State Scholarships Prized

Increasing Number of Candidates Try for Them Each Year—8,000 Since University Opened

The State Tuition Scholarships in Cornell University are attracting an increasing number of candidates each year, although full tuition is no longer available through the scholarship, according to Avery W. Skinner, director of the examination division of the State Department of Education.

A change last year in the education law requires holders of the scholarships to pay $100 a year towards their tuition. The average tuition fee at Cornell is now $350 per year, so that the value of the State Tuition Scholarship is now $1000 for the four years.

This fact did not decrease the number of candidates for examination, as 593 tried the tests in 1927 as compared with 567 in 1926, 550 in 1925, and 490 in 1924. One scholarship is awarded for each Assembly district in the State, making 150 in all.

The actual cost to Cornell per student last year was $665.69, according to figures compiled by Charles A. Brewer, auditor of the University. The difference between the actual cost and the payment of tuition by the student is met from the endowment and State and Federal funds.

More than eight thousand State Tuition Scholarships have been awarded since 1868, the year the University was opened. Tuition in 1868 was $30 per year.

The work of the State examiner has been increased by the larger number of candidates, 3,474 examination papers being filed in 1927, as compared with 2,926 in 1924. Certain subjects are more popular than others. English, algebra, and geometry are required. Interest in French, American history, and chemistry has grown, but in Greek, Spanish, and physics it has declined.

NEW BUILDING ASSURED

In the judgment of James R. Robinson, LL.B. '10, Assemblyman from Tompkins County, the cutting of the appropriation for the new Plant Industry Building at the College of Agriculture from $1,250,000 to $1,100,000 will not affect the completion of the building.

The original appropriation was reduced $150,000 by Governor Alfred E. Smith in his annual budget message to the State Legislature. Apprehension was expressed in some quarters that the sum recommended in the budget would prove insufficient.

Mr. Robinson, who is a member of the Ways and Means Committee of the Legislature, has said, however, that unexpended balances in other funds would probably be available for the Plant Industry Building. He has pointed out that there is even now a balance available from the original appropriation of $100,000 for the construction of the foundations, which were recently completed.

It is expected that the Legislature will act on bills now in committee in the near future so that contracts may be let in the spring.

Hugh Jennings Dies

Noted Baseball Player and Manager Coached Cornell Teams 1900 to 1904—Studied Law Here

Hugh Jennings, coach of the Cornell baseball team from 1900 to 1904 and at the same time a student in the Cornell Law School, died early Wednesday morning, February 1, in Scranton, Pa., after a long battle for health.

Even today on the Campus, twenty-four years after he left the University to practice law and to begin a career in major league baseball that has seldom been equaled, there is a wealth of anecdote about "Hughey."

The story of his famous plunge into the empty swimming pool in the Gymnasium still lives, although it has often been distorted. Jennings himself never quite lived the story down.

It was his custom to play handball after baseball practice, topping off his exercise with a shower and a swim. He was known as a "shower bath tenor," carefree and full of life. He would jump swiftly and directly into the pool. One day he failed to notice that the water had been drained. A cord that had barred the doorway was broken down, and Jennings, following custom, jumped as usual, only to land on the bottom of the empty tank. He was not injured, and he appeared in classes the next day as usual.

During his stay at Cornell he held an unusual position. Although he came to coach baseball, he decided to study law and entered the Law School as an undergraduate in the fall of 1900, after he had turned out a successful nine in the spring of that year. During his five seasons as coach his teams won 65 and lost 61 games, tying one.

He was a member of Phi Delta Theta, Phi Delta Phi, Chancery, and Sphinx Head. He did not take a degree.

As a boy Hughey worked in the anthracite mines at Scranton. Later he went to St. Bonaventure College, where he soon proved his ability as a baseball player. Then came his Cornell career, after which he became manager of the Detroit American League Club which, under his leadership, won the only three pennants in its history. He led the Tigers to World Series championships in 1907, 1908, and 1909.

At that period he was bringing "color" into the national game. His famous "ee-yah" yell became a byword with the fans, and he used to delight spectators at games by pulling grass along the coaching lines.

He managed the Detroit Club for fourteen years, also practicing law. In 1920 he became assistant manager to John McGraw, manager of the New York National League Club, and was a big factor in the success of the Club in succeeding years.

His health failed in 1925, and he gave up his activity in baseball. He later returned to his home in Scranton. On Friday, January 27, he attended a meeting of the Traders' Bank of Scranton, of which he was a director. His final illness, meningitis, seized him upon his return home.

William G. (Billy) Evans '05, for many years an umpire in the major leagues, adds to the stories about "Hughey" the following:

"My first introduction to Hughey Jennings was at Cornell back in 1902. I was a freshman. He was a law student, also the baseball coach. In an effort to get a line on the new material, Jennings was conducting a fall workout and had all the first-year men indulge in batting practice against the first-string varsity pitcher, by name, Chase [Jerome B. Chase '03].

"I recall vividly how the first time at bat I hit the second ball pitched to me over the right field fence. It was a curve ball on which I had pulled away badly. I somehow managed to hit it late and because I had much strength in my arms, drove it out of the lot, even though I had been badly fooled. As I trotted around the bases, I pictured Jennings patting me on the back and holding me up to the rest of the freshmen as the ideal batsman. But as I crossed the home plate, he greeted me thus:

"'What a lucky drive that was! The ball fooled you badly. You had one foot in the waterbucket, your strength alone saved you. I couldn't praise you if you hit the ball twice as far with the form you showed.'

"Then he proceeded to correct my stance and style. On my next appearance at the plate, I followed his instruction and while I didn't hit the ball ten feet, he shouted encouragement.

"That introduction taught me a great lesson. It was typical of Jennings. He believed there was a right way to do everything. He could forgive failure if the proper effort was made. He gave no credit to success achieved improperly.

"Jennings was always a square shooter, game as a pebble, and one thing he wouldn't stand for was the old alibi. No player got any sympathy from him when he came back to the bench and started to put the umpire on the 'pan.' While Jennings always gave his players a considerable leeway, when he did give an order, he wanted it followed out.

"Hughey Jennings deserves a place among the immortals of the game. He first won undying fame as a player. Baseball has produced few better short-stops. As a manager he was an even greater attraction. His method of coaching was unique and original. The fans liked it and showed their approval at the turnstiles.

"I am sure the enthusiasm and effort that Jennings put into his work undermined his health. It is not reasonable to suppose that any human being could, day after day, start yelling in the first inning and continue it throughout the game, over a season of six months, without paying the penalty.

"Baseball owes much to Hughey Jennings. He was the originator of color as far as the national pastime is concerned."

FARM AND HOME WEEK NEAR

For the first time in twenty-one years, the week known as Farmers' Week becomes Farm and Home Week, and it will be held this year from February 13 to February 18 at the Colleges of Agriculture and Home Economics.

Hundreds of lectures, discussions, demonstrations, practice periods, social hours, motion pictures, readings, and addresses are included in the program. The visitors will find something to take every minute of their time.

The principal addresses will be given each afternoon at two o'clock. The speakers include Dean Albert R. Mann '04, who will welcome the delegates, President Farrand, Professor Frank B. Morrison, director of the Geneva Experiment Station, Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, former governor of Wyoming, and William O. Thompson, president emeritus of Ohio State University.

Among the organizations which will hold meetings in connection with the Farm and Home Week program are the Alumni Association of the College of Agriculture, the New York Cooperative Seed Potato Association, and the New York Seed Improvement Cooperative Association. Conferences will be held for distributors of feeds, fertilizers, and seeds, for young farmers' clubs, and for home-makers. Other group meetings are the Grange Conference, Rural Education Conference, and Rural Church Conference.

COURSES FOR INDIANS

A bill designed to permit the Extension Department of the Colleges of Agriculture and Home Economics to increase its educational facilities for Indians on State reservations has been introduced in the New York Legislature by Senator James S. Truman '96. The bill, amending the education law, would permit the selection of Indians for a full four-year course in the colleges.

At present the Extension Service is enabled to give short courses for Indians and to carry on extension work among them. The bill will provide for a more complete education for promising Indians.

ATHLETICS

Basketball Race Resumed

Cornell, now tied for first place in the Intercollegiate Basketball League, will resume court activity Saturday in the Drill Hall with Pennsylvania as its opponent in the first game played between League teams since January 25, when Princeton defeated Cornell at Princeton, 30 to 18.

Cornell and Dartmouth are the teams tied for the league with two victories and one defeat each. The Cornell-Pennsylvania match is the only league game scheduled this week, and a victory for the Red and White quintet will give it undisputed possession of first place. A victory for Pennsylvania will move the Quaker five into a tie with Dartmouth for first place.

RANSOM '05 GUIDES FARE FIGHT

The recent opening of a fight by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company of New York for a seven-cent fare on its subway and elevated lines has brought William L. Ransom '05 into the limelight.

Ransom, for some years chief counsel of the Public Service Commission, has been retained by the company in its action for a higher fare. It is probable that the case will go to the courts for settlement, and it is understood that the company's ground will be that the present five-cent fare is confiscatory.

Ransom was the attorney for the Consolidated Gas Company and affiliated companies in a legal battle several years ago in which the company invoked the power of the courts to set aside the rate-fixing powers of the State and City. At that time he won the company's case against the dollar gas law on the ground that it was illegal and void because it was confiscatory and in contravention of the Fourteenth Amendment.

PSYCHOLOGISTS TO CONFER

Professor Karl M. Dallenbach, Ph.D. '13, of the Department of Psychology, has been invited to attend a conference of experimental psychologists late in March under the auspices of the Division of Anthropology and Psychology of the National Research Council. The place of meeting has not yet been determined.

The conference proposes to determine whether plans for the furthering of research and the development of researchers in psychology can be made in such a way as to obtain the benefits of cooperation without lessening individual initiative and institutional responsibility.

Professor Dallenbach has also been elected to the executive committee of the American Psychological Association, the first Cornell representative since 1913.

SPORT STUFF

This year the University is permitting the Ithaca Automobile Show to be held in the Drill Hall. It's examination week and the place isn't being used for anything else anyway. The present dynasty has a tendency to do little graceful acts like that which create a tremendous amount of good feeling and against which there can be no obstacle other than an unfortunate and vanishing tradition of aloofness.

There are few towns of fifty times the population which can put on a show comparable to the one Ithaca stages in the Drill Hall.

But I'm against automobile shows. They produce discontented women and houses divided against themselves.

There is one Lincoln sport model on which they have knocked off thirty-five cents in order to bring the price under $6,000. It's a symphony in glossy black and glistening silver. When you sit in that for a while and then go out and ease yourself into a 1923 Ford you have a slight tendency to retch.

There's a La Salle, too, in green and yellow which is strongly advised against—albeit alluring. That exotic note of luxury is all right in a town where they know you, but in a strange place a tropical bus like that creates the impression that the person driving it is not legally married to the other one. There is that about it.

Most of the crowd, of course, came to get a glimpse of that new Ford they bought last year and haven't seen yet. It turned out to be a grand roller skate and worth waiting for. The children, however, would feel better if they knew definitely that Henry had quit selling them and had started to make them.

DEFENDS MODERATE DRINKING

A four-year survey on "alcohol and its effects on the human body," recently completed by Dr. Charles R. Stockard, professor of anatomy at the Cornell Medical College in New York, brings the conclusion that moderate drinking of liquors, wines, and alcoholic beverages is not harmful to health and longevity and is positively beneficial for one's physical and mental system. Dr. Stockard's conclusions were recently presented in a report at a special meeting of the Medical Association of New York.

Dr. Stockard included in his report a plea for government regulation of liquors, wines, and alcoholic beverages to replace the present prohibition laws, so that the excesses of heavy drinkers should not deprive the moderate drinker of his rights in the matter of reasonable alcoholic indulgence. He also said that excessive consumption of alcoholic beverages was injurious to health, even as excesses in eating.

The report was made public by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

THE SUNDAY MUSICAL at Willard Straight Hall January 22 was given by Harold E. Marietta '28 of Dayton, Ohio, violinist, Robert N. Lyon '29 of Cleveland, Ohio, 'cellist, and Joseph K. Payton '30 of Cleveland, Ohio, pianist.

SOPHIE BRASLAW, contralto, presented the third of the University concerts in Bailey Hall on January 24. Her program included compositions by Handel, Beethoven, Ravel, Rimsky-Korsakoff, Rachmaninoff, Kreisler, and Rubinstein.

THE CLUBS

Syracuse

The Cornell Club of Syracuse, which for some time has been relatively dormant, was revived on January 28, when 115 men met for luncheon at the Hotel Syracuse. The meeting was one of the best ever held by any Cornell group.

These officers were elected: president, Colonel John B. Tuck '93; vice-president, Hugh J. MacWilliams '12; secretary and treasurer, William J. Thorne '11.

The principal speakers were from Ithaca, Colonel Joseph W. Beacham, Jr. '97 and S. Hibbard Ayer, Jr., '14.

Most of the Cornell men who were at the luncheon, including the two Ithaca visitors, participated in the university night held on the evening of the 28th at the University Club of Syracuse.

Connecticut Women

The annual Clara Cornell bridge party was held in the College Club at Bridgeport, Connecticut, under the auspices of the Cornell Women's Club of Western Connecticut on January 14. Two parties were held, in the afternoon and in the evening, and both were well attended.

Pittsburgh Women

The Club held a Founder's Day luncheon on January 14 at Webster Hall. Mrs. William D. Stewart '12 (Margaret Thorp) spoke on "Sixty Years of Cornell," giving interesting anecdotes of Ezra Cornell, outstanding achievements of Cornell, and events of interest which have happened during the last year. Mrs. Alfred E. Emerson '22 (Winifred Jelliffe) gave an informal talk on "A Year in Europe." Last year Professor and Mrs. Emerson spent in Europe, where Professor Emerson was studying on a Guggenheim Fellowship. Mrs. Charles A. Carpenter '09 (Margaret Van Deusen) was in charge of the luncheon.

The officers of the Club for this year are: president, Mrs. John A. Hunter '03 (Euphemia Engle); vice-president, Mrs. David K. Cooper '91 (Ola Beth Capron); secretary, Mrs. Harry S. Tarbert '09 (Lulu Stronge); and treasurer, Miss Marion McWhinney '24.

Champaign-Urbana

Dean Albert R. Mann '04, of the College of Agriculture, spoke at the dinner on January 12 of the Cornell Club at the University of Illinois. Professor John W. Lloyd '99 was elected president for the year, with Professor Merl C. Gillis, Ph.D. '24, as secretary.

Trenton

Thomas A. Baldwin '08, president of the Club, introduced Thomas J. McFadden '22 to the Cornellians attending an informal dinner party at the Stacy-Trent of preliminary arrangements for a large annual party to be held in the near future, a round table discussion of University matters took place.

Albion

Dean Albert R. Mann '04, of the College of Agriculture, met with a group of former students of that college at a meeting at Albion, New York, on the evening of January 10. Between thirty-five and forty attended, coming from all parts of Orleans County.

SIXTY YEARS OF CORNELL

The following appreciative editorial, reprinted by School and Society for January 21 from The New York Sun, deserves to be preserved here because of its succinct and comprehensive statement of the aims of the Founders:

For Cornell University to-day is a double anniversary: the sixtieth anniversary of the founding of the institution and the one hundredth anniversary of Ezra Cornell's arrival in Ithaca, its seat. Many men now living can remember when the rugged New Yorker who had made a fortune out of telegraph building gave $500,000 to establish a new, more democratic, more practical center of learning, when the State Legislature added to his gift the land endowment provided by the Morrill Act and when Andrew D. White was inaugurated as first president. No man could wish a better monument. Antedating Leland Stanford, Jr., Chicago and Johns Hopkins, Cornell is still one of our youthful institutions. Yet it seems older than it is. This is because it sprang into maturity at the very outset. The vision and energy of Cornell and White gave it at once high standards, a distinguished teaching staff—Goldwin Smith was one of the first professors, and Lowell, Agassiz, and Froude came for lecture courses—and because its numerous novel ideas left an immediate imprint upon American higher education.

Cornell University was from its beginning one of the most interesting of American universities because it embodied an entire set of new educational principles born just after the Civil War. The older Eastern universities had clung closely to the classical and literary subjects. Both Ezra Cornell and White were eager to include engineering and agriculture. The older institutions had avoided coeducation. The founders of Cornell University believed firmly in it and soon had a friend build a fine woman's residence hall. Sectarianism was still strong in most of the older seats. White insisted that there should be no tinge of sectarian control, and in his still popular book on "The Warfare of Science with Theology" he fought a much-needed battle for liberalism of thought. Few of the endowed universities paid any regard to the secondary schools, but the founders of Cornell, with legisbetween the University and the State school system. These principles reflected the fresh spirit of the time. They were applied with uniform success, and together with the intellectual eminence of some of the early teachers at Cornell they at once gave the institution a wide reputation.

Even to-day Cornell is sometimes spoken of as the westernmost of the Eastern universities and the easternmost of the Western universities. Growing steadily in wealth and resources, but wisely limiting its enrolment, it has avoided some of the faults which mark the overgrown State universities. At the same time it has practicality and democracy of atmosphere and progressiveness of outlook.

MISS SIMPSON N. R. C. FELLOW

Miss Ethel Drever Simpson '24 of Ithaca has been awarded a research fellowship in medicine by the National Research Council. She is the daughter of the late Dr. Sutherland Simpson, professor of physiology at Cornell. Shortly after Dr. Simpson's death his daughter was appointed instructor in the department of which he had been the distinguished head.

The National Research Fellowships are open to citizens of both sexes of the United States and Canada but seldom have they been awarded to women. Up to the present time only four women have been so honored. Beside this honor, Ethel Simpson has the distinction of being the first Cornell woman to be made a Fellow in Medicine of the National Research Council.

Miss Simpson has elected to work under the direction of Dr. John Tait, professor of physiology and experimental medicine at McGill University, Montreal, where she will have an excellent opportunity to pursue her studies in pre-clinical medicine.

Miss Simpson was born in Scotland and came to Ithaca after her father was appointed professor of physiology at Cornell. She graduated from the Ithaca High School. In 1924 she received her A. B. degree and in the following year her master's degree. She has just completed her work for the doctorate and received the Ph.D. degree. She is a member of Sigma Xi, Sigma Delta Epsilon, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and the Western Branch of the New York Society for Experimental Biology and Medicine.

Miss Simpson has to her credit several original papers which have been read before scientific societies and published in their journals or proceedings.

FORMER PRESIDENT SCHURMAN, now ambassador at Berlin, has started a subscription for the reconstruction of the buildings of the University of Heidelberg, the estimated cost of which will be $400,000. About half of the amount has

Life on the Farm

The Harvest of the Year to the Tiller of the Soil. By Liberty Hyde Bailey. New York. Macmillan. 1927. 18 cm., pp. vi, 209. Price, $1.50.

Here are words of wisdom from a philosopher who knows the farmer and his problems and who sees all sides of the farmer's life. It is a good book for everybody to read who has any interest in these problems.

There is no question that farming has been hard hit by the present economic developments. Considered merely as a dollars and cents project it does not now compete with many other lines. And we have got to see to it that somehow the farmer gets a square deal. In so far as wise legislation will improve conditions, it must be made to do so. Taxes must be reduced on farms that have shrunk in value. Bankers must manage to give the farmer easier loans. He must give up the unprofitable farm and turn it back to woodland. He must reject the crops that pay least. He must learn to conserve the soil. There must be more and better education for the career of the farmer.

Doubtless, too, there must be a decided shrinkage in the number of farms and farmers. The mere "landers," as Dr. Bailey contemptuously calls them, the scavengers that skin the soil and put nothing back, must be in some way frozen out.

After all these readjustments have been made, it may well be supposed, at least it may be hoped, that the fittest will survive—those who want to be farmers and who well know how. And these will derive from their nearness to Nature a joy that will constitute a large if intangible part of their reward. For him who is prepared to receive it, Nature offers a daily, hourly revelation of mysteries that are sealed to the sophisticated urban dweller. The latter gets no clear view of the stars. Ignorant of his neighbor and faced by the problem of the control of wickedness in the slums, he gets a distorted view of life and human nature. He thinks of himself as living in the center of the universe. Many a New Yorker, for example, has only a good-natured contempt for everybody who does not come to business daily on Manhattan Island. He wears blinders most of the time.

Rural life, if not altogether free from drawbacks, certainly gives one fitted for it many pleasures that are real and lasting. And Dr. Bailey sets these forth in language that reveals the soul of a poet. Yet he is not the kind of poet whom we set down as next to useless. He has a message of good cheer and hope to which the dweller in the countryside, actual or potential, will give a hearty welcome.

Books and Magazine Articles

In The American Historical Review for January volume vi of "The Cambridge Ancient History," dealing with Macedon, 401-301 B.C., is reviewed by Professor William S. Ferguson, A.M. '97, Ph.D. '99, of Harvard. Professor Violet Barbour '06, of Vassar, reviews S. In The South Atlantic Quarterly for January Benjamin Rathford, Grad., writes on "The Public Finances of North Carolina Since 1920." Professor Frederick L. Nussbaum '06 discusses "The French Colonial Arrêt of 1784." J. Almus Russell, A.M. '25, of Colgate, writes on "Ruskin the Professor." Mrs. Katherine Gilbert, Ph.D. '12, reviews "The Philosophy of the Abbé Bautain" by Walter Marshall Horton.

Hendrik W. van Loon '05 contributes to The Nation the following cartoons: January 11, "Hearst"; January 18, "In Nicaragua"; January 25, "Which Landscape is the Lonelier?" In the last-named issue Professor Allan Nevins's "The Emergence of Modern America" is reviewed by Mark Van Doren and his edition of "The Diary of Philip Hone" is reviewed by Claude G. Bowers.

OBITUARIES

Henry C. Demorest '78

Henry Clay Demorest died at his home in New York on January 17.

He was born in New York on July 22, 1850, the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Jennings Demorest. He spent three years at Cornell in the science and letters course.

Demorest was at one time manager of the Paris office of the Demorest Pattern Company, and later became managing editor of Demorest's Magazine, which was discontinued some years ago.

He is survived by his wife, a son, and a daughter.

Charles R. Payne '02

Word has just been received of the death on July 30, 1926, of Charles Rockwell Payne, at his home in Wadhams, N. Y.

He was born in Wadhams, N. Y., on June 22, 1880, the son of Daniel F. and Alice Steele Payne. He received the degree of A.B. in 1902 and of M.D. in 1906. He was a member of Nu Sigma Nu.

Payne was a physician in Wadhams, specializing in psychiatry. He was a fellow of the American Medical Society, and a member of the American Psychopathological Association, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and the New York State Medical Society, and was secretary of the American Psychoanalytic Association.

He translated "The Significance of Psychoanalysis for the Mental Sciences" by Otto Rank and Hans Sachs, and "The Psychoanalytic Method" by Oskar Pfister.

He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Marion L. Bowman of Philadelphia, and three sons.

Mrs. John H. R. Arms '08

Mrs. Edith Lucia Wilkinson Arms died on Saturday, January 28, at her home in Montclair, N. J.

She was born on October 5, 1884, at Emporia, Kansas, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jasper N. Wilkinson. After a course at the Emporia State Normal School, she entered Cornell in 1905, graduating in three years with the degree of A.B. She was a member of Delta Gamma.

On December 17, 1913, she was married at Muskogee, Okla., to John Heyl Raser Arms '07. She is survived by her husband and a son Richard, eight years old.

PLAN CONFERENCE ON RELIGION

A conference aiming to solve the problem of religion and the college student is being held at Princeton February 17 to 19, President Farrand being one of the group of sponsors. Richard H. Edwards, executive secretary of the Christian Association, will be one of the speakers. Among the sponsors is also John R. Mott '88, general secretary of the National Council of the Y. M. C. A.

Published for the Alumni Corporation of Cornell University by the Cornell Alumni News Publishing Corporation.

Published weekly during the college year and monthly in July and August; forty issues annually. Issue No. 1 is published the last Thursday of September. Weekly publication, numbered consecutively, ends the last week in June. Issue No. 40 is published in August and is followed by an index of the entire volume, which will be mailed on request.

Subscription price $4.00 a year, payable in advance. Foreign postage 40 cents a year extra. Single copies twelve cents each.

Should a subscriber desire to discontinue his subscription a notice to that effect should be sent in before its expiration. Otherwise it is assumed that a continuance of the subscription is desired.

Checks, drafts and orders should be made payable to Cornell Alumni News.

THE RIVALRY FOR SCHOLARSHIPS

A FACT that is both astonishing and encouraging is that the applications to take the State Scholarship examinations have increased since last year when the Legislature reduced the value of the scholarships one hundred dollars a year each.

The value of State Scholarships has increased since 1868 as tuitions fees have increased. At their maximum they were worth over ten times the original value, which was thirty dollars a year. The increase in no way reflects the increase in other commodities but is many fold as the endowment of the University fails in greater degree to cover its budget, and tuition fees, which are the prize in the examinations, are forced upwards.

The State Scholarships have been instrumental in sending large numbers of good students to the University. On the whole, even though of recent years they have been a financial burden of considerable weight, the scholarships have at least provided a group of students that were well trained and easily taught, so that the burden is not quite as heavy as the difference between tuition and the income derived from the original grant.

It is gratifying, then, since the State Scholarships are presumably a permanent institution, that the rivalry for them has increased rather than diminished under the recent legislative readjustment of their values. No concern need be felt that, if and when the Legislature decides further to equalize these values, the prizes will eventually go begging and the University will be flooded with a group of so-called prize-winners who have won by default.

CORNELL GEOLOGISTS MEET

Cornell geologists attending the meeting of the Geological Society of America at Cleveland, Ohio, during the Christmas holidays held a Cornell luncheon on December 30. David White '86, senior geologist of the United States Geological Survey, Professor Heinrich Ries of the Department of Geology, and Robert T. Hill '86, retired consulting geologist of Los Angeles, Cal., were speakers.

Among others present at the luncheon were George H. Ashley '89, Pennsylvania State Geologist, Harrisburg, Pa.; Professor Ermine C. Case, M.S. '95, of the University of Michigan; John L. Rich '06, consulting geologist and editor of the bulletins of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, Ottawa, Kan.; Professor Oscar D. von Engeln '08 of Cornell; David W. Trainer, Jr., M.S. '23, instructor at Cornell; Professor Henry Leighton '06 of the University of Pittsburgh; Raymond E. Crist, Grad., Cornell; Professor Charles S. Gwynne '07 of Iowa State College, James D. Burfoot, instructor at Cornell; Professor George D.

Hubbard '05 of Oberlin College; Monroe G. Cheney '16 of Coleman, Texas; Professor Ransom E. Somers, Ph.D. '15, of the University of Pittsburgh; Georgiana Duncan, Grad., Cornell; Caroline Hemingway, Grad., Cornell; Charles W. Honess, M.A. '16, Oklahoma Geological Survey; Professor Ernest R. Smith, '13-17 Grad., of De Pauw University; Professor William H. Shideler '10 of Miami University; Harry M. Fridley, assistant, Cornell; Gerrald R. Megathlin, instructor, Cornell; V. E. Jones, assistant, Cornell; Louis C. Conant, assistant, Cornell; H. V. Lee, assistant, Cornell.

MORE FUERTES SANCTUARIES

The wild life sanctuary planned by citizens of Ithaca as a memorial to Louis Agassiz Fuertes '97 has been adopted by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and the chief of the Department of Agriculture is working on plans for sanctuaries to be erected in that State. Word of the proposed memorials in Massachusetts was sent to Professor E. Laurence Palmer '11 by Edward Howe Forbush, director of the Division of Ornithology of the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture.

Louis Fuertes's

friends in Ithaca are being approached for contributions to build a wild-life sanctuary at Stewart Park. (This is now a city park. It was formerly Renwick Park under private ownership.) The project was Louis's own plan. His plan is being closely followed. The sanctuary will be known as

The Louis A. Fuertes Memorial Wild Life Sanctuary

The minimum fund required is $6,000. This will undoubtedly have been secured by the Citizens' Committee before Louis's birthday on February 7. Funds beyond the minimum will be very welcome, and will be used to complete the full plan.

The Citizens' Committee includes Louis P. Smith, chairman, Sherman Peer '06, secretary, Albert W. Smith '78, treasurer, and E. Laurence Palmer '11, Ralph C. Smith '15, R. Warren Sailor '07, and Robert E. Tremen '09.

Cornellians who wish to help Ithaca build this memorial to their friend should send checks payable to

The Week on the Campus

THE first week of midyear examinations is, at this writing, over. For fifteen weeks the instructing staff has been pouring information through metaphorical funnels into the minds of the students. Now for ten days the staff is busy racking off that information, to determine if a good healthy fermentation has taken place or if it has turned to vinegar.

FOR A FORTNIGHT past an air of unwonted solemnity and seriousness has enveloped the Hill. The movie houses, the gym, the halls of dance and frolic have been forsaken; lights burn in dorms and rooming-houses until dawn; the consumption of coffee has tripled; singers, cut-ups, and loud-speakers have been sternly silenced. But now the undergraduates resume normal speed and the Faculty's period of travail begins. During these days of correction of blue-books (which are no longer blue) wives, babies, and delivery boys tread softly in the Faculty Apartments and spend as much time as possible in the streets. When two or more professors meet, their conversation consists of quotations from blue-books, to illustrate the newest depths of student stupidity, ineptitude, and addle-patedness.

SOME NICE QUESTIONS arise for honor committees to decide. For instance, a pious dullard prays to his patron saint for aid in his examinations. He passes, by a miracle. Has he received aid in his examination, against the regulations of the honor code?

THE COMPENSATIONS of Nature continue to be awarded, according to her orderly process. After Winter comes the Spring; after Ramadan, the Sugar Bairam; after death, the wake; after Block Week, Junior Week.

ASSEMBLYMAN COUGHLIN of Brooklyn, it is reported, has introduced a bill in the State Legislature appropriating $50,000 to establish a course in instruction in aviation in Cornell. This comes as a surprise to officials of the University. We await further news with much interest.

BILLS HAVE BEEN introduced, further, in the State Senate and Assembly granting four-year scholarships in the Colleges of Agriculture and Home Economics to Indians on State reservations who may properly qualify. This will supplement the extension work already extensively carried on by our extension departments among the Indians.

WE HAVE NOT DISCOVERED that the Indians have been asked to take part in the proposed Sesquicentennial Celebration of General Sullivan's village-burning expedition through these parts.

THE POULTRY DEPARTMENT has equipped a new laboratory for the scientific study of problems of incubation. The importance of the problem may be realized from the fact that at present forty per cent of fertile eggs are not hatched. A reduction of this percentage would save many millions to farmers and consumers.

SPEAKING OF EGGS, twenty-five freshmen have been undergoing treatment by ultra-violet rays to test the value of this process in providing immunity to colds. Dr. George H. Maughan and Dr. Dean F. Smiley have been carrying on the experiments for a year and a half, to ascertain whether our common freedom from colds in the summer may not be due to sunlight. These freshmen receive two treatments a week from a mercury lamp. The results to date are that the irradiated students have reduced the number and severity of colds by fifty per cent, in comparison with the norm for untreated students.

WHILE WE ARE on the subject of the more picturesque experimental work being carried on here, did you notice the syndicated story of Dr. Howard S. Liddell's experiments at our physiological field station? Carrying on the famous Pavlov experiments on the conditioned reflex, he induced a nervous breakdown in a sacrificial sheep. By overtaxing the animal's habit-forming ability, he developed a condition resembling neurasthenia. While of course the scientist makes his inferences with the greatest caution, one would not be surprised to hear that Dr. Liddell's experiments have aided our understanding of one of modern civilization's strangest mysteries.

THE FUERTES MEMORIAL Committee has, at last reports, raised $2,800 toward the proposed Bird Sanctuary. The Stewart Park Commission has voted $2,000; about $1,200 is still sought. Local pride in the project has been stimulated by the news that the State of Massachusetts is also planning some bird sanctuaries in honor of Fuertes.

TRAFFIC LIGHTS, flashing red, green, and gold, have been installed here and there about the city, to warn land-mariners of danger. Most people greet them with approval, especially the stop-and-go signal that hangs above the very tricky corner south of the Thurston Avenue bridge, where the street-car leaps out from the wrong side of the road and visiting drivers keep looking backward to get a good view of Triphammer Falls. Returning old grads, watch out for the signals, or a Model T will run down the cross-street and jump into your lap.

HAD AN AUTO SHOW in the Drill Hall last week.

THE LYCEUM IS TO BE remodeled completely as a movie house seating 1,400. I suppose this means that never again shall we hear human voices in that shadowed hall, that the old Lyceum has become another popcorn club, and that the Drama of the Dumb has conquered.

THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE of Printing is to be established here, according to an announcement made by the New York State Publishers' Association. A subscription fund for a million dollars was suggested. The buildings alone may cost from $500,000 to $750,000. This is a development of the present Empire State School of Printing, which obviously has amply justified itself. Curious how an idea of Ezra Cornell's has resulted in making Ithaca one of the important educational centers of our country!

PRESIDENT LOWELL of Harvard in his annual report makes some sound statements that I should like to relay to some of you young fathers and mothers. Please stand by while President Lowell is hooked up; President Lowell speaking: "The young man does not begin his active career until a later age than is wise. . . . The reason that young men come to the age of eighteen with minds less trained than their contemporaries in Europe is to be found chiefly in the fact that they begin their schooling later, and in the early years proceed less rapidly. . . . A considerable number of parents whose sons are prepared for college and pass their entrance examination at seventeen, postpone their entrance for a year. This is almost always a mistake. The youth is taken out of the normal current of his life to do something else, and does not usually regain his pace. Statistics, covering a number of years, show that the students who enter college young are on the average better scholars and incur less serious discipline than those who are older. . . . There is a natural time for the innocent pleasures and preparatory studies of youth, and a time when a man should be occupied in his life's work."

LEADS HOOVER FARMER DRIVE

Charles S. Wilson '04, former Commissioner of Agriculture for New York State, is the leader of a movement to organize support among the farmers of the State for the presidential candidacy of Herbert Hoover. Wilson has been in conference recently, reports from Albany state, with State Senator William H. Hill of Binghamton, one of Mr. Hoover's campaign managers.

The selection of Mr. Wilson to work in behalf of Mr. Hoover indicates a real determination to overcome objections by farmers to his candidacy. Mr. Wilson has been quoted as saying that farmers in the State are being misled by propaganda sent out by dairying interests through dislike of Mr. Hoover caused by misunderstandings over the prices fixed for milk during the World War.

Wilson maintains a large farm at Hall, Ontario County. He studied at Cornell a year after graduation, obtaining his master's degree in 1905, and was for several years a professor of pomology here. He is a member of Zodiac and Sigma Xi.

SERENITY

What is it worth?

IF you have known serenity of the mind, even once for a short time only, you will know that it is priceless.

But there are those who can sell you for a small part of your income one of the most direct steps to this serenity—they can sell you security, material security for the future.

They are life insurance agents.

They sell a priceless commodity at low cost. When a John Hancock Agent calls on you, remember this. It is worth while seeing him. Better still, it is worth your while to send for him and set your mind at rest on this score at once.

A STRONG COMPANY, Over Sixty Years in Business. Liberal as to Contract, Safe and Secure in Every Way.
