"Who, ME?"

YEP, you! This time we're talking to civilians.

That other ad you have in your hand, we ran some months ago. It was addressed to service men — explaining the advantages of Uncle Sam's NATIONAL SERVICE LIFE INSURANCE, in which we sincerely believe and on which we don't make a nickel.

A flock of friendly letters thanked us for our advice, and many Army and Navy insurance officers seem to feel that the ad helped contribute to this very heartening fact:

Over 95% of the men in military service today have NATIONAL SERVICE LIFE INSURANCE averaging better than $9000 for each man — more than twice as much as the national civilian average per family.

Does this mean that you care less about your family than the fighting men do about theirs?

Of course not. It means simply that far too few civilians are realistic in recognizing the daily hazards that take their toll on the home front.

And even if you are one of those who own more than the service man's average, ask yourself this question — "Is my insurance coverage enough to give my family the security they need and deserve?"

If it isn't, why not do something about it? The solution is simple. For planned protection to fit your personal needs, call one of our Career Underwriters.

For your information, we have published a folder, "What the Service Man Should Do About His Life Insurance." A post-card to our Home Office in Boston will bring it to you.

Upon enlistment, be sure to take the full $10,000 of NATIONAL SERVICE LIFE INSURANCE to which you are entitled, in addition to the regular life insurance you already own.

Do civilians love their families less?

The advertisement on the opposite page points out the disparity between the life insurance estates of the average service man and civilian. Probably you're well above the national civilian average. But regardless of amount, two comments still apply.

1. Wartime tensions—extra work and worry—may make you uninsurable. 2. Wartime changes—in family or finances—may upset your insurance set-up. And either can happen without your realizing it.

Every life insurance program ought to be reviewed regularly to keep it up to date. Perhaps yours needs it now. Below is a list of people who can counsel you.

They're alumni of your college and they talk your language. They are also trained representatives of the First Mutual Life Insurance Company Chartered in America.

Out of their experience you'll get practical suggestions. They'll help you make the most of your limited life insurance dollars—help you protect your present policies with premium loans if necessary.

To the Ladies

A Cornellian, who has been checking in and out for the past year, said recently: "I brought my wife along this trip. She didn't want to come . . . said The Grosvenor sounded too much like a man's hotel." He grinned. "Now I'm having a tough time getting her away."

Said the lady: "I love the location. If I want to shop, there are department stores and a slue of smart little shops nearby; if I want to stroll, there's Washington Square and old Greenwich Village to wander in; if I want to stay home, my room is delightful, the little Lounge Bar and Wedgwood Room perfect for entertaining. And I like the warm friendly atmosphere. I felt at home the minute I stepped into the lobby."

Take a tip from her. You'll like it, too.

Zone of Progress

IN AN AGE of progress in many fields, no advances have been more helpful to man than those made in medicine and surgery.

One of the forces that has made it possible for this progress to be rapid is synthetic organic chemistry. This science has provided those who manufacture pharmaceuticals with means of obtaining many new chemical materials from which to produce new chemical combinations. Synthetic organic chemicals are priceless raw materials in the eternal fight for health.

Through the use of synthetic organic chemicals, many anesthetics have been developed. The number of these anesthetics is of great value, since the physician can choose one suited to the patient's needs. This means less shock and greater comfort for the patient, thus often contributing to his swifter recovery.

Many other pharmaceuticals are made with the help of synthetic organic chemicals. Anti-malarial substances, synthetic adrenalin, man-made vitamins, anti-pyretics (to cut down fever), many kinds of sedatives, vehicles in which drugs are administered, and solvents used in extracting drugs from natural sources are some of the medicinal aids made possible by these chemicals.

CARBIDE AND CARBON CHEMICALS CORPORATION, the Unit of UCC which pioneered in the field of synthetic organic chemistry, has made more than 160 synthetic organic chemicals available in commercial quantities. Many of these chemicals are important in various ways in the pharmaceutical industry.

Pharmaceutical manufacturers, and research and technical men in chemical and allied industries, are invited to send for a copy of the 100-page booklet P-2, "Synthetic Organic Chemicals," which technically describes the properties and some of the uses of these chemicals in pharmaceutical and other fields.

Post-War Education Symposium Continues

By Emerson Hinchliff '14
Instructor, Romance Languages

IT SEEMS presumptuous for me to pontificate about post-war education after having been teaching for only three and a half years. But perhaps I speak from a favorable vantage point, not too far into the woods to see the trees, as it were.

I am tempted to probe some of the high-sounding phrases which we now hear: "outmoded" this, "long overdue" that, and the like. The Commission on Liberal Education of the Association of American Colleges is reported, for example, to have recommended that there be no more courses of purely "disciplinary value." But our own Department of Mathematics is still in the throes—and I mean throes—of expansion following the Army's discovery that math is a "must," while the "educationalists" are busy sharpening their axes for such courses.

Languages Give Discipline

I am glad to classify the study of foreign languages, in addition to having a cultural and utilitarian value, as being in the disciplinary group. As in mathematics, learning a language develops memory, method, order, logic in applying rules, and a feeling toward pushing a thing to a completed whole. Are not these good attributes in any walk of life?

Abolish mental discipline indeed! We get too many intellectual mavericks sent to us now! One of our main chores in the Department of Romance Languages is teaching the rudiments of English grammar to graduates of "progressive" pre-college education. Fathers and mothers can help by seeing that John and Jane don't spend all their electives on snap courses.

Should our methods of teaching modern languages be changed? Most ALUMNI NEWS readers will have seen magazine articles describing learning to speak a foreign language in nothing flat, the inference being that past methods of language instruction have been all wrong. You can teach a student to speak a foreign language surprisingly rapidly if you have small classes, interested students, and are prepared largely to sacrifice the reading and writing skills. These "ifs" all hang together, and not the least of them is the interested student.

I ask all my classes whether they want to stress speaking, reading, or writing. Many hands invariably go up for speaking, and then I tell them they can have all the speaking they want merely by being speedy in their conversation recitations. I tell them not to feel self-conscious nor to worry about mistakes; that an oral mistake made rapidly is just as good as a perfect phrase that takes a couple of minutes to produce. Do they come through? As individuals, a pleasant proportion of them does come through, but as a whole the classes do not. The typical student will hem and haw, start and stop, look miserable, and finally get a few words out. The rest of the class, after being intent for thirty second on what he is trying to say, lapses into somnolence, the good students thinking about their next class, the poor students just lapsing. When this becomes too painful, I decide that it is unfair to the majority, and I then spend most of my time on reading and blackboard work.

Reading Important

I try to make it up to my classes to some extent by talking quite a bit myself, so that the students can at least have experience in hearing spoken Spanish. In fact, this last facet of language learning is surprisingly important. I well remember how, after a year of Spanish, I arrived in Buenos Aires and was able to ask a policeman a direction, but found myself totally unable to understand him when he gave it, he talked so fast.

Mind you, I am not apologizing for stressing the reading of Spanish. After all one is more likely to use that than the spoken variety. With a knowledge of grammar, acquaintance with verb endings and subject and object pronouns, and the ability to puzzle out the word order of an inflected language, the student has a basis on EVERY ASPECT of our national life will be affected by the events now taking place, and of course college education cannot and should not be an exception. The trend that has been in effect since 1914 looking toward a broadening of our national outlook and responsibilities continues, and has been accelerated by recent developments. Whatever field the college graduate plans to enter, whether it be Government service, the Army or Navy, education, the professions, or industry and finance, the requirements he will have to meet will call for more extensive education and preparation than ever before.

Need Thorough Training

This will, of course, be especially true in the physical sciences. The frontiers of scientific knowledge have been vastly extended during the war period. Years of research and engineering have been telescoped into unbelievably short periods of time. Challenging opportunities lie ahead for adapting these advances to fruitful peacetime uses. The physical sciences form the basis of radio and television, chemistry, aviation, and in fact all those industries that seem to hold unusual promise for growth and development in the years ahead. The rapid speed with which these industries are developing already requires large numbers of highly trained physicists, chemists, and engineers.

Scientific knowledge of itself, however, will not be enough in that post-war period. Industry has grown so large and concerns so intimately the lives of every one of our citizens through the great amount of employment it provides, that its influences extend into the roots of the social life of the people. Therefore, if we are to avoid radical swings in political direction and maintain stability, our business leaders must be prepared through college education and training to integrate the activities of the companies they direct with the general economy. It is therefore highly advisable that college education to prepare for business should embrace a basic training in political theory and economics, so that young people who will later direct these enterprises will have an understanding of the background of our political and economic institutions and the relationship of business to them.

Recently the president of one of the automobile manufacturing companies who is devoting a large part of his time to post-war planning said that he was seeking out college economists to guide him in his recommendations because their training and background are necessary to provide industry with a broad basic outlook. Every successful business man must have such an outlook if he is to make his own business a success in the post-war period. Business will have to give more attention than heretofore to the formation of public opinion, or it may find that the "rules of the game" have been so changed that private enterprise is rendered impossible and perforce has been replaced by some form of statism.

New Opportunities Ahead

For too many years, business asked chiefly to be let alone. It wanted no political interference with its activities, and all too often it was unwilling to interest itself in political affairs. Those days are now passed and will never return. Enlightened business leadership today realizes that it is part of the warp and woof of the national economy and that it is required to fulfill the obligations this relationship involves. In the common interest, it is essential that those who will become the business leaders of the future should prepare themselves for this responsibility.

To train young men and women who will measure up to these enlarged opportunities is the great challenge that confronts our colleges and universities. Undoubtedly there will have to be changes in the curriculum, probably a more intensive application to college studies on the part of the student body, and perhaps new techniques in teaching. But I am confident that whatever is necessary will be done, because through these students the universities will be able to play a larger part than ever before in moulding the course of events and thus helping in substantial measure to realize the high promise of American life.

Entertain Girls

CORNELL Women's Club of Middletown gave its annual party for high school girls and their mothers at the home of Ella A. Holmes '98 in Middletown. Mary L. McCutcheon '42, Club president, introduced Janet E. Sutherland '46 who spoke about the University and described the Campus, using lantern slides from the Alumni Office.

Letters

Subject to the usual restrictions of space and good taste, we shall print letters from subscribers on any side of any subject of interest to Cornellians. The ALUMNI NEWS often may not agree with the sentiments expressed, and disclaims any responsibility beyond that of fostering interest in the University.

Commendation

TO ROMEYN BERRY:

I read your article in the NEWS of January 15 before getting at the mail this morning. More power to your pen! I know the alumni generally will read it with as much interest and joy as I did. The only thing that I would add is, "All papers please copy!"

—FRANCIS O. AFFELD JR., '97

More power to you!

—BIRGE W. KINNE '16

Your "My Day" in the January 15 issue is a corker! It's perfect, and I want to congratulate you. . . . Keep up the good work.

P.S.—Enclosed find ten bucks to order of Cornell University to start my 1944 contributions.

—CHARLES H. BLAIR '97

Have noted in the New York papers excerpts of yours and Dr. Day's statements on the World-Telegram's Red scare at the University. The robust, vigorous, forthright, and honest smashing of the nonsense along with your ever-enjoyable gusto is in pleasant contrast to the usual timidity and grovelling of other victims. . . .

Anyway, between the liberal papers howling "reactionary" over the alleged Gannett business dealings and the present communistic furor, life in Ithaca must be stimulating if not particularly merry. Shall we say they got the "berry" this time?

Hotelmen in Phoenix

TO THE EDITOR:

Just received my December 1 issue of the NEWS, and want to tell you how much I enjoyed the new format, as it is much easier to pick out names, etc.

Also have a little news about some of the Hotel School boys out this way and thought it might be included in an early issue. I am the only one of the men mentioned that is practicing the hotel business as I completed yesterday my first six months here at the Hotel Westward Ho in Phoenix, Ariz.

Frank J. Haberl '44 and Glenn A. Wood '44 are both instructors at Thunderbird Field II where the Army Air Corps sends its fledglings for primary training. Wyatt D. McNairy '42 and Don M. Davis '45 are in the Army Air Corps and receiving primary training at Thunderbird Field I here in Phoenix, so you can see we can keep up the "Old Cornell Spirit." Friday night I received a wonderful surprise when two B-24 bombers were grounded in Phoenix and the officers were sent into the Ho for the night, and who should register but Lieutenant Arthur M. Roberts '44 and I can tell you we had a swell get-together.

We all miss the old school and wish that we could come back, but one of these days it will be all over and we can again come back to the Campus for a visit.—ROBERT S. NOYES '43

Women Celebrate

CORNELL Women's Club of Pittsburgh, Pa., gave a Founder's Day party at the Fairfax Hotel in Pittsburgh, January 11. Dr. Irene Davis Ferguson '21 described her work at an American Red Cross blood bank, and Eugene C. Batchelar '02 spoke about the University's training program for service men. Wilbur C. Sutherland '29 extended the greetings of the men's Cornell Club, and its president, William H. Phillips, Jr. '12, brought films of Alaska. Recent motion pictures of the Campus were also enjoyed.

Carey Promotes Fund

MATTHEW CAREY '15, as vice-president of the Alumni Fund Council, is organizing a geographical co-ordinating committee for the Fund, which will have chairmen for those States where there are too few alumni for regional Class committees to function effectively. The State chairmen thus far appointed are for Alabama, George H. Barnes '14 of Andalusia; Georgia, Dr. Charles C. Rife '24 of Atlanta; Nebraska, J. Lawrence Cooke '34 of Omaha; Tennessee, Tracy B. Augur '17 of Norris; West Virginia, Julian J. Hast '15 of Wheeling. Carey has compiled a detailed analysis of the geographic distribution of gifts to the Alumni Fund for the years 1941-42 and 1942-43, showing for each year by States the number of alumni, number and percentage of contributors to the Fund, and the total and average amounts given, with percentage of increase or decrease in both number of donors and amount contributed.

As chairman of the Michigan committee, Carey has mailed from his office, 2252 National Bank Building, Detroit, a report on Michigan's comparative standing to all Cornellians in the State. For the 1942-43 Alumni Fund, Michigan added forty-one donors and moved from nineteenth to eleventh place in percentage of alumni giving. Average gift of Michigan Cornellians increased from $17.68 to $19.56. Leader last year was the State of Delaware, with 26.17 per cent of alumni contributing an average gift of $109.46.

Carey closes his report with the suggestion that alumni aid the Fourth War Bond Drive by including "a $25 Series F Bond (cost $18.50) purchased in the name of Cornell University."

Promote Hay Research

GRANT of $15,000 a year for five years has been made to the University by Aviation Corp. for a comprehensive study of ways to improve the quality and lower the cost of producing hay.

Research directed by a committee under Professor Richard Bradfield, Agronomy, will be carried on by numerous departments: the College of Engineering for planning and designing machinery, agricultural engineers for farm applications, botanists for plant study, agronomists for soil problems, animal husbandmen for livestock management, plant breeders for developing better varieties, and nutritionists for studies of feeding quality. Questions to be answered, says Professor Bradfield, are "What kinds of hay are wanted? How can it best be grown, harvested, and stored?"

Present machinery and processes designed to save labor, such as hay crushers, field choppers, buck rakes, pickup balers, forced ventilation barn dryers, and use of grass silage will be examined with hope of developing mass production to lower costs. Means of reducing the curing time of hay to allow better labor distribution, overcome weather handicaps, maintain high quality, and cut losses of barns burned from stored hay improperly dried will be investigated.

It is generally known, Professor Bradfield says, that a mixed grass legume hay, preferred by most feeders, is most nutritious when cut immature. But this reduces yield and increases the cost per ton. Studies will be made of how much farmers can afford to pay for high quality, what different hay mixtures may be needed, and how the labor of haying may be adjusted to other farm operations without sacrificing quality. One answer may be the growing of hay crops of widely differing dates of maturity, Professor Bradfield predicts. Solution of these problems, he says, may bring widespread substitution of hay for

Now in My Time!

By Cayuga

WE READ of William Collier's death, aged seventy-seven, at Beverly Hills, California.

He was Willie Collier when he used to come to Ithaca. In May, 1904, when he played "The Dictator" at the Lyceum, he must have been thirty-seven. George Nathan and your reporter were the committee to pick him up after the show and take him around to a Savage Club party in the Blood Block.

Willie Collier seemed pretty old in 1904 and he must have felt pretty old, too, for he said, while he was dressing, that he now made it a point to get to bed by three o'clock. But he had two nice boys in his company whom he'd like to bring along, if that was all right, and they'd stay, he felt pretty sure, until the last dog was hung.

Of course it was all right, and both turned out to be important additions to the party. And when the exercises broke up, around four, and we took Willie Collier back to the Ithaca Hotel, it was beginning to be daylight over Eddy Street with every promise of a soft, warm, May Sunday.

The two boys didn't want to go to bed then; not the least bit! They weren't due to leave town until the west-bound Black Diamond came through in the early evening, and a warm May Sunday in a college town was not a thing to waste in bed when you were on the road doing one-night stands.

So we had bacon and eggs and toast and coffee at Beau Benton's dog wagon, and walked to Renwick. There we hired the sloop Result from Captain Jarvis and spent the whole day on the Lake; sailing when there was a breeze, drifting and dozing when there wasn't. They were two painfully sunburned troupers when we just barely pushed them on to the back platform of the departing Black Diamond.

It was not until six years afterwards that we saw Jack Barrymore again. (He didn't become John Barrymore until considerably later.) We saw him then in the crowd on Forty-second Street and he blocked traffic for fifteen minutes asking about the Savage Club and Captain Jarvis and the Result. He said it had been days after that cruise before his sunburn got better and it ceased to be agony to take off makeup. That other nice boy, Thomas Meighan, he told us, had quit the stage for the time being and was trying his luck with these new moving pictures out in California some place.

Sometimes we wish we could remember what happened yesterday—and where we left our hat, spectacles, and medicine tablets—as clearly as we recall the incidents of that soft May night back in 1904. "The Dictator" was written by Richard Harding Davis. In it Willie Collier was the charming but worthless young scamp who was shipped off to a banana republic to avoid the police until the thing blew over. Down there he got mixed up in the current revolution, won it, and himself became the new dictator. Thomas Meighan was the handsome officer who led in the file of United States Marines in the third act. Jack Barrymore was the comic wireless operator. The show packed the Lyceum, with President Schurman in one stage box, Eb Treman in the other.

O well! Thomas Meighan died quite a while back; Jack Barrymore, more recently; now Willie Collier; and the last time we saw George Nathan he said he wasn't feeling any too good himself. It is noteworthy that Willie Collier lived to be fifteen years older than the two younger men. Perhaps it was because he went back to the hotel and got some sleep. On the other hand, he missed breakfast at Beau Benton's dog wagon, the walk to Renwick through the blue mists of day-break, and all that golden day upon Cayuga. We know some old codgers who'd figure that was worth fifteen years!

grain in feeding farm animals, since hay provides digestible nutrients at about half the cost.

Hay is one of the most important of American crops, especially for feeding dairy animals and beef cattle. The 1942 crop was grown on 72,000,000 acres, with yield of 105,000,000 tons. New York State is the country's largest producer.

Raising Poultry

Modern Poultry Farming. By Professor Louis M. Hurd, Poultry Husbandry, Extension. The Macmillan Co., New York City. 1944. xi + 599 pages, illustrated. $4.

This is a second revised edition of Professor Hurd's successful Practical Poultry Farming, first published in 1928. Like its predecessor, it appears in the Rural Science Series, edited by Professor L. H. Bailey.

The book is a complete guide for the successful raising and marketing of poultry, either for the backyard flock or for larger operations. It comes from the author's long experience as a member of the Extension Service. It includes the latest information on feeding, breeding, and protection from diseases, with more than 200 illustrations and a complete index. Chapters on turkeys, guinea fowls, peafowls, ducks, geese, swans, and pigeons are included.

Modern Thriller

You Only Hang Once. By Henry W. Roden '18. William Morrow & Co., New York City. 1944. 218 pages. $2.

This is a rip-roaring murder mystery, complete with gangsters, guns, girls, and lots of gore. As the title suggests, the book has not one killing, but three accomplished and two more foiled just in time. It is a fast-moving story of how the narrator, one Johnny Knight, former newspaper man, and his "private eye" friend, Sid Ames, find the murderer and unravel the plot to the discomfiture of the "dumb cops." You will decide that at least four different persons are the guilty one before you come to the surprise denouement in the next-to-last chapter.

Like many another busy business man, "Tex" Roden has found diversion for years in reading mystery stories. This is his first try at writing them—and a good one. We suspect that in writing it his memory went back twenty-five years and more to his undergraduate remembrances as a member of the Manuscript Club which flourished before and right after the first world war under the patronage of the late Professor Martin Sampson and Professors Frederick M. Smith, William Strunk, Jr., PhD '96, and Bristow Adams.

The publishers relate that "after excited readings and mounting enthusiasm over this first manuscript," they generously offered a modest advance on royalties, to get the book and help out the unknown author. After Roden had replied that he "might be able to swing things a little longer" without an advance, the publishers discovered that their new author is president of Clapp Baby Food Co., chairman of the board of G. Washington Coffee Refining Co., and chairman of the advertising plans board of the huge American Home Products Co. "Morrow's face was red for a week!"

Madelaine Ring '45 of New York City was properly terrifying as the homicidal sorority girl who wants security by fair means or foul; Margaret Hursh '44 of Bay Village, Ohio, was an unsuspecting and thoroughly killed murderess. Good in supporting roles were Priscilla A. Okie '45 of Lansdowne, Pa., as a manly member of the weaker sex who pole vaults and hurls javelins; Patricia A. Colbert '44 of Youngstown as the compleat premed student; Margaret M. Taylor '45 of Lexington, Ky., in the compromising situation of best friend to a murderess; and Ann E. Shively '45 of Hamilton, as Glamorpuss, a shapely devotee of the Drahma, whose pretty posturings drew whistles from two capacity audiences.

NAVAL AVIATION CADETS GET FLIGHT MANEUVER INSTRUCTION

A class at the Ithaca Airport studies blackboard diagrams showing how to fly rectangular courses, "S" turns, and series of "8's." This and the cover picture (of a Piper J-3 Cub used for training) illustrate the instruction given in the Civil Aeronautics Administration War Training Service, of which Foster M. Coffin '12 is University coordinator. Approximately 100 cadets get ground school instruction at the University and flight training at Ithaca Airport for three months, coming here from Naval Flight Preparatory Schools at Colgate and Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute and going on to Pre-flight School at Chapel Hill, N.C. They are quartered in the old Seal and Serpent house at 102 West Avenue and former Theta Delta Chi house at 15 South Avenue. Chief flight instructor under H. M. Peters at the Airport is Egbert T. Basketball Spotty

AFTER three consecutive defeats and a major reshuffling of the lineup, the basketball team returned to the victory column in Barton Hall January 22 with a 50-41 conquest of a bigger and stronger Hobart team.

Cornell lost to Columbia, 29-33, in New York City January 15, thereby forfeiting its last chance to finish near the top of the Eastern Intercollegiate League, and to Rochester, 35-41, in Barton Hall January 12.

The major change in the lineup came after the Columbia game when Nathan Militzok, USNR, forward, and Kenneth M. Haggerty, USMCR, guard, failed to return to Ithaca with the squad. For breaking this rule, they were demoted to the Junior Varsity squad. They then failed to appear for practice. Haggerty finally reported to Coach Emerald B. Wilson the day of the Hobart game, but he did not play.

To meet this situation, Coach Wilson started Edwin R. Mallery, USNR, and John G. Kimball, USNR, at forwards; Robert W. Gale, USNR, at center; and Lawrence R. Davis, USMCR, and Roger D. Booze '45, USNR, at guards.

This combination worked fairly well against Hobart, but Cornell trailed, 9-14, the first ten minutes of the game. Then Robert J. Spear '45 of Westport replaced Kimball. Immediately the team's floor play improved, and Gale found the range. Cornell scored 19 points in a row, 10 of them by Gale, and took a 31-18 lead at intermission. Late in the half, Spear suffered a broken finger on his right hand and had to leave the court.

Cornell held its advantage throughout the second half and twice stretched the lead to 20 points. With the score 47-27 and with Cornell using some of its reserves, Hobart began to cut the deficit and outscored Cornell, 14-3, in the last eight minutes.

The game was rough from the start, the officials calling thirty-seven fouls, including two technical violations.

Gale was first in scoring with 20 points, followed by Hercinger of Hobart with 13. Booze and Davis each scored 10.

Gale, who had scored 83 points in Cornell's first five League games, was held to 2 points—on free throws—in the Columbia contest in New York. In spite of Gale's failure to score from the field, Cornell took a 16-12 lead at the half but could not match Columbia's second-half rally. Haggerty led Cornell in scoring with 11 points.

The Rochester game showed Cornell at its worst in shooting and passing. Gale scored 10 points. Gebhardt of Rochester was high scorer with 22 points.

In games through January 22, Cornell was in third place in the League. The standings:

	W	L	Pts	OP
Dartmouth	6	0	317	241
Pennsylvania	3	2	257	262
Cornell	2	4	260	268
Columbia	1	3	140	163
Princeton	1	4	183	223

At that point, Dartmouth could do no worse than tie for its seventh consecutive championship.

The Junior Varsity basketball team won its sixth straight victory January 12 with a 29-24 decision over the Waterloo Sunocos, then lost for the first time January 22 when it bowed to a Cornell Navy V-12 aggregation, 31-34.

Lose Track Opener

TRACK team opened its indoor season at West Point, January 22. The US Military Academy won the triangular engagement with 66½ points, Dartmouth scoring 42½ and Cornell 17½.

Walter Z. Newman, USNR, placed second to Craig of the Academy in the 60-yard dash; Howard W. Blose '44, formerly of the football team, placed second to Vessie of Dartmouth in the 16-pound shot put; James Hartshorne, USMCR, was second to Vessie in the high jump and third in the broad jump; and Henry W. Miller, USNR, was third in the 80-yard low hurdles.

Wrestlers Lose and Win

WRESTLING team lost and won two close matches in Barton Hall, bowing to Lehigh, 12-14, January 15 and defeating Columbia, 18-14, January 22.

Lehigh and Cornell each won four of the eight matches, but Lindholm, Lehigh 145-pounder, earned a fall and the two extra points that meant a victory. He threw George W. Bishop '44, USNR, with a far arm hold in 8:58. Cornell decisions were earned by Fred D. McNair '45, USNR, in the 121-pound class; Wilfred LaRock '45 of Ithaca in the 155-pound class; Rodney Stieff, USNR, in the 165-pound class; and Gordon H. Steele '45, USNR, in the unlimited division.

McNair opened the Columbia meet with a fall over Schreiber in 1:30, using a half-nelson and crotch hold. Donald Orner '45 of Albany won by forfeit in the 128-pound class. Columbia wrestlers won the next four bouts and took a 14-10 lead. Joseph Dewhurst, USMCR, making his debut in the Cornell lineup, won a decision over Touey in the 175-pound class, and Steele came through with the needed victory in the unlimited division, throwing Romeo with a half-nelson and body hold in 2:59.

Swimmers Win Two

SWIMMING team won two more meets to extend its victory string to four straight. Five new records were set in the Old Armory pool January 15 when Cornell defeated the University of Rochester, 54-21. One week later, Cornell scored 76, Sampson Naval Training Station 60, and Hobart 23 in a triangular meet at Sampson.

The Cornell 300-yard medley relay team of Irving M. Katz, USNR, backstroke; Burton Preston III '45, USMCR, breaststroke; and David C. Wiley, USNR, freestyle, swam the distance in 3:08.8 against Rochester, breaking the Cornell record of 3:09.3 and the pool record of 3:09.9.

Rochester's Reynolds accounted for the other three new marks. His 2:16.9 for 220-yard freestyle bettered the pool record of 2:21, and his 5:14.6 at 440 yards freestyle broke the pool record of 5:15.6 and the University of Rochester record of 5:19. Reynolds also won the 100-yard freestyle.

Cornell's winners against Rochester were, in addition to the 300-yard medley relay team, James H. Carrington, USNR, in the 50-yard freestyle; Edwin Rorke '45 of Wynnewood, Pa., in diving; Katz in the 150-yard backstroke; Paul C. Murray, USMCR, in the 200-yard breaststroke; and the 400-yard freestyle relay team of Vernon Smith, Naval Aviation cadet; Robert N. Holsten, USMCR; Carrington, and Robert A. Moore '44 of Brooklyn.

In the triangular meet at Sampson, Wiley won the 50- and 100-yard freestyle races, Katz won the backstroke, and Preston the breaststroke events. The relay teams also won, with Paul L. Klein '46 of New York City, Preston, and Zachary Rosenfield, USNR, comprising the medley trio, and John D. Holmes, USNR, Smith, Carrington, and Holsten making up the freestyle quartet.

Ensign Hanley Staley, former University of Michigan diver, won that event for Sampson. In doing so, he defeated two old pupils, John R. Cline, USNR, and Rorke. Staley was in the Naval Training School at Cornell and often assisted Coach Gordon S. Little with the divers.

Hollister, Engineering, has been elected a director of the American Society of Civil Engineers for a three-year term; took office January 19 at the Society's annual meeting in New York City. He was first president of the Indiana section of the ASCE, is a past president of the Ithaca section, past secretary of the Philadelphia section, and was a member of the national executive committee of the structural division in 1921-22.

Collier's leading editorial January 15 says, "John L. Collyer ['17 president and University Trustee], president of the B. F. Goodrich Co., seems to be talking about as much sense as anybody about what to do with our big synthetic rubber industry after the war." Collyer suggests that since, in peace time, synthetic rubber still costs more than natural rubber, we import natural rubber after the war and keep enough plants open to produce up to 200,000 tons of synthetic rubber a year. He adds that the world rubber-producing capacity, 2,800,000 tons a year, twice as much as was used in any pre-war year, will force rubber prices down and stimulate the discovery of new uses for rubber. "It looks to us," says Collier's, "as if Mr. Collyer is at least stabbing in the direction of the right answer. And, on at least one point, we agree with him 100 per cent; namely, that this is a question for Congress to debate and decide, not one for secret agreement kept from the American people 'til later on."

Victor Emanuel '19, University Trustee and president of Aviation Corp., has purchased the Larchmont Farm of H. Edward Babcock, chairman of the Board of Trustees. The farm, of about 300 acres, is near Mecklenburg, west of Ithaca.

At the annual meeting of the American Political Science Association, January 20-23, in Washington, D.C., Professor Robert E. Cushman, Government, president of the Association, spoke on "Civil Liberty After the War;" stated that the United States is on the horns of a dilemma: whether to permit or deny civil liberties to citizens of enemy countries living in the United States. He added that he was for "no compromise of our principles . . . we must sternly refuse to place any new peacetime restrictions on freedom of speech, freedom of press, and freedom of assembly." Professor Cushman's writes on, "The Purge of Federal Employees Accused of Disloyalty," in the Autumn, 1943, issue of the Public Administration Review. He analyzes three methods of handling the problem of Federal employee loyalty, suggests that Congressional loyalty tests be abandoned and all loyalty tests be clarified.

Richard H. Edwards, executive secretary of the CUCA and CURW from 1919-37, now visiting professor in the School of Religion at Howard University, Washington, D. C., will conduct a new series of courses at Keuka College, beginning February 2.

Post-War Education

which to build. If later he has to learn really to speak, read, or write the language, he has the foundation ready at hand.

These observations are based on first-, second-, and third-year classes, which are those required for an Arts degree. When you get to the advanced elective courses, the situation changes entirely. Classes are smaller, students wouldn't be there if they weren't interested, and the instructor can gab to his heart's content and count on the students' gabbing with him. I have a picnic in my few such classes, getting arguments started and encouraging the students to go for one another and for me. But the fact remains that these successful talking classes are composed of students who have gone through the reiterative training of the standard first three years.

I should like to try the experiment of offering separate sections in the first, second, and third years to specialize in spoken Spanish and with enrollment limited to ten or a dozen. I dare say that the initial enrollment would be fairly large. The tongue-tied, the self-conscious, those with poor pronunciation who made no successful effort to overcome it, would be ruthlessly rooted out (a tough administrative chore, by the way). I am convinced that such classes would do well. I am also convinced that it would be a waste of time and money to try to force the conversational approach on all students.

The Army language and area experiment will be instructive, but not entirely germane, because here again you have interested groups.

It all harks back to alert, interested students. You alumni produce the inquiring minds and send them to us and

I guarantee that, by and large, Cornell courses will give them enough to chew on. If they are content merely to "get by" and prefer to spend too large a proportion of their time and energy on pleasure and social activities, that is their privilege and their (and their parents') look-out.

Some day I am going to make a speech or write an article pointing out that Cornell is a university, not a prep school, and that consciously or unconsciously we call universities "institutions of learning." Note it's "learning," not "teaching." I conceive the Faculty's function as helping students to learn by "boiling things down" for them to a reasonable degree, by pointing out pitfalls into which former students have fallen, and by answering questions to clear up moot points. Beyond this, the professor's main service to the student is in inducing real and voluntary and strenuous effort by the student himself. I am instinctively distrustful of sugar-coating education.

Secretary Travels

WALTER C. Heasley, Jr. '30, acting Alumni Secretary, will speak at a dinner of the Cornell Club of St. Louis, Mo., February 8, and a luncheon of the Cornell Club of Chicago, Ill., at the University Club, February 10.

Letters Welcome

ROMEYN BERRY'S "Now In My Time!" and President Day's statement to the Trustees in our last issue are bringing widespread commendation from alumni. Some of the first communications appear in our "Letters" column this issue. As this is written to catch the final pages, we are beginning to hear from subscribers farther away from Ithaca as they read the January 15 News. Some of their letters will appear in the next and succeeding issues as space permits.

Thus far, two anonymous contributions have reached us: one an interesting and well-written letter signed only "Cornell '34;" the other of quite a different sort.

As we have room, and subject to the ordinary restrictions of good taste which govern any reputable publication, our "Letters" column is open to all Cornellians on any subject pertaining to the University. Alumni opinions are welcomed, whether or not the News agrees with them.

But like every other reputable magazine, we do not publish anonymous communications. Names of the authors will be withheld if requested, but to receive consideration your letters must be signed, as evidence of good faith. If "Cornell '34" will identify himself, we should like to publish his letter.

Cornell Pays Up

THE Big Green's football victory over Cornell on November 13 has enriched the 1944 Alumni Fund by $10. A letter and a check for that amount has reached Hanover from C. C. Joys III, Cornell '39, who explains that he came out on the wrong end of a bet with his Pacific shipmates, L. T. Merriam, Jr. '39 and A. S. Eiseman, Jr. '40 of Dartmouth, and that they had agreed to make payment to the alumni fund of the winner's college.

Mr. Joys expressed the hope that the bet might become an annual Alumni Fund feature among graduates of the two colleges.

History Files Grow

RECENT additions to the University's Collection of Regional History include fifty-one volumes of the Hammondsport Herald, given by Merritt M. Landon of Bath. The paper is virtually complete from its beginning in 1874 until 1928, when its name was changed to the Keuka Grape Belt, and from then until 1936.

George S. Sheppard '74 of Penn Yan has given a volume of The Yates Republican covering the years 1828-31, and a collection of nearly 900 letters written to John L. Lewis, Jr. which give valuable sidelights on the development of up-State New York in the nineteenth century. Guy K. Weeden '26 of Sidney has donated files of The Republican Monitor of Cazenovia. A rare copy of the Albany Register for June 7, 1799, was given to Curator Whiteny R. Cross by Dr. D. M. Steele of Cayuga.

More Navy to Come

NAVY Department orders announced last week will establish classes for Naval Reserve midshipmen in the Naval Training School here, beginning March 1, to bring the School to its largest enrollment, according to Captain Burton W. Chippendale, USN, commanding officer.

A class of 200 apprentice seamen from college V-12 programs will begin March 1 new four-month courses for deck officers and in steam engineering. Similar groups of 200 enlisted men will report at the School the first of each succeeding month until the total reaches 800 in June, and this total will be maintained as the classes graduate. After a month of indoctrination, apprentice seamen will be appointed midshipmen, and upon completion of three months of officer training will be commissioned ensigns and ordered to active duty or further training. Similar schools for Naval Reserve midshipmen are operating at the US Naval Academy and at Notre Dame, Columbia, and Northwestern Universities.

The Midshipmen's School within the Naval Training School replaces and will enlarge the present classes for Reserve officers in deck training and steam engineering which it was announced last month would be discontinued when present classes finish late in April. It is expected that the present officers' course in Diesel engineering and the V-12 program for enlisted men will continue.

End of an Enemy

In a split second this enemy plane will be blasted from the skies by a shell from one of our anti-aircraft guns on the ground.

How can a gun hit a plane going 300 miles an hour 20,000 feet up . . . when it takes the shell 15 seconds to get up there and in that time the plane has gone more than a mile? Besides, the shell curves in its flight. Wind blows it. Gravity pulls on it. Even the weather affects its velocity.

The answer is the Gun Director—an electrical brain which aims the guns. Swiftly it plots the plane's height and course. Instantly it solves the complex mathematical problem, continuously matching the curved path of the shell to the path of the plane so that the two will meet. It even times the fuse to explode the shell at the exact instant.

The electrical Gun Director has greatly increased the deadliness of anti-aircraft gunfire. Developed by Bell Telephone Laboratories and made by Western Electric, it is one of many war weapons now being produced by the peacetime makers of Bell Telephones.
