woman.

Annual Sun banquet of the retiring and new board members was April 6, in the Dutch Kitchen.

Willers '36 Joins Staff

NEW DIRECTOR OF PERSONNEL at the University is Diedrich K. Willers '36 (above). He came March 13, to succeed Horace H. Benson '29, who originated the Personnel Office in 1943 and will leave July 1.

Willers has been director of industrial relations at Farrington Manufacturing Co., Boston, Mass., since last year. For nine years, he was assistant to former Alumni Trustee Thomas I. S. Boak '14 who was works manager of Winchester Repeating Arms Co. in New Haven, Conn. Willers was secretary-treasurer of the Cornell Club of New Haven and president of the New Haven personnel managers group and the Connecticut Personnel Association. He entered Agriculture in 1932 and left in 1935, becoming an administrator for ten counties of Western New York for the Federal Security Administration. He played lacrosse, was manager of Freshman cross country; is a member of Delta Chi.

Announcing the change in the Personnel Office, John E. Burton, University Vice President-Business, expressed appreciation for Benson's work in organizing and developing a central office for hiring employees, formulating job and salary classifications now being completed, and drafting a program of employee benefits which the Trustees adopted last year. Receiving the BS in 1929, Benson joined the University staff in 1931, organized the Motor Vehicle Bureau and Campus Patrol and directed them for several years, and supervised the Campus safety services until 1948. He is member of the Ithaca Common Council and chairman of the city traffic commission. Benson won the "C" in cross country and track; is a member of Quill and Dagger and was president of the Eleusis alumni corporation. Mrs. Benson was Louisa Tyler '28.

Law Alumni Do Well

LAW SCHOOL graduates of last June who took the New York State Bar Examinations made a record of 87 per cent passing the examinations, as compared with a State average of 48 per cent. Dean Robert E. Stevens finds that every candidate who was in the top quarter of the Law School Class of '50 passed the Bar examinations, as did 93 per cent of those who were in the second and third quarters of the Class.

All four of last year's graduates who took the New Jersey State Bar examinations passed; two candidates in Iowa and the single candidates each in Washington, Vermont, Ohio, and Maryland were also successful; two of four Cornell candidates passed in Connecticut; and one of four in Massachusetts, where the State record was less than 20 per cent.

To Bring Foreign Students

SCHOLARSHIPS will be provided at Cornell and Harvard Business School by National Cash Register Co. for qualified students from areas in Germany and Scotland where the company has plants.

This year, a student will be selected from Bavaria, Germany, by a committee of public officials and a representative from a German university, to come here. National Cash Register has a factory in Augsburg, Bavaria. For 1952, one will be selected to attend Cornell from Angus County, Scotland, by the Rotary Club of Dundee, where the company has a plant. The company plans to support each year one student from each country in both Cornell and Harvard, the length of stay at Cornell to depend upon the students courses.

Roland G. Fowler '22 is factory manager of the Allen-Wales Adding Machine division of The National Cash Register Co. in Ithaca.

Television set has been donated to the Statler Club by one of its members, Alumni Trustee Victor Emanuel '19. It has been installed in the Rathskeller.

Prepare for Spring Sports

ATHLETICS DIRECTOR Robert J. Kane '34 announced just before the spring recess the schedules for spring sports. Ithaca weather confined the baseball candidates to Bacon Cage, where they were drilled by Walter J. Sickles '41 until the end of the basketball season, when Coach Royner C. Greene took over, with Sickles assisting. As last year, the baseball team did not make a Southern trip. The forthcoming schedules follow.

While these teams were on the road, the crews were rowing twice a day on the Inlet and Cayuga Lake. Weather and water conditions were better than usual, and the oarsmen got in many miles of rowing. Misfortune struck the Varsity, April 2, however, when its shell, the "Bull Durham," struck a floating stump in the Inlet and was badly damaged. The two-year-old shell sank and the men had to swim to shore. Two new Pocock boats have arrived recently. One, to be christened "Spirit of the Fifties," will be used by the 150-pound Varsity. The one for the heavyweight Varsity will be named "Cayuga Clipper."

Sports Shorts

The Boxing club staged its open tournament finals for University championships, March 22, in Barton Hall. The winners were Daniel G. Cadiz '52 (125), James C. Ling '53 (132), Alvin R. Graham '54 (140), Edward R. Reifsteck '51 (150), Carl E. Nedrow '51 (160), David R. Bacon '53 (170), Victor Pujo '52 (180), and Thurman M. Boddie '52 (heavyweight). Reifsteck and Bacon successfully defended the titles they won last year. Cadiz won in his class in 1948 and 1949. Pujo is captain of next year's football team and Boddie has been a member of the Varsity squad the last two years.

Frank A. Bettucci '53, 147-pound intercollegiate wrestling champion, was defeated in the semi-finals of the NCAA tournament in Bethlehem, Pa., March 24. He lost to Don Frey of Penn State, whom he defeated in the Intercollegiates. Paul E. Steiger '54 won the 145-pound championship in the New York State AAU meet in Amityville, March 31.

The Ithaca College chapter of Phi Epsilon Kappa, national physical education fraternity, has presented a trophy to be awarded to the outstanding Ithaca College wrestler in memory of Walter C. O'Connell '12, late Cornell and Ithaca College coach.

Tau Epsilon Phi, interfraternity bowling champions, defeated the Newman Club, independent league winners, 3-2, to capture the intramural bowling championship. The total pin score was 1851-1850.

A joint enterprise of the undergraduate Crew Club and the Alumni Crew Association is a new publication, Cornell Rowing News, designed to inform alumni who rowed about current developments at the boathouse and with the crews. Editor is last year's Varsity commodore, Howard M. Smith '50, and the first issue, for April, contains messages from the coaches and from this year's commodore, James T. Wright '51. Volume 1 Number 1 was mailed to about 800 former oarsmen whose names and addresses were known. Rowing alumni and others interested may obtain this issue from R. Eveleen Woodward, Cornell Alumni Crew Association, Room 262, 111 East Forty-eighth Street, New York City 17.

Co-captain Paul J. Gerwin, Jr. '51 won a place on an all-Ivy League basketball team. He was also chosen by the coaches for an all-Upstate team for the Rochester Democrat & Chronicle, and Co-captain Elect Frederick J. Eydt '52 made the second team.

The ROTC rifle team defeated twenty-three other Eastern squads to win the First Army Area intercollegiate tournament in a postal match. Cornell, coached by Sergeant Joseph A. Lada, held a 45-point lead over second-place CCNY. Captain Bruce T. Wilkins '52 led the scoring, one point ahead of Charles F. Roth, Jr. '54. Cornell placed third in competition for the First Army Area William R. Hearst Trophy, which was won by MIT with 947 points. Clarkson scored 938 and Cornell, 933.

Yale Track Meet Reports

JOHN T. MCGOVERN '00, invited by Yale to referee the indoor track meet with Cornell in New Haven, wrote to Director Robert J. Kane '34:

"We were ahead most of the time; yet the crowd and the Yale competitors were spontaneous in their applause and compliments over the superb performances of our top men. Gourdine was admired not alone for his repeated victories. His relaxed and modest attitude and cheerful self-effacement were noticed by Gates, Douglas, and others of their athletic council.

"In my more than twenty years of visitation to Yale, this meet most nearly approached the ideal of what we have all hoped to find in games played by contesting young American gentlemen students of our colleges.

"Coach Montgomery had his team up and he too conducted himself as he should. Not self-consciously, or weakly. He made his points at the beginning, asked clearly what he wanted, and took the decisions without debate. He did not gadfly, or meddle, or fuss."

Coach Robert F. Giegengack of Yale wrote to McGovern after the meet, in part as follows:

"This morning I had many laudatory comments and several complimentary letters as a result of the fine meet on Saturday. Some people said it was the best track meet they had ever attended, and all remarked with some surprise that they had never seen such friendly spirit between two universities engaged in such a close competition. I believe it is worthy of note that throughout the entire proceedings no athlete in any manner, shape, or form interfered with an opponent, and no one on either side complained or objected about any decision or any result. It is unfortunate that all our competition is not on the same high plane."

Forty Years Ago

April, 1911—It is reported that a "cafeteria" large enough to serve lunch to several hundred persons will be conducted in the new building of the Department of Home Economics. This will make the destruction of the "Sibley Dog" much less of a public calamity. . . . The oldest building on the University Campus is being removed this week. It is the frame house which has stood for many years across East Avenue from Sibley College. In late years it has been used as a restaurant and has been known to students as the "Sibley Dog," because it was patronized largely by students of Sibley College, who got their lunches there, "dog" being student slang for a quick-lunch place. When Ezra Cornell gave his farm as the site of Cornell University, this building was standing where the eastern half of Sibley College is now. It was occupied as a dwelling house by the manager of Mr. Cornell's farm.

Thirty Years Ago

April, 1921—Elwyn B. White '21 of Mount Vernon represented The Cornell Daily Sun at the annual meeting of the Associated Press. . . . Professor Wilder D. Bancroft has reduced "the light that lies in women's eyes" to a scientific basis, and says that those of us who have been disillusioned by azure orbs have been badly fooled, because there is no such thing as a blue eye. Blue color is absolutely lacking, he says, and the apparent blue in eyes and in the plumage of birds is due wholly to light refractions and not to a real color. . . . Professor James B. Rice '90 made a protest in Washington recently against the importation of Chinese eggs and said that eggs are selling at eighteen cents a dozen in Ithaca.

Operate Utility

FOUR CORNELLIANs are among the twenty senior officers and major department heads who constitute the Operating Council of Detroit Edison Co. Chairman of the Council is James W. During spring recess, student delegations from the University went to the annual convention of the National Independent Students Association at the University of Kansas, at Lawrence, and to a national student conference on human relations in higher education at Earlham College, Earlham, Ind., March 29-31. At Lawrence, the Cornell delegation heard an address by Deane W. Malott, President-elect of Cornell and chancellor of the University of Kansas, and visited him in his office. The delegation to Earlham heard President Harold Taylor of Sarah Lawrence College cite Cornell student groups among those of several other schools for their leadership in breaking down discriminatory practices within the student community.

New members selected by the Willard Straight Hall board of managers are Joan K. Boffa '52, James N. Diefenderfer '52, Raymond L. Erickson '53, Charles D. Graham, Jr. '51, Patricia A. Gunderson '52, Jose A. Orive '52, Gayle L. Raymond '52, Otto F. Richter, Jr. '52, Harriette E. Scannell '52, and James W. Wade '52.

Debate team of Robert B. Bradfield '51, Fred C. Munson '51, Stephen R. Kaye '52, and Seymour I. Marcus '52 came back from a spring recess tour of Midwestern universities with five wins, one loss, and two no-decisions. They debated at Loyola University, University of Chicago, Northwestern, Notre Dame, and University of Illinois, participating at most of the schools in two debates, upholding opposite sides of the issue: "That the non-Communist nations of the world should form a new organization." They lost to Chicago.

Personnel classes in the School of Business & Public Administration heard James M. Mitchell of the US Civil Service Commission speak, April 5, on "Developments in Federal Personnel Management Since the Hoover Commission Report." He conferred with interested students on advantages of Federal employment.

President of the Cornell chapter of Alpha Alpha Gamma, honor society for women studying architecture or allied arts, is Marjory A. Lyons '51. Secretary-treasurer is Goldie B. Pearl '52.

Eric D. Offner, Law '52, has been elected editor-in-chief of the Cornell Law Forum, a monthly newspaper published by the Cornell Law Association, a student organization, since 1949. On the staff are six other Juniors: Arthur A. Heald, managing editor; Walter C. Marshall '49, news editor; John F. Kennedy, alumni editor; Albert C. Neimeth '50, business manager; Joseph C. Dwyer, advertising manager; and Robert A. Mendelsohn, photography. Officers of the Law Association are Harry W. Albright, Jr. '52, president; Clifford R. Oviatt, Jr. '52, son of Clifford R. Oviatt '22, vice-president; and Ralph M. Shulansky '52, secretary-treasurer.

New secretary of the Student Council is Walter A. Harrison, president of the Junior Class.

Independent Council board of governors has re-elected Eugene N. Feingold '52, president of the board. The other officers are Sidney Pearlman '52, first vice-president; Suzanne Libby '53, second vice-president; Sheldon A. Sorokoff '53, treasurer; and Stuart R. Pottasch '53, secretary.

Co-editors of the 1952 Cornellian will be Mary Ann Metaxas '52 and Robin A. Westbrook '52. David W. Plant '53 will be business manager.

RULES of the Willard Straight Hall board of managers to limit sales in the Straight lobby to University items brought a disapproving editorial in The Sun and accusations from the Labor Youth League that the ruling was made because the organization sold Marxist literature there several days last fall. The Sun later reported denials from the Straight as to discrimination against LYL. Editorially it commented: "We do not believe that there was any intent to discriminate against any one organization or type of organization. But regardless of the basis for the action, its effect is hardest on groups like the LYL, for the sale of Marxist literature is one of the principal parts of the organization's existence. The purpose for which Willard Straight Hall was given to Cornell was to provide a place for students to work and relax. The Straight exists only to serve Cornellians, and we think it is defeating this purpose by restricting its service with regulations which are probably unnecessary. . . . If the Widow can sell magazines in the Straight lobby, then Youth League should be able to sell its Marxist literature. Any distinction between the two is artificial and unfair."

Junior Week End chairman William A. Eustis '51 reports a deficit of $654 this year. He blamed "lack of participation" as the main reason for the loss in presenting his report to the Student Council, which foots the bills.

Twenty-two fraternities have pledged eighty-seven students this term. This brings the number of men pledged during the school year to about 860.

Cornell Chapter of Pi Kappa Alpha was host for a district convention of the fraternity, April 7-8. Delegates came from the University of New Hampshire, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Syracuse, Lehigh, Rutgers, Pennsylvania, Delaware, and George Washington University. They were welcomed by Acting President Theodore P. Wright, and Ernest C. Sofis '51, president of the Cornell chapter; heard Dean of Men Frank C. Baldwin '22 speak on "What the Colleges Expect of Fraternities in this Period of Crisis." Professor William K. Widger, Meteorology, district president, was co-chairman of the convention.

Tau Beta Pi, Engineering honor society, has elected Richard B. Brundage '50, son of Ralph W. Brundage '22 and the former Ethel Morris '18, president; Peter H. Rose '51, vice-president; Edward F. Shaw, PhD '34, told a meeting of the Ithaca branch, American Association of University Women. The problem now is principally one of navigation outside the world's hemisphere, he said, since projectiles already have been sent 250 miles into the air.

1910 MEN Paul W. Thompson (above) has seen more of Ithaca than most of his Classmates. After graduation in 1910, he refused to leave the place and stayed on to teach Junior and Senior subjects in Sibley College during the academic year, to do engineering work at Auburn in the summer vacation.

In 1913, however, Paul took a job with Detroit Edison Co. and has stayed there ever since, with time out to serve as a major in Army Ordnance through the first war. Now he's vice-president in charge of engineering in that company, a job which places upon him general responsibilities for the design, construction, operation, and maintenance of the company's plants, together with its gas, steam, and electric transmission and distribution systems. As jobs go, that sounds like a full-time one, but the man hasn't been too tied down, apparently, to keep up his intimate contacts with Cornell. He's now serving a second term as a member of the Engineering Advisory Council to the Trustee committee on buildings and grounds.

The record of a successful engineer forty years out of college seems fated to become, particularly when he is asked to compile it, no more than a list of jobs held, hard tasks accomplished, articles written for technical journals, papers read at meetings of learned societies in this country and in England, professional recognitions and honors conferred upon him in return for such accomplishments and services. And yet there manage to escape from Paul Thompson's factual list, concealed evidences of the man's humanity and zest. Just as he maintains his contacts with the University through his gratuitous services to the Board of Trustees and in the Cornell Society of Engineers, he keeps bright his military interests through his active membership in the Army Ordnance Association and the American Legion.

The Thompsons live at 1119 Devonshire Road, Grosse Pointe Park 30, Mich. They have one son. Paul's office address is 2000

Second Avenue, Detroit. Clubs: Detroit-Atlantic, Cornell Club of Michigan, Detroit Economic, and Engineers' of New York.

Robert A. Gillies lives at 302 Bay Street South, Hamilton, Ontario. He is vice-president in charge of operations for the Steel Co. of Canada, Ltd., with offices on Wilcox Street in Hamilton.

Walter L. Squire gives his hobbies as real estate and Forty-year Reunions at Ithaca. He is a valuation engineer for the Niagara Mohawk Paper Co. Among the Classmates he sees most frequently are Frank Knapp, Arthur Hamlin, Catherine Allen Sharp, and Sellew Roberts, head of the history department in Kent University. Squire's home address: 170 Highland Avenue, Buffalo 22.

George O. Webster is a partner in the law firm of Squire, Sanders & Dempsey, 1857 Union Commerce Building, Cleveland, Ohio, and a director in many companies. In World War I, he served as a captain in the Judge Advocate General's Department; in World War II, he left the soldiering to his boys: George, Jr. in the Army, John B. in the Navy. Jim Rutherford is the Classmate he sees most frequently.

'12 ME—Henry W. Grant of 986 East Delmar Street, Pasadena, Cal., is with the American Distributing Co., Everett, Wash.

A forward-looking man is Don Lee. From Fort Worth, Tex., his eyes are focussed on the hills of Ithaca and the next Quinquennial Reunion of the Class in 1953. "I had to wait until our Thirty-five-year Reunion to return. I had such a good time that I am impatient for the Forty-year Reunion to come about. While marking time, I send my Class coat and hat to the cleaners every month to be sure it will be shipshape for the coming event. I have already started to pray for good health, a government pension, and a good rain in Texas in 1953." Chink's prayer for a good rain must be to keep clean the highways of that State. For many years, he was in the Texas State Highway Department. In more recent years, he has been chief, soils & paving section, airports branch of the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

A recent issue of the News announced Gilmore D. Clarke's resignation as Dean of the College of Architecture. Research in the record books uncovered the interesting tidbit that Gil was not himself a graduate of Architecture but holds a BS from the Ag College. As long ago as 1919 he had arrived in his chosen field. He became landscape architect for the Westchester County park system, and later consulting landscape architect for the Department of Parks, New York City, and the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway, Washington, D.C. Consulting work on the Henry Hudson Parkway, the Whitestone and Triborough Bridges, the World's Fair in New York, and the UN Headquarters followed in natural course. He spent part time at Ithaca as professor of his specialty.

Editors of the '13 Class Book sometimes hit a characterization with unerring pre-science. Thirty-seven years ago, they wrote of the stately reticence of Robert F. Corley whose answer to the last questionnaire looked like the scorecard for the Russian vetoes at the UN. The word "No" appears with stately regularity fifteen times in answer to the first thirteen questions. Two extra "No"s are thrown in for emphasis on the question about literary authorship. Finally, he breaks down to admit "Ah! At last. That I have done!" in reply to the question whether he has managed to keep breathing. As a P.S., Bob writes, "Actually my son Robert Q. Corley (Yale 1943) was married to Miss Lucy Chatfield in New Haven on January 7, 1950." Bob and Ben Bardo are neighbors in Hamden, Conn.

Some Classmates from other home places succumbed to the charm of Ithaca and settled in and about the Campus in various capacities after graduation. Henry W. Lormor is one of those who originated in Ithaca but drifted elsewhere after graduation and when last heard from was located at 19201 South Moreland Blvd., Shaker Hts. 22, Ohio. Lorry always was a great hand for doing things. As an undergraduate he was property manager of the Masque in his upperclass years. Now he is mechanical development engineer for the Willard Storage Battery Co. and owns up to two grandsons and numerous patents on storage batteries and machinery and household articles. He reports having seen Dutch Meister once and confesses to the publication of an article in Factory Management & Maintenance.

After dinner, Stew Solomon invited us to his studio for a showing of the Thirty-year Reunion pictures, particularly for the benefit of those who had not seen them before.

"You've done a grand job, Rym, through the years and in your book. I am today sending for three more copies. Maybe some of my enjoyment is due to the fact that we were more or less contemporaries and because I have arrived at the age when reminiscences are the most fun; but I don't think so. I believe graduates of other institutions than Cornell will get equal enjoyment from your essays . . ." —Cornell '06

With great difficulty, I have been able to digest the following item to readable form from a volume of rambling material: Prentiss Cushing modestly reports his engagement to Barbara Pike of New York City, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Lemuel Gurney Pike of Montpelier, Vt. June 16 is the big day. Cush is an electrical engineer with Electrons, Inc. in Newark, N.J. Cush being an Albany man reminds me that I ran into George Wieber at the Glee Club concert in Albany recently. Hale and hearty after all this time. You think I'm kidding? Don't look now, but it was ten years ago this fall that we were going through our paces as Frosh back on the Hill! Out of the heart of New England (this is disputable) comes word from John Darrin that he's off on the right foot; he's a research engineer for the United Shoe Machinery Co. and makes his home at 66 Newell Road, Auburndale, Mass.

A special dispatch from Mecca goes something to the effect that Bob O'Rourke, who did yeoman work on our Fifth last June, and Eunice Torlinski '49 were married, ahem, last June. He hot-foots it over to Morse Chain where he's an industrial engineer and she scampers up the Hill to Prof. Lynn Emerson's office where she is his secretary. Address, 210 North Geneva Street. Bulletin out of the far West from John and Martha Parce ('48) Fraser informs me that a roof is now over their heads at 1220 El Curtola, Walnut Creek, Cal., instead of another address I won't bother confusing you with. And get a load of this! I'm even getting items pertaining to the distaff side to report. The press can't be partial, so here goes: Ginny Lowe Baker and her husband are living at 1986 Moreland Road, Willow Grove, Pa. She has her hands full with her daughter now nearing her first year.

Lieutenant George Krowl got a greetings letter last fall that removed him from his job with Modern Design and with a fast shuffle (is it legal to even mention such a phrase after the recent investigations?) wound up at Camp Gordon, Ga., with the 16th Signal Radio Relay Company. His wife and daughter are with him.

Another distaff item: Rosemary Blais was married darn near two years ago to William M. Cashin, PhD '46, of Cornell Chemistry Department. They are at RD 2, Newfield. (With transportation what it is, I guess some things take just so long to get some place.) And another: Mary Wood Dalrymple and her husband live in Blacksburg, Va., where they can be reached at Box 3747, V.P.I. It is reliably reported that a young heir graces their home. And over the hills from here in Torrington, Conn., Blaikie Horwath is traffic manager for Station WTOR in addition to conducting her own fifteen-minute program five days a week. Frances Volz in conjunction with Prof. Paul Ramstad of the School of Nutrition reports in the December, 1950, issue of Food Industries on studies successfully undertaken in the School to develop an indicator that will enable a user to tell whether or not the frozen food he or she is using has been thawed out since its initial freezing and then refrozen; a practice, as I understand it, definitely frowned upon.
