Cruises a la Carte

One of the nicest things about cruising on the famous President Liners is the absolute freedom they allow you—to sail when you please, stop-over as you like, continue on when you choose.

Actually you may go through the Panama Canal to California (or New York), to the Orient and back, or Round the World almost as freely on these great ships as you could on your own private yacht. And the fares are no more than for ordinary passage!

STOPOVER AS YOU LIKE Regular, frequent sailings of the President Liners make it possible for you to stopover exactly where you want to—see the things you want to see and make the sidetrips you want to make, then continue whenever you are ready.

Suppose you are making an Orient cruise: arrive at Shanghai, and find China more fascinating than you ever dreamed any place could be. Stopover! Visit Hangchow and Soochow, Tientsin . . . and Peking. Stay as long as you like. Then continue on . . . on another President Liner.

ORIENT ROUNDTRIPS President Liners sail every week from Los Angeles and San Francisco via Hawaii and the Sunshine Route to Japan, China and the Philippines; every other week from Seattle, via the fast Short Route. You may go one way, return the other—stopping over wherever you like, travel on the new S. S. President Coolidge and S. S. President Hoover and as many others as you choose of the President Liner fleet. Special summer roundtrips are from $450, First Class . . . $240 for extra-economical Tourist Class.

ROUND THE WORLD The most thrilling cruise of all. 26,000 miles. Visits in 21 ports in 14 different countries, including Hawaii, Japan, China, the Philippines, Malaya, India, Egypt, Italy, France . . . Take only 85 days, or up to two full years—stopping over wherever you please, at no additional fare. First Class fares are from $833.50. And you may sail any week from New York, Los Angeles or San Francisco; alternate weeks from Seattle. Get full details at once.

CALIFORNIA President Liners bring all the thrill of real world travel to this speedy Inter-coastal trip . . . via Havana and the Panama Canal to California. If you like, you may stopover with the same freedom that these liners allow you on the longer cruises. Fares are from $140 on Round the World liners and from $165 on the Trans-Pacific vessels. Roundtrips by President Liner are generously discounted, and Round America roundtrips—one way by President Liner, the other by train—are from $230 First Class, hometown to hometown. There is a sailing every week from New York; fortnightly from California.

Reunions Almost Reach Record

Fine Showing and Perfect Weather

MORE than 1,750 alumni returned for the last weekend, and although this number was not so large as that of one other year, nevertheless those who came were imbued with the true reunion ideals and spirits. It was particularly notable that of this crowd, there was an unusually large representation of those who had not been back for a long period of years. There were many of the last twenty classes who had never been here since their graduation. One man had not been back for thirty-five years. To those especially the informal programs of the afternoons were a welcome innovation. Class chairmen carefully left many hours free so that strangers to the new developments at Cornell could visit the recently built additions to the University. Much to the disappointment of many, Myron Taylor Hall was closed a good part of the time, but the other new buildings were open, and most departments furnished guides for the visitors.

Twenty-two classes held formal reunions, and almost every class was represented. It was noticeable, also, that many came in on Thursday, and but few remained beyond Sunday afternoon. Although the necessary limit was reached for the rebate on the railroad fare, the number of visiting cars far outweighed any other year. On Saturday, near the Drill Hall, forty-one states were represented by car licenses. One 1909 man came all the way from India—he said just for the reunion—and there were several from California, representing different classes.

The Drill Hall luncheons, although no longer free meals furnished by a benevolent Alma Mater, were the center of attraction. At the baseball game on Friday, a social atmosphere prevailed—men and women wandering around through the stands, and the classes scattered over the green in front of the diamond.

Several of the classes got together Friday night, but most of them had their formal banquets on Saturday evening before the Rally.

In the opinion of most persons, 1919 had the prize costume—red berets, striped basque sweaters, and white pants with '19 emblazoned where it showed up the best. The class of '32 was clad in faithful replicas of convict outfits. Another class started out wearing long black false mustaches, but these were either too hot, or didn't stick well enough, and by Saturday were scarcely in evidence.

The class of '24 brought home the bacon of largest representation, and the fifty-year class had the greatest percentage of members present, these two winning the Class Secretaries' Association cups for the year.

"Scallions to 1912" for the bombs which kept all other classes awake all night, and which interfered with most of the real entertainments all over the campus. They were not so funny as 1912 thought, even allegedly driving away a couple of war veterans who had been a good deal closer to the real thing than some of the bombers realized.

An old grey mare—actually a shiny brown artillery horse—appeared with 1914 at the ball game. If symbolic of 1914's not being what it used to be, it failed, as 1914 had a fine representation and a fine reunion.

It was the first reunion to follow the end of prohibition. The effect was only that meetings and dinners were held all over—up town and down, at Glenwood, Sheldrake, Aurora Street, the Ithaca Hotel, and a few near-by taverns. There was no more demonstration than usual and the beer was, naturally, better. There were a few boatrides, a feature missing of late years.

The Musical Clubs and the Dramatic Club played to over-full houses (details elsewhere). There were the usual meetings of the Corporation, the Cornellian Council, and various society and fraternity get-togethers.

REUNION STATISTICS

The total registration at the Drill Hall was 1773, as compared with last year's figures of 1391. One or two years the registration has been above 1700. 22 classes were scheduled for reunions this year. The registration of 1773 is of 1171 men and 602 women. This is only 8 below the largest registration.

About Athletics

Poughkeepsie Regatta

Cornell raced well up with the pack in all three races, but failed to return a winner in the 37th regatta of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association. The University of California, by taking the university race, retained its place at the head of the river while Syracuse and the University of Washington, respectively, secured a large measure of consolation through victories in the Junior Varsity and Freshman contests.

Suspended in 1933 through the inability of the competing colleges to maintain their navies through the depression in the style to which they had become accustomed, the Poughkeepsie regatta was revived on Saturday with a degree of color and vitality that has never been surpassed. Eighteen shells lined up at the stake boats in the three races. A few of them hitched-hiked or passed the hat to get there, but there was nothing in the results to indicate that there is any demonstrable relation between racing efficiency and frugality. There was a new-comer on the river in the person of Rutgers which for the first time was represented in the regatta by a freshman crew. The observation train was smaller than usual with only 18 cars, but there was no diminution in the crowds which filled the wooded heights on both shores and the anchored yachts and tugs and yawls and barges at the end extended five deep from the finish line to well above the bridge. The races were run off substantially on time; there were no false starts or recalls and the conditions for the varsity race were as nearly perfect as they ever have been.

The freshman race was dominated from start to finish by the powerful, smooth rowing eight from the University of Washington, which had no difficulty in staving off challenges from Syracuse and Cornell. From the bridge in Washington went away to win by four lengths, with Cornell creeping up on Syracuse in the last mile, but losing the second position by a length.

The Junior Varsity contest furnished the closest competition and the most exciting racing of the day. Up to the last quarter of a mile it looked like anybody's race and at no time was there anything like open water among the leaders. Syracuse early assumed the lead and maintained it by rowing a higher stroke than her nearest competitors. For most of the distance spectators expected the Navy, or Cornell or California, who were holding on at a lower beat, to assume the lead at the proper time, but that time never happened. Syracuse clawed and scrambled to stay in front, but she did not claw and scramble in vain. When the flag went down she was still in front of the Navy by three quarters of a length with Cornell another half length back and California lapping Cornell. It was the kind of a finish that leads one not to pay his bets too quickly, but to wait until he is positive of the official decision.

The university race with seven entries was started from Krum's Elbow at 7:15 (E.S.T.), six minutes later than the scheduled hour and in the glory of a summer sunset. The University of Washington led most of the way, with the Navy, Cornell and Pennsylvania well up, but no one who followed that race on the water closely enough to see what was actually going on in the boats would have picked as the winner anyone other than California after the first mile. The college that won the race at Poughkeepsie in 1932 and later the Olympic championship in the same year, looked again like a winner just as soon as the field got away and straightened out. Rowing with smoothness, power, and confidence, California was content to coast down the course as Washington, Cornell, the Navy and Pennsylvania battled inside for three miles. At that point California moved easily into the lead while the rest of the field resolved itself into a series of private boat races for the positions. Washington just nosed out the Navy at the finish with Cornell well up and Pennsylvania uncomfortably close at hand. Syracuse was well back with Columbia badly distanced.

Yachting

Crews from Cornell and Yale finished in a first place tie with nine points each last Thursday, in the opening races of the fifth Intercollegiate Yachting Regatta, over a triangular course on Buzzards Bay, not far from Marion, Mass.

Only two of the races were completed, in a day of uncertain breeze. Disaster overtook two of the Herrshoff 15-footers when they ran into a 30 knot northeast squall, while making their third trip around the course. The Cornell entry, with Britt Gordon '35 at the helm, capsized. The Dartmouth boat, handled by John O'Dell, dropped her mainsail and came home with nothing but her jib flying, when her peak halyard parted.

Cornell earned nine points with two second and two third places. Princeton and Dartmouth each totaled 7 $\frac{1}{2}$  points, Harvard and Williams each 4.

Track

Only the choice of jumpers for competition against Oxford and Cambridge is holding up the definite list of men who will embark July 7 for England as representatives of Cornell and Princeton. Jack Moakley, of Cornell, and Matty Geis, of Princeton, are to have their men hold a jump-off on Saturday June 23, at the Rutherford County games, in New Jersey, to decide which of Godley and Scot of Cornell, and Wenzell of Princeton will make the trip.

The rest of the team is decided upon for sure, with only one change having been effected in the Cornell team, which was picked after the dual meet with Princeton on May 13, the substitution of Ham Hucker, freshman hurdler, for John Messersmith, varsity low barrier man.

Two men will run in two events in the English-American meet. Captain Bill Bonthron, of Princeton, will compete in both the mile and the half-mile events. Bob Kane, of Cornell, will run both the 220 and the 440. Last year in this meet, Bonthron was second to Jack Lovelock of Oxford in a 4:07.6 mile for a new world's record, and won the half in 1:52.6. Kane won the 440 in a new meet record time of 48.5, but did not run the 220 last year.

Cornell entries are:

100 yard dash—Captain Dick Hardy, and Bob Linders; 220 and 440—Bob Kane; 880 yard run—Steve Sampson; Mile run—Paul Vipond; Two Mile—Bruce Kerr; 120 yard high hurdles—Walt Merwin; 220 low hurdles—Ham Hucker; Broad Jump—Hank Godshall; High Jump—Godley or Scott; Shot Put—Walt Wood.

Baseball

Cornell, in a final effort to hold the deadlock with Columbia for first place in the Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League, met Pennsylvania on Hoy Field Friday, June 15, before a crowd of 1,800 fans, consisting for the most part of the brightly costumed alumni who attended en masse, and fell at the hands of the visitors, 8-5, which left the varsity only one slight chance to recoup the next afternoon at Hanover, where they played Dartmouth to wind up the season. By virtue of the loss, Cornell and Dartmouth were put in the position of fighting for a second place in the League.

After an encouraging early lead, Cornell dropped the game to Pennsylvania when the visitors put on a late game rally that crushed the Cornell hopes of a tie for first place.

Victory was snatched from Cornell's grasp when Captain Toots Pasto's arm weakened and went wild. For five innings the Cornell captain held the Pennsylvania batters at his mercy, but the sixth inning was Pennsylvania's chance, and they took it. Jack Lynch, visiting catcher, walked and stole second. Don Kellett, that continual nemesis for Cornell athletes, smashed a drive to left field which advanced Lynch to third, Kellett racing to second on the throw in.

Pasto's next heave was wild, hitting the dirt in front of the plate, and Lynch came home before Red Johnston, Cornell catcher, could recover it. Pasto threw a duplicate, and Kellett scored. Still without control, Pasto walked Kosloff. Shanahan took a double off Pasto's offering to him, which smacked into the palm of Miscall, but the Cornell short-stop dropped the catch, the ball slapping its way at full speed through his fingers. Powell walked to fill the bases.

Coach Paul Eckley '17 replaced Pasto with Danny Lindheimer at this point, but Clark managed to snake a single off the new pitcher, to score two more runs for Pennsylvania. A fast double-play, and Barton's strike-out ended the disastrous inning.

Lindheimer found the Pennsylvania attack too brutal to stop at once and it continued into the seventh frame. Lynch, up once more, started things off with a walk, and Kellett followed him with a pop into right field, which placed Lynch on third. Kellett then drew a throw to second as he started for the base, and stopped. Frost took the ball and returned it to Johnston, to head off the Pennsylvania catcher on his way home, but the return was bad and the ball went to the back stop. Lynch scored, and Kellett reached third safely. Kosloff batted out a single to right field, scoring Kellett, and then came home on Shanahan's long home run to right center.

Cornell opened the scoring in the first inning when Miscall socked out a triple to left, and came home on a wild pitch. Pasto added another Cornell tally, on singles by himself, Frost and Dugan.

In the eighth, Dugan stepped to the plate and sent out a beautiful triple, crossing the plate on Draney's single which followed.

Cornell started a rally in the ninth, in a last desperate effort to tie the score.

Kreimer, batting for Dan Lindheimer, singled past the short-stop, and Froehlich, after Miscall was out, stepped to the plate for Frost and drew a walk. Dugan smashed a terrific liner over the right field fence, which was foul by inches. Dugan forced Froehlich, and he and Kreimer scored on Downer's hit to left. Bradley, however, popped to Kellett, ending the game.

Dartmouth Game

Going to the mat with Dartmouth at Hanover on Saturday, June 16, Cornell emerged victorious over the Indians to take what will be second place in the eastern intercollegiate loop standings, with a 9-2 win, unless the unexpected happens between Harvard and Yale, who still have two games to play off.

In the Game with Dartmouth, Phil Pross, on the mound for Cornell, pitched steady ball, while his teammates, out for blood and second place after the loss the day previous, hammered Olson and Roundey, Dartmouth hurlers, for ten hits, seven of which were for more than one base. Cornell scored five runs in the first two innings, and coasted throughout the remainder of the game. At no time did the Dartmouth outfit threaten the Cornell lead, as the varsity ran the score up to 9-2.

The League

Columbia, finishing with eight wins and four losses, has the first place in the bag. Cornell's record is seven wins and five losses, the loss to Penn on Friday at Ithaca pulling the varsity out of a tie for first. Harvard, if it can defeat Yale in both games this week, will just nose Cornell out of the second stall, but fans are inclined to believe this practically impossible, due to Harvard's lack of pitching strength. If Harvard does win both, she cannot nose out Columbia from first place, because of a tie with Princeton earlier in the season.

Cornell ended the season with a team batting average of .247, which put the varsity in fifth place in the league averages. Cornell's fielding average of .958 placed her third. Columbia led the league in both fielding and hitting. Cornell can boast no regular hitter in the .300 class, although Miscall in ten games led the batters in league games with .297. Kreimer, in only four games, batted .429.

Cornellian Council Elects Becker, Palmer

THE CORNELLIAN COUNCIL held its annual meeting on Saturday morning in Morrill Hall. The chief business was the ratification of the committee's nomination of Archie M. Palmer '18 as executive secretary to succeed the late Harold Flack '12. This was unanimously endorsed by those present. Mr. Palmer takes office officially October 1.

A. M. Palmer, Secretary

Mr. Palmer, who has had a successful record in the college administration field, was graduated from Cornell, receiving his A.B. degree in 1920 following his early training in the public schools of Hoboken, N. J., and New York. Although a member of the class of '18 his college course was interrupted by the war from 1917-1920. He served in the United States, France and Germany as 1st lieut. of infantry in the regular army. He received his M.A. from Columbia University in 1927 and will receive his Ph.D. from that institution upon the completion of his dissertation on "The College Presidency." From 1920 to 1923 he served as secretary and acting dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Cornell.

Following one year of sales research with the Procter and Gamble Company in Cincinnati, he went to Columbia University as alumni secretary, managing editor of the Columbia Alumni News, and secretary of the Columbia Alumni Fund. He held these positions from 1925 to 1927, at which time he was elected assistant director of the American Institute of International Education. At the same time he served as executive secretary of the Franco-American Student Exchange and executive director of the American-German Student Exchange.

Mr. Palmer's undergraduate career at Cornell was an active one, during which he achieved the highest scholastic honors as well as having been prominent in intercollegiate debating circles. He was elected to honorary societies of Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Delta Kappa, Delta Sigma Rho, and Pi Gamma Mu.

He is a member of the American Historical Association, the American Committee of International Student Service, and of the Executive Committee of the American Hungarian Foundation. For his work in behalf of foreign education he was decorated by Czecho-Slovakia and made an officer of the Czecho-Slovak Order of the White Lion. ARCHIE M. PALMER

Mr. Palmer was born in Hoboken, N. J., in 1896, the son of Robert K. and Sarah G. (MacInnes) Palmer, and was married to Elizabeth Cheatham of Atlanta, Ga., on June 24, 1930.

Neal Becker, President

Neal D. Becker '05 was elected president of the Council and spoke briefly of the fine outlook for next year. A rising vote of appreciation was given to Paul A. Schoellkopf, retiring president, for his fine service during what were perhaps the most difficult years the Council has seen.

Neal Dow Becker of 375 Park Avenue, New York, president of the Intertype Corporation of Brooklyn, was chosen by the directors as president of the Cornellian Council for 1934-35.

As an undergraduate Mr. Becker was on the football squad, glee club, intercollege debating teams, and won the '94 Memorial Prize. He is a member of Sphinx Head and Delta Chi. Upon leaving college he founded with Charles E. Kelley '04 the law firm of Kelley & Becker, which continues in New York City.

He is president of Intertype Corporation which, with its subsidiaries, Intertype Limited in London and Intertype Setzmaschinen in Berlin, does a worldwide business in the manufacture and sale of typesetting machines. He is a trustee of Kings County Savings Bank, and a director of New York Dock Company and other corporations. Mr. Becker has been active in the Cornellian Council, having been chairman of its committee on bequests. For three years he was president of the Cornell Club of New York.

Reunions Almost Reach Record

Continued from page 373] daughters, many of whom are future Cornellians. The Class of '84 had some grandchildren, too. Among the women, 1914 took the prize for costume—a red silk cape reaching half-way down to the waist, and very decorative with white dresses and white hats.

The Class of 1919 was the host at the rally, and followed the lead of other classes in recent years, by providing entertainment from all sources. President Farrand's address was the center of interest, but Jay Fassett '12 telling the cork arm story brought down the house, and Bruce Boyce '35 was recalled many times to sing for the crowd which oozed well out into the lobbies of Bailey Hall. Wallace Quail '19 presided.

An innovation at the rally was the turning out of the house lights, presumably to center attention on the stage, but the alumni didn't like it. Half the fun is spotting familiar faces among the audience, and it is to be hoped that the darkness will not be an annual occurrence.

Sunday was given over to informal visiting, and the reunion ended with Senior Singing combined with Class Day exercises. The attention there was centered upon the graduating class, and few alumni were present. On Friday night, however, the reunioners sat with the seniors and joined with them in their songs, giving a fine performance.

As this is written another class joins the ranks of the alumni, and from the evidences of this reunion, next year should see a record set for all time, both in numbers, and in quality and variety of events.

DRAMATIC CLUB SHOW

The Cornell Dramatic Club's senior week offering, Gold in the Hills or the Dead Sister's Secret, directed by W. H. Stainton and A. M. Drummond, played Friday and Saturday nights to capacity crowds of reunioning alumni. Players and audience combined to enact this last and best show of the season. A hit on its introduction last year, the lusty drammer this year reached the heights. The villain was more dastardly than before; his manner more sinister. Beneath the flannel shirt of the hero there pounded an even more honest heart; virtue rang in his voice, flashed in his clear blue eyes. The fair heroine was sweeter, more innocent. From start to finish the thriller was superbly played. The audience was captured in the opening scene and stayed with the players throughout. They loudly hissed the villain; nobly cheered the hero and sighed at the plight of the heroine.

To those who follow the activities of the Club, the hand of Alec Drummond was visible. No ragged edges showed; no slighted details were apparent to mark the production as other than the work of professionals. The costumes and make-up were as well done as the setting of the stage. Frequent comments were heard between acts that indicated the hearty approval of the alumni. "Don't you think it was much better done this year?" "My, the plays are better than when we were here."

For those who haven't seen the play, Gold in the Hills is a real old-time melodrama, done in the real old-time way, wherein the villain is marked as much by his curling mustachio as by his black cloak, cruel laugh and oily manner. The hero is bare-faced, flannel shirted, and rugged.

Nell, the farmer's daughter, is seduced by the villain Handsome Harry and thereby earns the hatred of the hero Jack Dalton. For a time Harry holds all the top cards. He commits a murder, succeeds in throwing the blame on Jack who becomes a fugitive from justice. He also holds the mortgage on the old homestead, by which he attempts to force Nell to go with him to the wicked city. Her father catches her with lighted cigarette in hand and promptly disowns her and turns her out. Once in the city she again falls into the hands of Harry, only to be saved by Jack who had found honest work as a singer in a Bowery saloon.

On Christmas Eve the whole crew turn up at the farmhouse one by one. Nell comes back seeking forgiveness. The villain comes to foreclose the mortgage and turn the old man and the younger daughter out into the driving snow. The hero runs in with the manhunters still on his trail. He produces the money to pay the mortgage and becomes reconciled with Nell. The villain is betrayed by the dead sister's secret and as the final blow to him, Hawkshaw, the detective, rushes in and clamps the handcuffs on his wrists, charging him with the murder and exonerating Jack.

The production was replete with spirited lines such as, "Beneath this flannel shirt there beats an honest heart"; "I know he ain't done right by our Nell"; "Lips that touch liquor shall never touch mine." The musical accompaniment featured "Hearts and Flowers," "Sweet Marie" and other by-gone airs.

Excellent bit: Marie Prole as old Kate, the broken-down, whiskey-loving Bowery hag.

The cast included: Rose Gaynor, Betty Alexander, Monroe Hellinger, Jane Zobel, Richard Stark, Marie Prole, Dorothy Buckingham, Isabel White, and Dorothy Sarnoff.

J. B.

SIDNEY KAUFAN Grad. of Passaic, N. J., has been awarded a Charles A. Coffin Foundation fellowship by the General Electric Company, with which he will continue his researches in physics.

DRAMATIC CLUB Ends Great Year

Since its 25th Anniversary program in March of this year, the Cornell Dramatic Club has presented three major productions and three sets of one-act plays in a total of twelve performances. Especially interesting to many Cornellians were the one-act groups, all of which represented original Cornell work.

The first program of original plays, given early in April, included Escape, by Seymour Gross '35; Who Knows Best, by Ruth Beck '34; Night Routine, by Henry Hillman '34; and Be It Ever So Humble, by Monroe Hellinger '34. Like most of the Cornell work presented this year, these plays were acted, directed, and staged by undergraduates, and were prepared in the University class in play-writing.

This group was followed by the quadrennial Freshman Women's play, Alice in Wonderland. Two performances were given, Alice herself being played alternately by Jean Bradley and Ruth McCurdy. The Alice Gerstenberg adaptation was again used, and special settings, after the manner of the Tenniel illustrations, were designed by Colby Lewis '34. A second program of original one-acts, presented the last week in April, included Draw One, by Stanley Russo '34; The Man Is Dead, by Douglas Watt '34; The Taunted, by Arnold Fraleigh '34; and Six Intellectuals in Search of Reality, by Gabriel Levenson '34.

Two of this year's Forbes Heermans prize plays, together with two other one-act pieces written by members of the class in playwriting in 1932, were presented by the Laboratory Theatre on May 11 and 12. The program consisted of This Is What Happened, winner of the first Heermans prize, by C. B. Moss '34; Dollar Deliriums, winner of the second prize, by Avery Cohan '34; An Affair of Honor, by Hyman Yudewitz '28; and Our Good Brother Joseph, by Philip Freund '29. Awarded for the first time this year, the Heermans Prizes for original one-act plays were made available through a bequest of the late Forbes Heermans '78.

The 1934 Revue, the seventh edition of the Club's annual Music Hall Night and General Frolic, played to audiences totaling more than 1,300, including the usual colorful Spring Day group. In addition to the customary skits, novelties, and burlesques, most of which were by Cornellian contributors, the program featured original music by James Wilson '35, Douglas Watt '34, Seymour Gross '35, and Clifford Goodman '37, and special dance routines under the direction of Jack Bond Grad. The skits included The Absent-minded Professor Has Breakfast, by Sidney Kingsley '28, author of Men in White and recent Pulitzer Prize winner.

The season was brought to a close by a Senior Week revival of the 19th century thriller, Gold in the Hills. (See col. 1.)

COMMENCEMENT—1934

The 66th class to be graduated from Cornell University received its degrees Monday, with advice from President Livingston Farrand to play its part with the new social and economic order.

The president's parting message was modified with the injunction that the new crop of alumni should also strive to retain what was best in the old order, and not permit the New Deal to go so far that it creates new difficulties and new wrongs.

The commencement exercises were held, in accordance with Cornell's new practice, in the Cornell Crescent overlooking the Schoellkopf athletic field. Except for a stiff wind, the weather was ideal for the open-air ceremony.

The nearly 1,100 candidates for degrees, in the traditional garb of black caps and gowns, proceeded in a double line to the stands from the Drill Hall. Before taking their seats in the center, they formed a lane through which passed President Farrand, faculty members and trustees. Student marshals were Frederick W. Garber, Jr., of Glendale, Ohio, and John H. Stresen-Reuter of Hinsdale, Ill.

Salome's Processional March in E flat was played by Prof. Harold D. Smith, the University organist, its strains being carried to the field over a loud-speaker system which also conveyed the speaking to the wide-flung audience.

After the singing of "America" by the assembly, the Rev. Dr. Martin D. Hardin, pastor of First Presbyterian Church, pronounced the invocation. Col. J. J. Fulmer, commandant of the R.O.T.C., acted as chief marshal and presented the candidates for commissions as second lieutenants in the Army Reserve Corps. The various candidates for degrees were presented by their respective deans, and President Farrand formally awarded the diplomas to them by groups.

In his brief commencement address, President Farrand reminded the new graduates that they are going out into a world torn by dissension, in which democracy is being challenged as never before in history by dictatorships, tyranny and the menace of war.

Turning to the immediate problem in America, Doctor Farrand declared: "I welcome the New Deal, so far as it is an honest effort to establish a workable new economic and social system, and so far as it is a recognition that group and individual prejudice has no place in the civilization of the future."

He pointed out, however, that the danger in the New Deal is that encountered in all reforms, "the human habit and instinct to go too far—to lose sight of the original aims and to create new difficulties and new wrongs in place of the old. It is there that clear thinking and fearless action are needed."

He also advised the class that "in days of turmoil, it is only too easy to express personal and group prejudice," and that they should help to counteract that tendency.

The president held out for the preservation of a proper individualism in the new order, but said: "Rugged individualism is too often a rugged insistence on special privilege for one group above others."

The thing most needed in our quest for new ways of living, he said, is "recognition that the eternal principles of honor, truth, justice and liberty must be maintained."

The exercises were concluded with the playing of the "Alma Mater" by the organist, while the audience stood in silence. Doctor Hardin then spoke the benediction.

The entire program consumed only half an hour.

NEW DIRECTOR
of Civil Engineering

As the ALUMNI NEWS goes to press, the appointment is announced of Professor Solomon C. Hollister of Purdue University as the new director of the School of Civil Engineering. Professor Hollister is a structural engineer, and is widely known for his work and writings in that field. A picture and full biography of the new director will be published in a later issue. Since the resignation, three years ago, of Professor Barnes as director, the School has been governed by a committee—headed during the past year by Professor Paul H. Underwood '07.

S.P.E.E. CONFERENCE

Nearly a thousand members of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education met at Cornell this week for the forty-second annual meeting of the organization, with headquarters at Willard Straight Hall.

Members of the engineering faculty of Cornell and their wives acted as hosts and hostesses to the convention and planned an elaborate program of conferences, papers, lectures, dinners, teas, and parties. Engineering educators were divided into twenty-one general groups, for conferences, and about fifteen talks were scheduled each morning and afternoon for the first three days of the meeting. The latter half of the week was given over to general meetings.

Although the mornings and afternoons were devoted for the most part to the discussion of educational problems and research methods, there were interspersed throughout the entire week a large number of dinner and luncheon meetings, and teas and a large bridge party for wives and women delegates.

Included in the general program were a series of conferences on laboratory uses of models in structures and hydraulics, which consisted of a special series of lectures, and two large exhibitions of models which were housed in the hydraulics laboratory at Triphammer Falls, and in Lincoln Hall.

Other conferences included those on civil engineering, chemical engineering, cooperative engineering education, deans and administrative officers, drawing, electrical engineering, electronics and electrical communications, engineering economy, engineering research, English, fluid mechanics, heat transfer, industrial engineering, junior colleges, laboratory procedure, machine design, mathematics, mechanical engineering, orientation of freshmen, and technical institutes.

The general sessions of the society were presided over by W. E. Wickenden, president of the society. Provost Albert R. Mann '04 welcomed the delegates and visitors to Cornell. Following the first business session, there was a series of symposiums and discussions.

ALUMNI TRUSTEES

At the annual meeting of the Cornell Alumni Corporation held in Baker Laboratory Saturday morning, the following alumni trustees were announced elected: Charles H. Blair '98, of New York; James W. Parker '08 of Detroit, and Maurice C. Burritt '08 of Hilton. Blair led the field with 7,772 votes; Parker received 6,322, and Burritt 5,393. The other candidates finished in the following order: Andrew J. Whinery '10 of Newark; Charles M. Chuckrow '11 of New York; Dr. J. Homer Cudmore '05 of New York; and C. Rodman Stull '07 of Philadelphia.

The Week on the Campus

THE ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION'S announcement that it would no longer take a Victorian attitude in the matter of bathing suits has not been without certain definite responses.

A PROFESSOR, who desires to be nameless, was inspired to reach for his harp and sing thus—

"The hairy ape
May now undrape
His shaggy chest
And none molest.

Till winter come
He may protrude
His bulging tum
Completely nude.

Thus do the rules
Change with the times,
For swimming pools,
Must have their climes."

BUT BEEBE LAKE isn't the only swimming pool around here. Each of the State parks at Buttermilk, at Enfield and Taughannock has a very nice swimming pool. And the State parks have announced that they are upholding the faith and insisting on bathing shirts as well as pants. Mr. William Marshall, Ithaca's popular and efficient chief of police, says in print that he doesn't care what goes on at the pools (all being outside the city limits) but that anyone who doesn't wear plenty of clothes while driving through town will be arrested at once and have the city jail wrapped around him.

THE SITUATION may be summed up by saying that while it isn't necessary to wear a shirt it's highly desirable to have one handy at all times.

DR. GEORGE M. SUTTON, Cornell artist and ornithologist, who left here in April to study the nesting habits of the Marbled Murrelet in the Canadian Northwest, reports progress. He hasn't found a nest yet but he has an egg—the second one ever obtained. His expedition (that of the Carnegie Institute) is now in the Straits of Georgia but expects to move on shortly to make special studies of Franklin's grouse and Ross's goose.

PRESIDENT FARRAND addressed the Ithaca Rotary Club on Wednesday. In common with a good many other public men at this time he elected to talk about the prevention of war and the creation of International good will. But—as you might suspect—he did not handle the subject in the usual trite manner. It was the substance of his remarks that the people of Ithaca couldn't do much good by holding mass meetings and adopting resolutions, but they might do a vast amount of good just by being nice to the hundreds of foreign students who live among us. Admitting, of course, that adopting resolutions is easier and takes less time.

THIS DEPARTMENT'S deductions published in a recent issue, that the person who advertized for a ride to California after June 16 was a senior, turned out to be all wrong. Mr. J. Du Pratt White wrote in, pointing out convincingly the blow-holes in our deductive reasoning, and then Mr. John Reynolds Young's letter ruined the whole debate by introducing facts. Mr. Young is the man who wants a ride to California and who inserted the advertisement. He's a crew compet and has to attend at Poughkeepsie. The races will be over on the 16th and then Mr. Young wants a ride to California right away. He has not yet secured one in spite of all the publicity.

ZINCK'S, Inc., which has just been granted a charter by the State of New York, will attempt to revive the traditions of "Theodore Zinck's," by re-opening a drink emporium on North Aurora Street where the old grads refreshed themselves in the days before Prohibition. The new concern is chartered to do a general restaurant business, and has a capital of $1,000 in ten shares of $100 each. None of the directors is a Cornell man.

DEAR OLD POP WRIGHT, who is Frank Ayres Wright '79, for fifty-five years a practicing architect in New York City, is sitting for his portrait, now partially completed, in the Franklin Hall studio of Professor Olaf M. Brauner. The picture when finished is to hang in the Cornell Club of New York, of which he is a founder, and the only surviving incorporator.

GORDON H. BUTLER '34, of Perry, N. Y., and R. D. Wilson '35, of Caledonia, N. Y., have won a two-day trip to the Buffalo Stock Yards, for excellence in livestock judging at the College of Agriculture. The two were rated at the top in judging two classes each of beef, horses and swine, and three classes of sheep. They were members of the Cornell stock judging team which competed recently in contests at Briarcliff Farms, and Pine Plains, and at Penn State where the team took first honors. The trip to Buffalo is donated by Otto V. Moesch, general superintendent of the yards.

CORNELL UNDERGRADUATE OPINION has declared itself in favor of the policies of the Roosevelt Administration, 3 to 2, by means of a straw poll conducted by the Literary Digest and the Cornell Daily Sun, the results announced in the Senior Week Issue of the Sun show. The combined vote of Cornell and six other universities showed just about the same results. Forty-seven states have voted in favor of the administration's New Deal, but a poll of bankers shows a slight margin against the present policies, as might be expected.

JAMES A. KENNEDY, M.D., has resigned as professor of bacteriology in the School of Medicine, University of Louisville, and has accepted the directorship of the recently combined bacteriological and serological laboratories of the Louisville City Hospital and Department of Health.

ANNOUNCEMENT has recently been made by Professor R. P. Sibley, Secretary of the University Faculty, that the Luana L. Messenger Memorial Prize for 1934 has been awarded to R. R. Palmer, Grad. The Juliette MacMonnies Courant prize in French has been awarded to Sophia Press, '34.

A SMALL REUNION planned by Hugh Herbert, former Cornellian, now a cinema funnyman, to take place in Hollywood, fell flat the other day, we are informed. Herbert thought it a good idea to round up other Cornellian filmsters, have a party. Invitations were issued to Adolph Menjou, Phillip Reed, only to find that Menjou after making three pictures in a row, had gone for a vacation, and Reed had just been loaned to another company to make a new picture. He apparently didn't realize that there are other Cornell film actors, Jay Fasset, Franchot Tone, Frank Morgan, and Dorothy Tree, not to mention Mrs. Laddie Sanford (Mary Duncan).

ALUMNI VISITING Ithaca during reunions were greatly pleased with the remodelled Dutch Kitchen of the Ithaca Hotel. The new place, located back of the old Dutch Kitchen, is done in pine paneling which reaches to the ceiling. Chandeliers consist of old wagon wheels with lights set on the rims. A twenty-foot bar stretches along one side of the place, behind which Red Lamphier, Hank James, and Jack McKinney officiate. Old sample rooms were cut away to provide for the new quarters, which furnish a spacious, low-ceilinged room with tables and chairs which fit in admirably to the rest of the surroundings.

GIFTS TO CORNELL

During the academic year Cornell University has announced the receipt of more than $900,000 in gifts from various sources.

The full list of gifts will be reported July 1. The $500,000 left by the estate of Henry H. Westinghouse '75 represents the maturity of a trust fund established by him in 1925, and from which he received the income during his lifetime. The Westinghouse Fund has no restrictions except that preference should be given to the College of Engineering in the use of the income.

The $250,000 gift left by C. Sidney Shepard, Yale graduate and a trustee of Cornell for 32 years, is to be added to the permanent endowment of the University and is to be known as the Sidney and Elizabeth D. Shepard Fund in honor of his parents.

It was announced last week that an outright gift of $100,000 to be used for the operating expenses of the New York-Cornell Medical College in New York was received from the General Education Board.

John N. Ostrom '77, father of Cornell rowing, has signalized the 25th anniversary of the Cornellian Council by the gift of $5,000 to establish an undergraduate scholarship in the School of Civil Engineering. Mr. Ostrom was elected captain of the crew in 1874, when Cornell had rowed in two regattas of the Rowing Association of American Colleges, placing fifth each time. Coached by him, Cornell swept the regatta in 1875 and 1876, and the preeminence of Cornell on the water was established. He left Cornell in 1877 and has been a consulting bridge engineer in Chicago. At 80 he is still active. He attended the recent reunions.

At the annual meeting of the Cornellian Council Saturday, it was reported that the alumni fund raised during the year 1933-34 will amount to approximately $70,000. This represents a decrease of only 7 per cent for the corresponding period last year. Over 5,000 Cornell alumni have contributed to the fund, which is turned over annually to the university without restriction as to its use.

Special mention was given the Class of '34 for having successfully conducted its class memorial campaign. Over 65 per cent of the class pledged annual gifts to the alumni fund as their class memorial. This record is regarded as outstanding, in view of the prevailing economic conditions. It is anticipated that the annual gifts from the Class of '34 will furnish approximately $3,000 in unrestricted funds for the use of the university. The senior class campaign was conducted by John N. Brownrigg, Jr., chairman, and Starbuck Smith, his assistant, with Miss Henrietta Deubler representing the women, and the following team captains: Messrs. S. B. Ketchum, R. H. Campe, H. G. Nebeker, J. B. Jenkins, R. D. Tyler, J. K. Havemeyer, and the Misses Margaret Bentley, Ruth Boheim, Hazel Ellenwood and O. B. Jones. R. S. Hutchings was in charge of the publicity program.

NORWOOD NAMED President of Alfred

J. Nelson Norwood '15 Ph.D., acting president of Alfred University since the death of Dr. Paul E. Titsworth in December 1933, has been named the new head of that institution by the Board of Trustees of Alfred, the announcement coming at the opening of the 98th commencement exercises last week. Norwood was University Fellow in American History at Cornell during 1909-10, and received his Ph.D. four years later.

Emmett B. McNatt '29 A.M., '32 Ph.D. was appointed substitute associate professor of economics for one year, at Alfred.

CORNELL TWINS

The blind doe that was sent to the New York State Veterinary College at Cornell in December 1933 for care, treatment, and study, has given birth to twin fawns, but a goat is being used to rear them.

Born May 27, the twins are nursed by their foster mothers, to save them from being trampled under foot by their mother. While not as numerous as the renowned Canadian quintuplets, the Cornell deer twins are just as popular, and their quarters during reunion time were besieged with visitors.

The Veterinary College has handed the mother over to the department of animal nutrition of the College of Agriculture, in whose care she now remains. Her blindness is caused by cataracts, which began, apparently, in mature years. She is believed to be about ten years old.

The Animal Nutrition Department developed food cakes of soy beans and molasses last year which were used by the State Conservation Department to feed the wild herds last winter when food was scarce.

CONGRESSMAN DANIEL A. REED '99, of Dunkirk, N. Y., has emerged from the fight over the tariff bill as the leading critic of President Franklin D. Roosevelt's administration's policies. Reed took a firm stand in the recent discussions on the floor of the House as a supporter of a high protective tariff.

ACACIA, student society closely affiliated with the Masons, recently bought a new fraternity home at 318 Highland road, to which it will soon move from its present location at 614 East Buffalo Street. The house is the former residence of the family of Henry Shaler Williams, head of the department of geology.

MUSICAL CLUBS CONCERT

The annual reunion and senior week Musical Clubs Concert was, to vary the monotony, a "Pop" concert. Incidentally it was one of the very best of recent years. Held in the auditorium of the new Home Economics Building, it turned away a good many people who wanted to come. This was unfortunate, but because of many counter attractions on that evening, the crowd could not have filled Bailey Hall and the acoustics in the new hall were excellent.

The program, given below, gives only a sketchy idea of the presentation. Bruce Boyce, as usual, was the outstanding individual singer, and his rendering of De Glory Road one of his best performances. The instrumental club gave a very fine rendition of their selections, and the "Funsters Quartette" startled the audience by singing classical music and doing it well. A few sea chanteys, new to most of the alumni as glee club songs, drew great applause.

To George L. Coleman '95 and Eric Dudley, "coaches", go congratulations for a great year.

The program:

1. (a) Alma Mater Songs of Cornell
(b) Crew Song Songs of Cornell
THE GLEE CLUB
2. Ballet Egyptien, No. 1 Luigini
INSTRUMENTAL CLUB
3. (a) Silent Strings Granville Bantock
(b) Bedouin Song James H. Rogers
THE GLEE CLUB
4. Hap Hillborn and his Accordion
5. (a) Eight Bells

Know Cornell!!

Dear Cornell Alumnus:

YOU KNEW the undergraduate Cornell of your day—you have maintained alumni contact with the campus through the Alumni News, the Cornellian Council and occasional visits to Ithaca. But do you know undergraduate Cornell today?

YOU STILL have much in common with the new generation of students, but every new class ushers in a different order. The University, like all things, is constantly changing. Witness the crisis in the athletic situation.

YOU CAN KEEP UP with the shifting trends—you can know the direction of the undergraduate interests.

AREOPAGUS, The Cornell Journal of Opinion, is the undergraduate voice-box of the campus; through it comes discussion by students and faculty of vital University problems. Its dynamic freshness will bring back to you the old thrill of being "in college."

JESSE ROOT GRANT '78, youngest and last surviving son of President Ulysses S. Grant, died on June 8 at his home in Los Angeles. He was seventy-six years old. He was born in St. Louis and went to school in Washington while his father was President. He entered the University with the Class of '87 to study mining engineering but left in his junior year to travel abroad with his father. In 1925 he published a volume, In the Days of my Father, General Grant. He made his career, however, independent of his father's achievements, and even differed with him politically. He unsuccessfully sought the Democratic nomination of his party against William Jennings Bryan in 1908. Surviving are his first wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Grant, from whom he was separated by divorce, and their two children, Major Capman Grant, U.S.A., and Mrs. William P. Cronan, widow of Capt. William P. Cronan, once known as the "most popular man in the Navy."

CHARLES L. INSLEE '95 M.E., executive vice-president of the Sussex and Merchants National Bank of Newton, N. J., died of heart disease on June 4 at his home in Fredon Township. He was 60 years old. He had been a practicing civil engineer in New York City for a number of years before he retired and went there to live. He was a highly regarded member of his class, and prominent in the Alpha Delta Phi Fraternity and the Alpha Delta Phi Club of New York. For many years he was president of the Guaranty Construction Corporation of New York.
