Varied Program Arranged for Annual Alumni Meeting at Washington Next Week

The committee arranging for the ninth annual convention of the Cornell Alumni Corporation, to be held in Washington, D. C., Friday and Saturday, November 30 and December 1, is winding up preparations for what is expected to be one of the most enthusiastic and successful conventions since the first convention at Cleveland in 1921.

The program provides something for all alumni who attend throughout the two days of the convention, but it is expected that the first day of the convention will, in reality, be the second day of a Cornell week-end, for on Thursday, November 29, the Cornell football team closes its season against its ancient rival, Pennsylvania, on Franklin Field, Philadelphia.

Alumni who attend the Pennsylvania game Thursday afternoon will have the problem of getting to Washington solved by the operation of a special train out of the Broad Street station, Philadelphia, for Washington. The train will leave at 7:30 p. m. Thursday evening.

The railroads will give the privilege of reduced rates to alumni and members of their families, provided at least 250 will present "convention certificates" at the headquarters at the Hotel Willard. These certificates will be procured when the ticket is purchased to Washington, and when full fare will be paid. After the necessary 250 certificates have been validated in Washington, return tickets will be sold at half price.

The program at Washington, however, does not exact all of one's time. There will be many opportunities to visit points of interest in and about the nation's capital, and alumni attending the convention are expected to take full advantage of the many opportunities afforded in the city.

One of the early events of prominence on the program is the reception at the Chinese Legation, to be given by Sao-ke Alfred Sze '01, Chinese minister to the United States, and Mrs. Sze. Friday evening will be given over to a party for alumni at which R. Warren Sailor '07, editor of THE CORNELL ALUMNI NEWS will preside.

The speakers at the banquet Saturday evening will include President Livingston Farrand of Cornell and William J. Donovan, assistant attorney-general of the United States.

Early reservations are already being made by alumni, the honor of making the first requests going to Miami, Fla.

On Friday, at Fort Myer, Va., there will be a special cavalry drill, arranged for the entertainment of those attending the convention.

The election of directors of the corporation will be an important item on the program on Friday. Nominations have been made from each of the twelve districts, and the selection will be made at the convention. After these directors have been elected, they will in turn elect three directors-at-large, to make up the full board of fifteen members.

The nominations for the twelve districts are as follows: District No. 1, Central New York, Thomas I. S. Boak, '14; District No. 2, Metropolitan New York, R. H. Shreve, '02; District No. 3, Eastern New York, Charles A. Taussig '02; District No. 4, Western New York, John L. Collyer '17; District No. 5, New England, Arthur P. Bryant '00; District No. 6, Middle Atlantic, Alfred D. Warner, Jr. '00; District No. 7, Keystone, Mrs. Frederick A. Weisenbach (Clara Ottilia Koeller) '07, and Benjamin O. Frick '02; District No. 8, Southern, Henry M. Eaton '90; District No. 9, Great Lakes, Conant Van Blarcom '08; District No. 10, Central, Newton C. Farr '09; District No. 11,

Votes Against Daylight Saving

Faculty Recommends Discontinuance of Plan But Votes to Study Alternatives

The Faculty, at its meeting on November 14, recommended the discontinuance of daylight saving time and named a committee to consider some other means of accomplishing the same result.

The initial daylight saving time experiment, put into effect May 1, 1928, has not yet ended. It will terminate with the beginning of the Thanksgiving recess, and students returning to classes on December 3 will find the University once more operating on Eastern Standard Time.

According to the plan worked out when the Faculty approved daylight saving last spring, next year's period was to extend from the spring recess to the Thanksgiving recess.

The recommendation of the Faculty will go to the Board of Trustees for final action. Alternate plans to accomplish the giving of an extra hour of daylight to students will not be presented until later.

It is understood that two alternatives are being considered. Classes may be set one hour ahead, the first class to be at 7 a. m. Standard Time instead of 6 a. m., or the lunch hour may be changed so that afternoon laboratory periods and classes will begin at 1 p. m. instead of 2 p. m. Of course either of these adjustments requires careful study before it can be presented as a practical solution.

The failure of the City of Ithaca to adopt a similar daylight saving period is seen as one of the principal causes for the decision of the Faculty. Even if the City were favorable, it would have to conform with a State law which limits the daylight saving time period from the last Sunday in April to the last Sunday in September. The University period, as first proposed, was to operate several weeks before and after this period available for cities by law.

Recently, leaders in Cornell sports expressed favorable reactions to the daylight saving time period, declaring in interviews that it had proved beneficial to Cornell teams as well as offering an opportunity for casual athletics and general outdoor recreation which has been enthusiastically received and used.

ATHLETICS

Dartmouth Wins

Dartmouth was too fast and too clever for Cornell. Before a crowd estimated at 25,000 on Schoellkopf Field last Saturday, the Green eleven from Hanover, led by its backfield stars, Al Marsters and Shep Wolff, passed and ran the ends, winning 28-0.

The four touchdowns, three of them by the brilliant Marsters, and the four points after touchdowns, all of them by Longnecker's placement kicking, were scored in the first half.

Three of those four touchdowns, one of them scored on a ninety-yard run by Wolff on the third kickoff of the game, were put across Cornell's goal line in the first period, the same period that saw Cornell make its mightiest bid for a place in the scoring column. That bid failed on Dartmouth's six-yard line by less than a yard.

Cornell's failure to travel that short distance for a first down on the Green's five-yard marker had its effect. The Red and White team's running attack was beaten down time and time again in the course of the three last periods, and defeat became more certain with the completion of each play.

The Red and White forward wall played well, as it had done in previous games. But the Red and White backfield and ends could not cope with Dartmouth's aerial attack, an attack that completed thirteen out of twenty-five passes for a total of 220 yards and two of the four touchdowns. Cornell tried six aeriels, two of them successfully, but the gains were minute. Cornell showed only the simplest of running attacks, with little deception, and the Green forward wall soon solved even the formidable off-tackle play.

The Game in Detail

Dartmouth started passing on the first play after Henry Johnson had run Wake-man's kickoff to Dartmouth's forty-three-yard line. That first pass grounded, but Wolff ran through left tackle for a first down on Cornell's forty-one-yard mark. Marsters added six yards through the other side of the line. Another pass went wild, but the next aerial resulted in the first touchdown. It was the sixth play of the game.

The ball was on Cornell's thirty-five-yard line, and it was fourth down. Wolff went back, pivoted, and hurled a perfect pass to Marsters on Cornell's twenty-yard line, and the Green star went across the goal line. Longnecker's placement made the score: Dartmouth 7, Cornell 0.

After the next kickoff by Wakeman, Dartmouth worked the ball back to the Red and White twenty-seven-yard line, when a fifteen-yard penalty set the Green back. Wolff fumbled a pass from center, recovering the ball on Dartmouth's forty-five-yard line. It was second down, forty yards to go, and Marsters punted out of bounds on Cornell's forty-yard stripe.

The Cornell drive started, helped along by frequent penalties for offside play called against the Green forwards. Scott plunged through center for a first down at midfield. In two plays the Cornell full-back gained six yards, and Lyon added seven yards on Dartmouth's thirty-seven-yard marker. A Dartmouth offside penalty and an off-tackle slice by Mauritz Johnson gave the Red and White another first down on the Green's twenty-seven-yard line. Two offside penalties brought the Ithacans another first down on Dartmouth's fifteen-yard line.

Mauritz Johnson went through his left tackle for five yards. Scott and Lyon were shot at the same spot and each gained two yards. With less than a yard to go for first down, Scott was hurled at the center of the line, but the forwards held fast, and Cornell's march was over.

Marsters punted, and Cornell started again, this time from Dartmouth's forty-five-yard line. Out of a scrimmage came the ball, loose, and Wolff recovered it for the Green on his own thirty-four-yard line. On the next play he circled Cornell's right end for twelve yards. Longnecker lost a yard stepping over the sideline, and a pass from Marsters grounded.

Wolff ran back on the next play and hurled another pass. Marsters and Swarthout were close together on Cornell's twenty-yard line. Marsters took it and protected by Swarthout he raced over the last chalk mark for the second touchdown. Longnecker kicked another placement to make the score: Dartmouth 14, Cornell 0.

Wakeman's next kickoff traveled to Dartmouth's ten-yard line, where Wolff received it. He started to the right, cut over, and sprinted down the left sideline, traveling the ninety yards to Cornell's goal line. Longnecker again kicked true, and the score was: Dartmouth 21, Cornell 0. A few plays later the period ended.

Second Period

The second quarter opened with Mauritz Johnson intercepting Wolff's pass on Cornell's forty-yard line and running fifteen yards before he was down. Line plays failed, and Anderson kicked. Marsters punted back, after he was thrown for a loss by Lyon, but Longnecker intercepted a Cornell forward, running out of bounds at midfield.

The Green reached Cornell's thirty-five-yard line, and Marsters kicked, Andres, Green center, downing the ball on Cornell's four-yard line. Anderson kicked to Marsters, who ran to the Red and White twenty-eight-yard marker. A fifteen-yard penalty was overcome by a pass, Marsters to Booma, and Henry Johnson plunged through for a first down on Cornell's fourteen-yard line. Wolff went through to the seven-yard stripe. Passes failed and Cornell won the ball on downs on its own five-yard line. Anderson kicked out of danger.

Marsters took that kick back fifteen yards to Cornell's thirty-yard line. He passed to Booma for nine yards. Booma took another pass, this time from Wolff, for six yards and a first down on Cornell's fifteen-yard line.

The next play was a pass, but the ball struck the earth some distance from the nearest player. The field judge ruled that Cornell had interfered with the intended receiver and Dartmouth was given a first down on Cornell's five-yard line. Marsters, on the next play, circled Cornell's left end for a touchdown, and Longnecker added the extra point, making the score: Dartmouth 28, Cornell 0. The half ended within two minutes.

Third Period

Dietrich, who had replaced Scott, brought Dartmouth's kickoff back twenty-eight yards to Cornell's thirty-eight-yard line. Anderson kicked, Worden downing the ball on the Green's seven-yard line. Marster's punt was short, Howard Johnson running it back to Dartmouth's twenty-five-yard line. Two plays netted five yards.

Anderson went back to try a placement, but the pass was bad. Howard Johnson, holding the ball for Anderson, was downed on Dartmouth's thirty-five-yard line, and the Green took the ball on downs. The rest of the third period saw Anderson and Marsters exchanging kicks.

Fourth Period

The fourth quarter opened with the ball in Dartmouth's possession on its own twenty-eight-yard line. After an exchange of kicks, Cornell put the ball in play in mid-field. Plunges by Howard Johnson, Kanich, and Dietrich earned a first down on Dartmouth's thirty-nine-yard line. but Clark, who had replaced Marsters, intercepted a Cornell pass on his own twenty-seven-yard line. He immediately passed to Swarthout for a first down on Dartmouth's thirty-eight-yard line.

Clark circled Cornell's left end and ran sixty-two yards for a touchdown, but the referee's whistle had blown and the score did not count. The officials ruled a holding penalty of fifteen yards for the Green. Longnecker kicked. Anderson's punt, after futile tries by the Red backs at the line, bounded backwards at midfield, where it struck, and it was downed on Cornell's forty-three-yard line.

The Green started another offensive. Breithut, Green substitute back, ran thirteen yards for a first down on Cornell's thirty-yard line. Two plays gained eight yards, but the Green lost the ball on downs on Cornell's twenty-one-yard line. Hoffman, Howard Johnson, and Dietrich made a first down. Two more plunges and a Dartmouth penalty added another, but Anderson was forced to kick.

As dusk began to settle, the Green once more surged forward. Lee, another Dartmouth substitute, ran twenty yards to Cornell's forty-six-yard line. A pass, Breithut to Clark, gained eight yards.

Another, Breithut to Bankart, gained a first down on Cornell's twenty-five-yard line. Clark was nabbed on an end run as the final whistle blew.

Levering and Benson, former indoor intercollegiate two-mile champion, finished in a tie for first place, with Beaman third. Two Dartmouth runners placed fourth and fifth, and the Red and White the next two places to win.

BOOKS

The Story of Modern English

Modern English in the Making. By George H. McKnight '92, Professor of English in Ohio State University, with the Assistance of Bert Emsley. New York. D. Appleton and Company. 1928. 20.8 cm., pp. xvi, 590. 18 illustrations. Price, $4.

Professor McKnight is already well known as an able and enthusiastic teacher and as the author of a valuable study of "English Words and Their Backgrounds." His narrative of the history of the standard English language is marked by excellent proportion, skill in the handling of masses of detail, moderation of statement, and good sense. He makes no pretence to brilliancy of writing and avoids all sensationalism. He wears well as a writer; we never tire of him.

A good idea of the contents may be gained from the list of chapter headings: Chaos. The First Fynder of Our Faire Language [Chaucer]. Chaucer's Successors and the Aureate Language. Caxton and the Printing Press. Transition from Middle English to Modern English. Humanism. Purism. Sixteenth-Century Rhetoric. Shakespeare and Rhetoric. Shakespeare and the Language of his Time. Classicism and the Schoolmaster. The Restoration Period. The Augustan Age. Johnson's Dictionary. Eighteenth-Century Grammarians. English Purists and Scotch Rhetoricians. The Art of Pointing, or Punctuation. Fixing the Pronunciation. Beginnings of American English. The Nineteenth Century. Revolt. Modern Spelling and Pronunciation.

The book will be found highly illuminating and will contribute many new ideas to the thoughtful reader. The first chapter is headed "Chaos." The implication is that somewhere along the line we have emerged or perhaps shall emerge into Cosmos; but is this the case? Certainly we have come a long way from the time when every writer was a law unto himself as to spelling, inflection, and syntax. The invention of printing, the dictionary, and the spelling book have given us something like a standard language and have greatly slowed up the changes which were in process. The radio, imperfectly though it reproduces sound as yet, will do a great deal more to bring about uniformity. But a cosmos in the sense of one uniform standard language for the whole English-speaking world there can never be. Landon objecting to execute, "poor orthography," and rewrite is a typical example of the Don Quixotes who have tilted with linguistic windmills and have fought, bled, and died for a cause which was not worth the ink they spilled. We fulminate against "I am given a watch," "I am taken no notice of," "It is me; the world moves serenely on and these expressions become current in spite of all we can do. Every one of our pet aversions in language, probably sanctioned by some one or more reputable writers (e.g. using they when referring back to one person; McKnight cites 32 examples from twenty authors). Verily the road of the purist is thorny and up hill.

What is the conclusion? That we should sternly repress the voice of our linguistic conscience? Not at all. Rather that we should be more careful than ever about our own speech, according to our light, while exhibiting humility and reasonableness when we undertake to teach others how to speak. Every educated person, as of old, must be a law unto himself. If he is conscientious about his speech, his example will be widely followed.

ASKED TO STUDY FARM NEEDS

Dean Albert R. Mann '04 of the College of Agriculture and Dr. George F. Warren '03, professor of agricultural economics, have been asked, among others, by Franklin D. Roosevelt, governor-elect of New York State, to aid him in his study of agricultural problems in the State.

Mr. Roosevelt has stated that the farm problem and the farm tax problem are so closely related that "out of an investigation of the whole farm problem the farm tax problem may come as one of the possible measures of farm relief."

GENETICISTS TO MEET HERE

The Sixth International Congress of Geneticists will be held at Cornell in August, 1932, it was determined by a mail ballot of geneticists in the United States. It was decided to hold the Sixth Congress in the United States at the Berlin Congress in 1927.

In the past three years Cornell has been host to the International Congress of Plant Pathologists and the International Congress of Entomologists.

MISSING IN VESTRIS' SINKING

Charles M. Henrotin '97, a passenger on the steamer Vestris which sank at sea November 12, is listed among the missing. He was on his way to British Guiana where he represents a New York banking firm. He was for several years manager of the Kimberley diamond mines in South Africa.

THE CLUBS

New York

The alumni of Columbia and Cornell met for their fourth annual joint smoker at the Columbia University Club on Friday, November 2, on the eve of the football game. The attendance was highly gratifying, with more than 1,500 men present. Officers of both clubs feel that these joint gatherings, unique among such meetings in New York, have resulted in a spirit of friendship among the graduates of the two universities which is each year growing stronger.

After a strictly informal stunt program and a few brief speeches, groups of Columbia and Cornell men sang the songs of the two colleges, giving an evening of general enjoyment which will not soon be forgotten.

Philadelphia Women

The November meeting of the Club was held at the home of Mrs. William H. Emery (Violet E. Harrison) '12 on Saturday, November 3. The co-hostesses, Mildred E. Barlow '13 and Olive B. Nicholas '28, were assisted by a reception committee including Mrs. Frederick A. Weisenbach (Clara O. Koeller) '07, Helen A. Carmalt '16, and Margaret W. Aherne '12.

Record attendance indicated the general approval of a central meeting place, but was also due to the presence of a number of out-of-town guests. The chief business of the meeting was the introduction of a "melting pot" to which all members of the club are asked to contribute any gold or silver trinkets that can be melted for raising a fund to place something useful in the name of the club in the new women's dormitories at Ithaca.

Any contributions to the "melting pot" will be gratefully received by Mrs. C. L. Shollenberger (Gladys F. Swartley) '16, chairman, at 3302 North Seventeenth Street, Philadelphia, or by Martha Dick '11, at 4907 Parkside Avenue, North Wynnefield, Philadelphia.

Southern California

Officers have been elected for the year as follows: Walter C. Yeatman '99, president; Clarence D. Coulter '18, vice-president; Alfred A. Anderson '10, secretary-treasurer; Rex W. Jewett '17 and Francis W. Lake '22, directors.

The Club meets regularly for luncheon every Wednesday at the University Club at 12.15 p. m. All Cornell men are invited.

Trenton

The Cornell and Princeton Clubs of Trenton held a joint smoker in the Stacy-Trent Hotel on Friday evening, October 26, as a forerunner to the game on the following day. Attorney-General Edward L. Katzenbach, Princeton graduate, felicitated the members upon the splendid feeling of rivalry and fellowship between the two universities.

Mr. Katzenbach's speech was followed by short talks from Romeyn Berry '04, G. R. Murray, graduate manager of athletics at Princeton; Nicholas Bawlf, Cornell soccer coach, Foster M. Coffin '12, alumni representative, John Colt, well-known Princeton alumnus; and Louis C. Booehever '12, director of the Department of Public Information.

Entertainment was provided by Messrs. Sprague and Hawkes, Princeton undergraduates, Charles A. Norris '23, Carl Schraubstader '23, and Jacob S. Fassett, Jr., '12, of Cornell.

W. M. Dickinson of Princeton and Douglas S. Dilts '17 acted as joint masters of ceremony.

Wilkes-Barre and Scranton

Harold Flack '12, executive secretary of the Cornellian Council, attended meetings on successive days, October 31 and November 1, of the Cornell men in Wilkes-Barre and Scranton. Harley C. Wheaton '11, president of the Cornell Club in Wilkes-Barre, and George G. Brooks '94, president in Scranton, presided.

The Distinguished Service Medal, in recognition of services with the American Expeditionary Forces in France during the World War, was conferred on November 2 by the War Department on Colonel Frederick W. Scheidenhelm '05 of Kew Gardens, now of the Engineer Reserves. He served in the War as a lieutenant-colonel of engineers.

Since his graduation, Colonel Scheidenhelm has been engaged in a number of large hydraulic enterprises. He received the Fuertes Gold Medal from Cornell in 1917 and the Thomas Fitch Rowland Prize from the American Society of Consulting Engineers in 1918.

The citation as follows:

"For exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services.

"On being ordered to France he was assigned to the staff of the Chief Engineer, American Expeditionary Forces, and for several months he was engaged in water supply studies connected with the proposed operations of the American Army. On September 21, 1918, he was assigned to the Twenty-sixth Engineers, which he commanded, and assigned to the First Army, during the Meuse-Argonne operations, where he was made water supply officer for that army and was charged with the complete responsibility for army water supply and for all reconnaissances, design, construction and supply, in addition to commanding all troops assigned thereto.

"He displayed a keen insight into the complexities of the problems presented, a marked willingness to assume responsibility, and force of character in securing results, rendering valuable services to the American Expeditionary Forces."

A MOST PRODUCTIVE CONVENTION

ONE week from today the annual football game with the University of Pennsylvania will be played. Often known as Thanksgiving Day, this day will see a contest again between what is apparently the usual smart Pennsylvania team and a Cornell team that seems to be battered, not highly skilled in football technique, and as yet showing little but stolid, stubborn resistance. To concede anything on the basis of the present situation is premature.

There is no doubt that by the time the "faithful" arrive in Washington for the convention of the Cornell Alumni Corporation, football will occupy a prominent place in everyone's mind. This convention offers the opportunity for constructive discussion of a problem that is complicated far beyond the belief of nearly everyone with whom we have spoken.

The football enthusiast should bear in mind that he will find the convention a place where many other problems will be discussed besides football. There are many matters, perhaps not so acute, in which Cornellians are very earnestly interested and which are more vital to the University than even football. Conceivably a university with no football whatever might still be a great university if it has other educational facilities that are regarded as an offset. Conceivably a discussion of problems not related to football is entitled to serious consideration and will undoubtedly receive it.

Cornell must rely on its alumni in many ways. The alumni body must see to it that the diagnosis does not miss the main symptoms and devote its attention entirely to the unrelated bellyache.

So the alumnus who is interested in his University, from whatever point of view, will have an opportunity for quiet careful consideration of these things as well as the remarkably attractive program of the entertainment committee if he attends the convention of the Cornell Alumni Corporation at the Willard Hotel in Washington on November 30 and December 1.

SPORT STUFF

The real hero of a home-coming football game is the broadminded and long suffering helpmeet of any popular alumnus who lives in a college town. Consider her desk memorandum for Monday morning.

Send rugs to cleaners—get children back from grandmother's—slip cook extra ten—have Bool's fix cigarette burns in piano—see that parlor maid keeps her mouth shut—replace broken and worn out phonograph records—see doctor about kick on shins—engage rooms at Atlantic City on date of next year's game—arrange to send sons to M. I. T. where they don't play football—call off all dates for next ten days—induce cat to return to house—think of something to say to neighbors—see how guests are getting along at hospital—remember not to speak to John—replace broken china—try to forget.

TRUSTEES MEET

The Board of Trustees held its fall meeting at Ithaca November 17, the day of the Cornell-Dartmouth football game. Three newly-elected members of the Board attended for the first time. They were Myron C. Taylor '94, chairman of the finance committee of the United States Steel Corporation, Bancroft Gherardi '93, vice-president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, and J. Frederick Schoellkopf '05 of Buffalo.

BAND BIG ATTRACTION

The R. O. T. C. Band was one of the big attractions of the Dartmouth-Cornell football game on Schoellkopf Field on November 17. The musicians wore for the first time new red and white capes. On the eve of the game, a Dartmouth Hop, in honor of the visitors from Hanover, was given in the Drill Hall to provide funds to send the band to Philadelphia for the Pennsylvania game on Thanksgiving Day.

VERMONT has this year 1,310 students, of whom 725 are men and 585 are women. There are 1,001 in arts, 141 in medicine, and 168 in teacher training.

Harriers Win Again

The time of the winners was twenty-six minutes, five and two-fifths seconds. McKaig and Van Geem of Cornell tied for tenth place.

Pennsylvania Rolls On

Pennsylvania, Cornell's last major football opponent of the season, won over Columbia November 17 while Dartmouth was beating the Red and White. The Quakers defeated Columbia, held to a scoreless tie by the Ithacans earlier in the season, 34-7.

The Week on the Campus

THE FACULTY assembled in record-breaking numbers at its last meeting, and, obedient to mandates from the home, put an end to Daylight Saving Time as we are now experiencing it. You remember, I am sure, that the Campus now has its clocks set one hour ahead of all the rest of the world. The students have apparently enjoyed their extra hour of afternoon daylight; those, however, who have had contacts with the town have been put to endless inconvenience. Now the innovators, the nonconformists, the rebels against prescribed Time, yield to the forces of regularity. It is a Republican year. It is sad to think that Ithaca dinner-tables will be deprived of their chief subject of conversation.

THE BENEFITS of daylight saving may none the less be preserved. A committee has been appointed to examine the question whether classes may be set an hour ahead, or whether the lunch hour may be altered so that laboratories and afternoon classes may begin at one or one-thirty o'clock instead of two.

SEVENTY-FOUR MEMBERS of the freshman class got their names in the paper last Monday, by their undismayed refusal to wear frosh caps. Some of you will recall that about eight years ago one freshman insisted on his constitutional right to wear what hats he pleased. He became a cause célèbre, and was the center of riots for an entire year. May we suggest that the embattled seventy-four erect a monument to the memory of this martyr? They might do an allegory of the tyrant Gessler, who put his hat on a pole and required Wilhelm Tell and his fellow-villagers to doff to it.

THE RADIO COMMISSION, it is unofficially reported from Washington, has granted a broadcasting permit to the University. Last spring we were presented with a complete broadcasting equipment, including a studio and towers. These will probably be located near the Observatory. Arrangements will be made for broadcasting from various parts of the Campus, including the bell-tower, whence you may hear the chimes at noon. The station will have the call letters WEAI.

EDWARD L. KAW '23 was here last week, with a group of experts from the Fox-Chase Movietone Corporation, taking talkies of the sights, scenes, and sounds of the University. The various sports, including the Dartmouth game and other Campus activities were recorded, to be reproduced up and down the country probably in the spring.

THE THIRTY-FIVE JUNIORS in the hotel management course made their sixth annual excursion to New York last week. They spent three busy days inspecting hotels and the provision markets. On Monday they took over the management of the Hotel Astor, flinging a ninety-foot

Cornell banner to the breeze over Times Square.

THE DRAMATIC CLUB's first major production of the year, Stanley Houghton's "The Younger Generation," had its première Friday. It was a completely successful production; the play itself, less pretentious than some of the club's recent efforts, contained more elements of popular appeal than those ventures in the more rarefied realms of drama. Chalmers Mole '29 bore the individual honors in the central rôle.

THE DARTMOUTH HOP, held last Friday with the purpose of sending the band to Pennsylvania, seems to have been a rousing success. It was revealed in the course of the evening that one of the orchestras, the Masked Marvels, was none other than our band itself in disguise, jazzing as melodiously on the platform as it trumpets in the open air. The band, by the way, has added a further touch of magnificence to its costume, appearing in vermilion capes lined with white. It is now probably the best dressed band there is, except His Majesty's Horse Guards.

TWO MALE QUARTETS were heard here last week, each superlative of its kind. The Kedroff Quartet gave us an evening of Russian music, singing liturgical selections, folk songs, and concert pieces. The audience was loud in its praise of the marvellous blending of four magnificent voices into a single instrument. The Hampton Quartet, from Hampton Institute was no less successful in its program of negro spirituals.

LECTURERS of the week were: Professor Ernest R. Groves of the University of North Carolina, who gave three talks on "Modern Marriage and its Problems," "Family Experience and Personality," and "The Social Significance of Childhood"; Professor Pierre S. Porohovshikov, writer and publicist, who dealt with "Russian Drama" and "Social Conditions and International Relations of Russia before the War"; and Professor S. R. Detwiler of Columbia University, who spoke on "The Photomechanics of Vision."

THE SAGE CHAPEL PREACHER was Bishop Frank W. Sterrett of the Episcopal diocese of Bethlehem, Pa.

A FOOTBALL GAME was played here Saturday with Dartmouth College, of Hanover, N. H.

DID YOU NOTICE that someone has given Harvard $3,000,000 to aid in splitting up the institution into small colleges of three hundred men each, somewhat after the Oxford manner? The Nation observes that "it is an interesting example of the way one rich man by a huge gift, made at the instigation, doubtless, of university officials, can alter the whole structure of an historic institution; at first glance we feel that the experiment ought to be of enormous benefit to the entire university world."

THE FUERTES BIRD SANCTUARY is already proving a haven to ducks. Several hundred have settled there, mostly greater scaups or bluebills, with a few redheads and canvasbacks. The hunters, those strange individuals who get such a peculiar satisfaction from putting lovely wild creatures to death, have in the past lured the ducks along this shore with wooden decoys and trained dogs, shooting into the massed flocks with automatic guns. News of the Fuertes Bird Sanctuary is already traveling far through the skies.

THE Sun last week uttered some sober and well-considered words concerning football, which we quote, in part: "When football ceases to be merely a physical exercise, and becomes the criterion by which the value of a college is judged, and victories become an enticement for more students, then the sport has outgrown its usefulness, and should be abolished. Such a condition many would wish to see here: a victorious team, defeating rivals year after year, until at last the athletic superiority of Cornell would be unquestioned. To these we answer, let them go and found an institution where any person may receive instruction in how to emerge victor in any type of sport. Here at Cornell we have a different purpose. Education is our end, and football in that it is a type of education is favored and promoted. Cornell does not need winning teams for college spirit, nor victorious athletes as a lure for more students."

No. 7 of a series inspired by the report of the Secretary of Commerce's Committee on Elimination of Waste

A ONE-WAY STREET PRODUCTION POLICY

IN TELEPHONE making, production schedules move in one direction—forward. The machinery seldom needs to be thrown into reverse.

Cancellations in this industry are rare.

There is consequently little lost effort involving men, material and machines.

There is a minimum of waste in scrapping or storing partially fabricated parts.

How is this possible?

Because of the close relation between Western Electric as purchasers, manufacturers and distributors and the operating telephone companies of the Bell System served by it.

Here is another striking economy which contributes to the low cost of your telephone service.

Perhaps This Reduced Illustration Gives You Some Idea of the New Campus Map

The above cut can give only a very faint idea of the beauty of the map. The map came out the last of September and is going well in Ithaca. If mailed rolled we pay the postage. The price is $1.50. Take a look at it with a magnifying glass.

Remember the Cornell Bookplates

You can have a sample set for the asking. There are eight in the set. Nearly everyone has a hundred books. The bookplates are $1.50 per hundred. The printing of your name $1.50 per hundred extra.
