SENIOR sport coats are gaining in popularity the longer they are worn, though some critics found their scarlet facing and pocket lapels rather bright. But the garments, as sport coats, are convenient, and they add decided color to class-room and Campus. By actual figures more are being worn by this senior class than were worn of any other senior costume—blazer, gob-suit, sport coat, or whichever—since the blazers of divers colors used by the class of 1914.

THE ANNUAL REVIEW and inspection of the R. O. T. C. was held on April 26 with President Farrand, General H. T. Allen, and other distinguished officials and guests in the reviewing stand. Among the various trophies and prizes awarded, the Barton Cup went to Cadet Colonel L. M. Orton '23; and the President's Award to Cadet O. T. Griswold '26.

FIRE destroyed the garage of the Yellow Taxicab company in Ithaca last week, wrecking seven of the company's cars, and threatening the busses of the Ithaca-Groton line. The total loss is estimated at about $25,000.

THE ART EXHIBIT of the work of local amateurs, not including members of the Faculty of the College of Architecture, had nineteen exhibitors. The best part of the display was made up of oil paintings by Professor W. C. Baker, who teaches drawing in the College of Agriculture; other participants were Miss Clara Garrett of the same department, Professors Bristow Adams, of the same College, Louis A. Fuertes '97, Mrs. Helen Binkerd Young '00, and H. J. Van Valkenburg of the Ithaca Engraving Company.

THE CORNELL DRAMATIC CLUB is scheduled to present on May 12 and 13 "A Game of Chess" by Alfred Sutor; "Sir David Wears a Crown" by Stuart Walker; and "The Last of the Lowries" by Paul Greene.

LECTURES for the week include "Some Animal Myths" by Professor William A. Hilton '99, of Pomona College, exchange professor of entomology here this year, before the Agassiz Club on May 8; "Le Roman Exotique" by Professor Firmin Roz, on May 8; "Myron's Discus-Thrower" by Professor Eugene P. Andrews '95, at the public installation of the new reproduction of the Discobolus, President Farrand in the chair, on May 8; "Our Present Outlook in Philosophy" by Professor John Stuart Mackenzie, of Cardiff College, Wales, on May 9; "Public Utilities" by former Professor Clarence F. Hirshfield, M.M.E. '05, now of the Detroit Edison Company, before the Sigma Xi, on May 10; "The World Court" by Professor Manley S. Hudson, of Harvard, on May 11; and Professor Boothroyd's public lecture at the Fuertes Observatory, on the same day.

SENIOR PLEDGES to the class memorial fund have lagged decidedly during the past week, and those who are concerned with the matter are trying to find causes for the lack of interest. One of the surmises is that the students are at this time immersed in preparations for many enterprises, ranging from Spring Day to Class Day, with all sorts of organizations holding annual dances, picnics, and final meetings. Another reason ascribed to the lack of interest in the endowment has been a week of intensive activity for a Cornell-in-China campaign, which has had more publicity in the Sun than any other series of events in recent years.

SOPHOMORES are being studied by the Department of Education, which has sent questionnaires to the members of the Class of '25 who are in the College of Arts and Sciences. Among the things which the educators want to know are: vocational preferences, fraternity affiliations, self-supporting activities, extra-curricular activities, and other phases of life outside the class-room, on which almost everyone has an opinion, and on which very few have any facts. It is proposed to follow this class through the remaining two years, and then to keep in touch with its members after they have been graduated, with the help of the alumni organization.

FRESHMAN BANQUET was a more enthusiastic and noisy affair than in recent years, and some of the speakers who had serious things to say were a bit non-plussed by continuous cheering and applause. President Farrand had no such difficulty, but when some of the others got the freshmen started on a joke or two, there was no stopping them.

THE MUD RUSH, held on upper Alumni Field, differed in no degree from those of other years, except that the parade was not carried downtown, but stopped at the baseball field where the Freshman team won a wierd exhibition of the national game from Buffalo Technical High School.

PROFESSOR CHARLES K. BURDICK has filed a brief in the United States Supreme Court in Washington defending the constitutionality of the Sheppard-Towner Act. The constitutionality of this act, which provides for maternal and child hygiene under a plan of joint action and expenditures by the Federal and State governments, has been questioned by the State of Massachusetts. Should the act be overturned, the arguments involved would affect many other arrangements between State and Nation, most of them for educational purposes, such as the Smith-Lever Act for agricultural extension, the Smith-Hughes Act for vocational education, the various acts under which the land grant colleges receive Federal support, and a number of others, some of them affecting road building. Professor Burdick's brief is filed in behalf of the Association of Land Grant Colleges.

PROFESSOR SUMNER H. SCHLICHTER, in an interview in The Cornell Daily Sun, condemns the Supreme Court decision against the constitutionality of the minimum wage law, as being wholly legalistic, and without reference to the evidence presented to it in the fields of medicine, sociology, and economics. "Indeed," says Professor Schlichter, "the Court proceeded as if the sciences of medicine, sociology, and economics did not exist, and based its decision almost solely upon formal legal reasoning which dodged rather than faced the issue in the case."

NEW COURSES in correspondence study are announced by the College of Agriculture. One of these is in sheep husbandry and the other is in vegetable forcing. Of the six courses already being given, in addition to the two new ones, poultry raising is the most popular.

THE MERGER of the Cornell and Geneva Experiment Stations has passed the Legislature. About the only difference it makes in the two institutions is to put them both under one board, and that is the one that has administered the Cornell station. The change will tend to prevent possible duplication in experiments, and the Geneva station will be likely to specialize in fruit experiments even more than before. It will remain at Geneva.

SPECTACULAR raids on hooch manufacturers and vendors, conducted in daylight in Ithaca, brought into the police net a number of local vendors who had but recently been apprehended and fined.

INTEREST IN BIRDS grows yearly at Ithaca, and for some time the neighborhood has been known as one of the thickest centers of bird population, according to the United States Biological Survey. This reputation is probably as much due to local knowledge of bird life, and to local recorders as it is to the actual facts of bird residence. Louis A. Fuertes '97 is the moving spirit of the Cayuga Bird Club, which reports 114 different species of birds seen on and around the Cornell Campus since January 1 of this year; and some summer visitors are yet to come.

Cornell Alumnae Honored

Three of Twelve Women Chosen Greatest in America are Cornell Graduates

Cornell claims as graduates three out of the twelve greatest American women of the present age, according to a classification prepared by a committee of the National League of Women Voters. They are M. Carey Thomas '77, president emeritus of Bryn Mawr; Anna Botsford Comstock '85, emeritus professor of natural history; and Martha Van Rensselaer '09, professor of home economics.

The other names on the list of twelve are Jane Addams, philanthropist; Cecilia Beaux, painter; Carrie Chapman Catt, politics; Minnie Maddern Fiske, stage; Louis Homer, music; Julia Lathrop, child welfare; Florence Rena Sabin, anatomy; Edith Wharton, literature; and Anna Jump Cannon, astronomy.

Miss Thomas was born in Baltimore, Md., January 2, 1875, the daughter of Dr. James Carey Thomas and Mary Whitall Thomas. She came to Cornell in 1875 and took her A.B. in '77, subsequently studying at Johns Hopkins and Leipzig, and taking her Ph.D. at Zurich in 1882. In 1885 she became professor of English at Bryn Mawr, was dean until 1894, and was president until 1921.

Miss Thomas was the first woman trustee of Cornell, serving from 1885 to 1889. She is the author of a study "Sir Gawayne and the Green Knight," "The Education of Women," and also an article "Should the Higher Education of Women Differ from That of Men?" published in The Educational Review. Miss Thomas made a statistical study of coeducation in the United States for the Encyclopedia Americana.

Mrs. Comstock was born in Otto, N. Y., September 1, 1854, the daughter of Marvin and Phebe (Irish) Botsford. She graduated from the Chamberlain Institute at Randolph, N. Y., in 1873, and came to Cornell in 1875. In 1885 she received her B. S. Mrs. Comstock also studied art at Cooper Union under John P. Davis. On October 7, 1878, she married John Henry Comstock, professor of entomology at Cornell. She is a candidate for an alumni trusteeship this year.

In addition to her work as a naturalist Mrs. Comstock is well known as an artist and wood engraver. Some of her work was exhibited at the Chicago Exposition in 1893, and at the Paris Exposition in 1900, and the following year she received a bronze medal for wood engraving at the Buffalo Exposition.

In 1899, Mrs. Comstock became assistant professor of nature study at Cornell. The following year she lectured at Stanford. In 1920 she became full professor of nature study. She retired the following year, and was subsequently appointed emeritus professor. She is the author of a number of books including "How to Know the Butterflies" (with her husband), "How to Keep Bees," "Confessions to a Heathen Idol," "Handbook of Nature Study," bird, animal, tree and plant note books, and is editor of The Nature Study Review.

Miss Van Rensselaer was born in Randolph, N. Y., the daughter of Henry Killian and Arvilla (Owen) Van Rensselaer. She graduated from Chamberlain Institute in 1884, and took her A. B. in 1909. From 1884 to 1894 she taught in the public schools of the state, becoming an extension lecturer at the College of Agriculture in 1900. She has been professor of home economics and head of the Home Economics Department since 1911, and is president of the American Home Economics Association. In 1918-19 she served as a member of the executive staff of the U. S. Food Administration.

Medical Alumni to Organize

Plan Annual Program and Banquet at the Medical College in New York May 16

In celebrating the completion of the twenty-fifth year of the Medical College, the alumni of the College plan at their annual alumni day and dinner to form a permanent medical alumni organization. Members of the alumni committee from every class are sending notices of the reunion on May 16 in New York to their classmates, since this is the first year that the alumni themselves have assumed responsibility for the event.

President Farrand will be the principal speaker at the banquet at seven o'clock at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York. Other speakers are Dr. Foster Kennedy, associate professor of neurology, and Neal D. Becker '05, president of the Cornell Club of New York.

The entire day will be given over to professional clinics, conferences, demonstrations, and lectures at the Medical College and at cooperating hospitals. From one to two-thirty, the College will serve a buffet luncheon, which will be followed by an informal inspection of the Pay Clinic. Dr. Howard R. Craig '19 is chairman of the alumni committee.

COFFEE HOUSE OPEN TO ALUMNI

The Cornell Coffee House will be available to Cornell alumni returning to Ithaca for Spring Day affairs this year, following the plan of the Cornell University Christian Association to make the Coffee House serve both undergraduate and alumni needs as far as possible. Regular Coffee House dishes will be served during the day, and the facilities of Barnes Hall will be available for use as a lounge and rest room both for individual alumni and for parties.

THE SAGE CHAPEL PREACHER for May 13 will be the Rev. Dr. John Howard Melish, rector of Holy Trinity Church, Brooklyn.

Connecticut

Connecticut Cornellians are holding their annual banquet this year at the Hotel Taft in New Haven, at 6:15 on May 12, after the Cornell-Yale baseball game there. One Cornellian in each Cornell center of the State has been detailed to let his townsmen know about the party and to arrange automobile transportation to the game and dinner. Romeyn Berry is to be the principal speaker at the banquet.

Connecticut Women

At a meeting held on April 28, the first Cornell club for the women of Connecticut was formally organized and given the title of The Cornell Women's Club of Western Connecticut. At a previous informal gathering on February 24, plans for this organization were made and a tentative date set for the organization meeting.

The first officers are Clara G. Cornell '06, of Bridgeport, president; Mrs. Julia McClune Emery '02, of Glenbrook, vice-president; Cora Carroll '15, of Danbury, secretary-treasurer; N. Frances Weller '06, of Bridgeport, and Mrs. Iva Holmes Watson '06 members-at-large.

Oklahoma

EDITOR, ALUMNI NEWS:

Dean Dexter S. Kimball spent three days in Tulsa and saw some of the industries and oil development refineries, etc. If we hadn't had so many April showers he would have seen more.

On Friday evening, April 27, he was the principal speaker at a joint engineers' meeting and was much applauded for his well chosen remarks and good address.

On Saturday evening, April 28, the Cornell Club of Oklahoma entertained, or rather Dean Kimball entertained, at the University Club. We had a good attendance and after the dinner we sat in a group and heard of the new dorms, Chem Building, superfluous Fords, etc., at Ithaca, and a good time was had by all!

JO H. CABLE '18

Honolulu

There was a general get-together dinner in Honolulu on April 19, at which pictures of the University were shown.

NEW HECKSCHER GRANTS

Our previous records of the Heckscher grants for research will be found in the issues for April 14, 1921, and January 19, 1922. The following grants have been made since the close of our last list:

44. $150 to Professor Jacob R. Schramm to enable him to complete his researches on mineral nutrition in the algae, prosecuted during the past two summers at the Marine Biological Laboratory at Woods Hole.

45. $2000 to Professor James E. Creighton for the purpose of securing an assistant to relieve him in part of teaching during the academic year 1922-1923, and to lend aid in the preparation of the manuscript of a book on "The Rise of the Historical Method in Philosophy."

46. $450 to Professor James G. Needham for a research assistant to aid him in the systematic study of neotropical Epimerida, to be made immediately available.

Supplement to No. 6 $2833.33 to Professor Louis M. Dennis to enable him to employ research assistants to continue researches into germanium to July 1, 1923.

Supplement to No. 17. $1000 to Professor Charles C. Bidwell to be used to continue the services of an assistant during the spring and summer of 1922, and to purchase further material.

Supplement to No. 40. $500 to Professor Herman Diederichs for the purpose of undertaking investigations on flame propagation in combustible mixtures in closed cylinders.

Supplement to No. 40. $250 to Professor Diederichs for the purpose of meeting an unexpected expense in regard to equipment.

Supplement to No. 10. $1400 to Professors Orndorff and Gibbs for investigations on absorption spectra of certain organic compounds.

Supplement to No. 11. $1500 to Professor Floyd K. Richtmyer to pay the salary of an assistant from July 1, 1922, to July 1, 1923.

Supplement to No. 18. $1,100 to Professor Richtmyer to be used by him for equipment and assistance.

Supplement to No. 19. $2,000 to Professor Wallace Notestein to be used for paying the salary of an assistant during 1922-23.

47. $800 to be made subject to the order the President of the University, for the purpose of defraying the expenses of Professor F. K. Richtmyer, who has been requested by the National Research Council to cooperate in experiments planned by the Council and to be made in Colorado, on the relation of flower-visiting insects to the colors of flowers visited.

48. $500 to Professor Sutherland Simpson to provide a technician for histological preparations in connection with his investigations on the functions of the thyroid and other endocrine glands.

Supplement to No. 14. $2,400 to Professor Albert H. Wright, $400 for extra expenses incurred in connection with his expedition of 1920, and $2,000 in support of an expedition to be undertaken during the summer of 1922, to complete investigations into the fauna of the Okefenokee Swamp and adjoining regions.

Supplement to No. 25. $300 to Professor Arthur A. Allen for continuing experiments on canvasback ducks and other water fowl.

Supplement to No. 12. $1,200 to Professor Schoder for the employment of an assistant in completing and preparing for publication the work of "Hydraulic Measurement."

Supplement to No. 10. $550 to Professors Orndorff and Gibbs to employ an assistant for the purification of substances.

Supplement to No. 36. $1,100 to Professor Karapetoff to continue his investigations upon kinematic devices.

49. $750 to Professor Lane Cooper for the publication of his work entitled "An Aristotelian Theory of Comedy."

Supplement to No. 48. $1,900 to Professor Sutherland Simpson for his investigations on the functions of the thyroid and other endocrine glands.

Supplement to No. 41. $700 to Professor Cyrus R. Crosby for completing the drawings of the parts of Spider Linyphiidae.

50. $140 to William T. M. Forbes to secure the publication of an article on the wing-venation of the Coleoptera.

51. $750 to Professor Adam C. Gill for the employment of an assistant to aid in carrying on investigations into drift boulders in this region.

52. $900 (or such part of this sum as may be necessary) to Harry S. Vandiver to pay the salary of a substitute as instructor in mathematics during the second term of the academic year 1922-23, to enable him to cooperate in the investigations of the National Research Council on the theory of algebraic numbers.

Supplement to No. 21. $400 to Professor Peter A. Claassen to be used in completing a monograph on the Plecoptera of North America.

Supplement to No. 4. $1000 to Professor Arthur W. Browne to enable him to continue his investigations until March 1923.

Supplement to No. 37. $1500 to Professors Bancroft, Merritt, and Chamot, for continuing investigations upon colors in nature with the understanding that this money should not be available for use until June 1st, 1923.

Supplement to No. 40. $1000 to Professor Diederichs to be used in the employment of an assistant from January 1 to July 1, 1923, and for the expense of equipment and supplies.

Supplement to No. 19. $250 to Professor Wallace Notestein to be used in his work of editing and publishing manuscripts in connection with the history of the Long Parliament.

ATHLETICS

Hoyle Shakes Up Crew

Changes in the Varsity eight, for the purpose of securing a better balance, have recently been made by Coach John Hoyle. Starboard side, though heavier, has not kept pace with port, hence the shell has not been running on an even keel. The difficulty apparently had been overcome by the beginning of this week, and the crew is rowing now as follows:

Bow, C. F. Kells, 2, R. O. Egeberg, 3, C. N. Strong, 4, E. S. Calleson, 5, W. L. Hearn, 6, E. V. Baker, 7, E. W. Hoffman, stroke M. W. Filius, coxswain B. J. Nicholson.

Coach Hoyle planned to send this Varsity into a scrap or two with the Junior eight and the heavy freshman crew, which in the past two weeks has shown the Varsity the way home on more than one occasion. If this Varsity now makes good against the watch, the boating order will probably stand for the Yale-Princeton-Cornell races on May 19.

The crews are still troubled by unfavorable weather conditions; the wind has been blowing from the north for weeks and the air has been pretty cold. They are three weeks behind, as far as weather is concerned, but hardly that long in point of actual development.

Commander Jonas Ingram of the Navy has consented to act as referee of the Spring Day regatta.

Cornell Box Artists Weak

The Varsity nine lost both games of a week-end trip to New England, Brown winning at Providence Friday by a score of 5 to 2 and Harvard taking a loose game at Cambridge Saturday by a score of 12 to 2.

The Crimson settled the issue in the first inning; four hits, three bases on balls and two errors produced six runs. Knipe, who started the game for Cornell was ineffective and Frederick, who succeeded him in the first inning, not much better. Henderson who pitched the last seven innings for Cornell was hit safely seven times. On the other hand Hermann, pitching his first game for the Crimson, allowed but five hits. Jenkins with three hits out of four times at bat led the Crimson in batting. Bickley was the only Cornelian to obtain more than one hit.

Time of game, two hours and 17 minutes.

Weakness in the box is still proving a serious handicap to the Cornellians. In the Brown game Rollo pitched fine ball until the eighth inning, when Brown landed on him for two doubles and two singles, netting four runs. Brown scored one run in the first; Rollo pitched air tight ball for the next six innings and, Cornell having obtained two runs in the seventh, was leading 2 to 1 when the fatal eighth arrived.

First Home Victory

The first home victory was won last Wednesday when the team defeated Lafayette by a score of 7 to 3 in a loosely played game. The visitors' eight errors contributed materially to their undoing. Knipe was effective until the sixth, when Lafayette got to him, but Rollo relieved him and checked the attack.

Golfers Take Title

New York State Intercollegiate golf honors went to the Cornell team of four men in the first tournament in this competition held at Syracuse last Friday and Saturday. The Cornell golfers' total was 734 for 36 holes. Syracuse was second with 750 strokes; Colgate third with 756; St. Lawrence fourth with 420 (one day's play), and the University of Buffalo fifth with 838. N. L. Bates of Union won the individual trophy. The Cornell team was composed of Donald G. MacBean, H. G. Warnick, K. Shmizu and W. L. Jaffee.

Lacrosse Twelve Shines

Colgate proved an easy victim for the Cornell lacrosse team Saturday, Coach Bawlf's youngsters winning by a score of 9 to 2 in a match on Alumni Field. The Cornellians took an early lead and at the end of the half had rolled up five points to the visitors' two. For the first part of the second period neither team could make much headway, but in the last ten minutes Cornell cut loose and scored four more points.

Tennis Makes Bow

The tennis team made its debut Saturday defeating Syracuse on the home courts by a score of 6 to 0, taking four singles and two doubles matches.

Frosh Smother Tech

The freshman baseball team defeated Technical High School of Buffalo Saturday by a score of 15 to 4.

EARLY ITHACA IMPRINTS

The Ithaca Journal-News for April 10 prints a letter from Willard Austen '91, University Librarian, on the Library collection of Ithaca books and periodicals, which, augmented as it was when Mrs. Cynthia M. St. John turned over her collection, is now the largest in existence. Since the amount and kind of printed matter a place issues is an index of culture, such a collection as this is a matter of importance for the history of culture.

The earliest dated printed matter that has come to hand in this collection is a certificate of membership in the Ithaca Library, then located somewhere near Cascadilla Mills, which bears the date 1811. The next dated piece includes the by-laws and a brief catalog of the books in the Ithaca Library. This bears the date of 1815. Whether these pieces were actually printed in Ithaca cannot as yet be decided.

The American Journal, the forerunner of The Ithaca Journal, was started as early as 1818.

The Library file of The American Journal begins with the middle of 1819. Down to 1868 there are some nineteen different titles that may be classed as periodicals without too much stretch of imagination. This, of course, includes the newspapers proper, of which there are some ten different titles, although some are but changed titles of earlier issues and others had a short, but let us hope, sweet life before expiring. They all indicate there was somebody burning to say something that could not be said through the regular channels. Beginning with 1823, the Library has a fairly complete set of The Ithaca Journal, both weekly and daily.

Among the books and pamphlets printed in Ithaca during this period we find some

SPORT STUFF

From the horseman's standpoint there never was a time when Cornell had better stock to work on than it has right now. There never was a time when the colts shaped as well—when you saw more heads and faces that indicated intellectual capacity—or more bodies that evidenced a wise selection of sires and dams together with proper feeding and handling during infancy.

These are good colts and their morals are sound even tho the Elder Statesmen don't think so. Where the Elder Statesmen go wrong is in thinking their morals are bad simply because their manners are so inexpressibly rotten. But of course it takes an expert to tell that the stags at a dance are merely bad mannered. R. B.

interesting titles. The University Library has some seventy-four titles, many of which were printed in different editions. One of the prime needs of early settlement was school books, readers, spelling books, arithmetics, etc., and we find as early as 1821 Murray's "English Reader," which was reprinted from time to time. As early as 1822 began the printing of "The Musical Monitor," a collection of church music which was rather an ambitious undertaking for a country printer. This reappeared in several editions during the succeeding decade. Next in need came the dictionaries and we find, in 1828, Cobb's Abridgment of the old Walker's "Critical Dictionary of the English Language." This introduces a varied series of books for school use that went under the name of Cobb. The earliest edition of his "Explanatory Arithmetick" in the Library was printed in 1832, and of his Spelling Book, in 1834. These together with Cobb's "Juvenile Reader and Spelling Book" were issued in successive editions, or reprints, down to 1850.

Another series of school books was put forth during this period. The Library has a copy of Daboll's "Schoolmaster's Assistant" printed as early as 1832 and another as late as 1846. During this period two pamphlets interesting because of the subject matter, not from the printing, are one setting forth the trade of Tompkins County in connection with the application for a charter for the Tompkins County Bank in 1832, and the other giving the report on the survey of the Ithaca and Owego Railroad, 1828.

Ithaca also had its set of almanacs that began early in its history. As early as 1824 appeared "Beers's Almanack," probably earlier, as this issue appears with the name of E. Middlebrook, as compiler. In 1826 it is called "Middlebrook's Almanac." From this time on the name varied from simply "Almanack," "Farmer's Diary," "Farmer's Calendar," or "Western Almanac" down to 1842, when the long series of "Farmer's Almanack and Ephemeris" began which lasted down to 1921. It is significant that the farmers were primarily in mind in the issue of this publication, although at this earlier date calendars, as we know them to-day, were not so common and the town residents must have used the Farmer's Almanac pretty generally.

As for better literature, the fact that a library was opened as early as 1811 was a good indication, and the list of one hundred and fifteen books available in 1814 included some of the best standard literature of the time, the percentage of this class running about as high as in the libraries of our day. Some twenty years later, when Mack, Andrus and Woodruff published a catalogue of books that they printed and also that they had for sale, a copy of which catalogue is in this collection, we find a list of about two thousand volumes, covering a pretty carefully selected list of standard books that would be a credit to a much older community. The list includes, however, books imported for sale as well as those printed locally, and our special interest is in the kind of books for which local demand was sufficient to warrant reprinting locally.

Church and school naturally occupied a good deal of the intellectual leisure of the earlier residents of Ithaca, although we do find an authentic history of the late war between the United States and Great Britain, published by Mack and Andrus as early as 1829. During the decade from 1830 to 1840, a number of interesting literary items appeared, the earliest specimen of which, in the University Library, is William Linn's "Life of Thomas Jefferson," 1834, which was reprinted at least once during this decade. A little 16mo called "Lucinda," being a series of pathetic letters, was published in 1836, if not earlier. An edition of Scott's "Lady of the Lake" was put forth in 1837, and in 1838 appeared Samuel Parker's "Journal of a Tour beyond the Rocky Mountains." An edition of "Robinson Crusoe" and of Pope's "Essay on Man" was also locally printed. Altogether the Library has some twenty-three titles printed during this period.

The next decade, from 1840 to 1850, has fewer titles perhaps, but some important contributions. Early in the period we find an edition of Plutarch's "Lives" in one volume, Ramsey's "Life of Washington," Goldsmith's "Roman History," Johnson's "Rasselas," and Flavius Josephus, beautifully printed in six volumes. In 1843 appeared Ebenezer Mack's "Life of Lafayette," and the "Memoirs of Israel Putnam," all worth while works of standard quality. So far as works of this character go, the peak seems to have been reached by 1850, as we find few titles of such an established reputation after this, although the Library has eleven titles, all told, down to 1860.

Further donations will be welcomed and may help to complete the files.

CORNELL'S EMINENT WOMEN

DESIGNATING twelve of anything as the Country's greatest is a hopeless task unless one has an absolute unit of measurement and can apply it to all existing specimens in the area under consideration. The courage of the committee of the National League of Women Voters in selecting the twelve greatest American women of the present age is something to be admired and wondered at. We doubt if we should be equal to the task of disputing the selection or of producing a list with which to contradict. If such list can be made this committee is obviously in closer contact with its material than any group that we know. Whether or not the superlative is justifiable all can agree that such selection would comprise twelve great women. Its implication of greatness is parallel to that of any list of eminent persons, in that there might be a question of supremacy, but not of greatness.

It is an exceptionally high honor to Cornell that of this list, out of seven who are college educated, Miss Putnam, Mrs. Comstock, and Miss Van Rensselaer received their baccalaureate degrees here. Much has been written of the greatness of Cornellians, their prominence in business, their service in the war, their preeminence in their various professions. Those of us who busy ourselves with writing of Cornellians acknowledge to the committee of the league our failure to lay claim to undisputed leadership in the nation's affairs for any. We are pleased to have persons who have no connection with Cornell thus designate our alumnae as the preeminent leaders in their fields. One might assert without fear of contradiction that the inspiration of their instruction in the University was a factor in achieving this eminence. Whatever influence Cornell may have had on them, however, their public recognition as leaders unquestionably adds to the reputation of Cornell, whether as a place that merely educates persons that become great, or as one that educates them to greatness.

1910 NEW YORK DINNER

The Class of 1910 held a dinner in the Cornell Club of New York on May 3. Following the dinner, various matters were discussed, including the new Cornell Club which is to be opened in New York next fall; the next reunion of the class in 1925; the next publication of The Nineteen Tent, which is to be mailed in the near future; and the development of these class dinners on a more frequent basis. Among those present were three who have never before attended a class reunion or dinner since they left college. Some of those who attended were Clarence Pope, Brad Delehanty, Hal Edwards, Tommy Thomas, Kenneth Newman, Hal Welch, Herb Ferris, Roy Taylor, Pat Fries, Frank Oates, George Baker, T. J. Hearn, Spike Walser, Lionel Levine, Larry Bandler, Nemo Fischer, Bill Stevenson, Carroll Harding, and Andy Whinery. The next class dinner is planned for Thursday evening, June 7, at the Cornell Club.

LITERARY REVIEW

The Courtney Regime

Courtney and Cornell Rowing. By Charles Van Patten Young '99. Ithaca, N. Y. The Cornell Publications Printing Company. 1923. 8vo, pp. 107. Illustrated. Price, $1.50

Professor Young's book satisfies a real need. Courtney and his achievements as an oarsman and a coach are now matters of history. It is well that the rising generation should have easy access to a good book dealing accurately with these things.

The story as Young tells it is a fascinating one. A country lad with skill at tools and a great love for the water, Courtney won his first race, with a heavy home-made boat, on the lake which he and his crews were destined to make famous, in August, 1868, only two months before Cornell's doors were thrown open for business. Five years later we find him entering a race at Saratoga in a real racing shell, the first he had ever owned. To his surprise he went home with $450 in his pocket, having lowered the professional record by a full minute. As an amateur he rowed eighty-eight races without losing one. As a professional he rowed forty-six and lost seven. He always regretted turning professional; but he was too much of a man not to profit and learn wisdom from his mistakes.

Courtney became the regular coach of the Cornell crews in 1885. From that time till his death in 1920 he was a part of the life of Cornell—a Cornell institution. That Cornell's reputation for clean sportsmanship is what it rests in no small degree on the ideals which Courtney instilled into the minds of his men. The victories his crews won are matters of which we are proud; but as the years go on these victories will be viewed with less pride than will the rugged personality of the man who taught not only rowing but sound manhood to thirty-five classes of Cornell oarsmen.

Young's descriptions and discussions of the Courtney technique are clear and satisfactory. There are many interesting illustrations, and there is appended a complete record of the work of the crews down to 1920. The book deserves and is bound to have a wide sale. The publishers hope to be able to bring it out in time for Spring Day.

The Sources of Power

The Psychology of Power. By Capt. J. A. Hadfield. New York. Macmillan. 1923. 18.8 cm., pp. vi, 54. Price, 75 cents.

We do not hesitate to pronounce this a tremendously important book—so important that it ought to be disseminated as a tract. It is not propaganda. Its author has no axe to grind. It is simply a study of the sources of power by a competent specialist in nervous disorders.

The ratio of expended energy to fatigue is not constant. Unsuspected powers are sometimes exhibited, always in connection with some one of the fundamental instinctive emotions. This leads to a discussion of the instincts, which we are only beginning to understand. The conflict of instincts or of will and instinct or emotion results in weakness or impotent anxiety. Suppression of the instincts is fatal; rather we must use and guide them to proper forms of expression. For example, self-assertion is not to be suppressed in favor of submission or humility, but is to be guided to altruistic expression.

One of the secrets of power in great men is ability to rest the mind. This is consistent with the view that we are not recipients but rather channels of energy. Speaking as a psychotherapist merely, the author finds Christianity to be a potent influence for producing that peace of mind which is fundamental as a source of power.

OBITUARY

Arthur L. Stern '00

Arthur Lewis Stern died at his home in Rochester, N. Y., on March 15, after an illness of more than two years.

Stern was born in Rochester on May 5, 1879, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Morly A. Stern, and received his early education in the public schools of Rochester. He prepared at the Rochester Free Academy, entering Cornell in 1896 and receiving the degree of B. S. in 1900.

Soon after his graduation he entered the trimming department of Michaels, Stern and Company of Rochester, makers of Value-First clothes for men; later he became buyer for that department, and soon thereafter he became a partner in the business. In addition to his other duties he assisted in the manufacturing and ultimately this branch of the business came under his control. His personal interest in the well-being and activities of his employees won for him the love and respect of thousands. The March 25th issue of The Value-First Messenger, published by Michaels, Stern and Company, is devoted almost entirely to expressions of sorrow at the death of Mr. Stern, from various departments of the company.

About two years ago he suffered a brief illness as the result of the strain of business activities and he took a long rest, spending his winters in southern Europe or the Bahamas, and his summers in the mountains. He was able to devote some of his time to business during this period, but was not well enough to take full charge. Last November he began to put more and more energy into his work, but his illness returned and he failed gradually until his death.

Mr. Stern was president of the Rotary Club of Rochester and a member of the Rochester Club, the Irondequoit Country Club, the Cornell Club, the Ad Club, the Chamber of Commerce, the Idlers' Club, and the Rochester Athletic Club. During the Liberty Loan drives he occupied a prominent place, taking charge of the factory divisions. He was also active in civic affairs and at the time of his death he was a member of the board of directors of the General Hospital and the Infants' Summer Hospital.

Surviving him are his widow, Irma L. Stern, and two children, Arthur, twelve, and Louise M., five.

The following memorial has been received from the secretary of the Cornell Club of Rochester:

The Cornell Club of Rochester has suffered a great and irreparable loss in the death of Arthur L. Stern. He was a loyal member, who served on its board of governors, shirking no duty in all activities for the welfare of the club and of his Alma Mater.

He entered the University in 1896 and graduated in 1900, with the B. S. degree.

He gave unselfishly of his time and strength, and contributed liberally toward the financial support of Cornell.

We will miss his cheery smile and hearty hand clasp, and the memory of his loyalty to Cornell will long remain with us.

The club extends to his family its most sincere sympathy in their bereavement.

In his memory, we have honored ourselves by inscribing a page in the minutes of the proceedings of the club.

H. Wilson Saulsbury '06

Henry Wilson Saulsbury died at his home in New York on April 14 of pneumonia. He had been ill only three days.

Saulsbury was born on March 5, 1882, a son of William E. and Mary Jane Saulsbury. After attending the Caroline, Md., High School, he entered Western Maryland College, Westminster, Md., receiving the degree of A. B. in 1902. Then he taught for a year in the Denton, Md., High School and entered Cornell in the fall of 1903 as a sophomore in mechanical engineering, receiving the degree of M. E. in 1906.

A year after his graduation he became associated with Dunning Brothers of New York. Then he was president of the Prisma Film Company, makers of colored motion pictures, and at the time of his death he was president of the Pencil Supply Company of New York. The latter company manufactures novelty pencils, and lately put on the market a pencil which applied to the spark plug of an automobile while the engine is running, will show whether the plug is firing, by means of a small metal face fastened under the eraser band.

He leaves his widow, Lola Wright Saulsbury, whom he married on February 16, 1907, a son, Lawrence Wilson Saulsbury, a sister, Mrs. T. Pliny Fisher of Denton, Md., and a brother, George E. Saulsbury of Baltimore.

Alexander R. Smoley '18

Alexander Robert Smoley was killed on June 10, 1922, in a gasoline explosion in the laboratory of the Nucoa Butter Company, Bayonne, N. J., where he was chief chemist.

Smoley was born on April 12, 1895, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Constantine Smoley, and after studying at Pennsylvania State College for two years he entered Cornell in 1915, in the course in agriculture. He remained only one year, but returned in 1919, receiving the degree of B. S. in 1920. At Penn State he was a member of Delta Upsilon and Skull and Bones. At Cornell he was a member of the varsity wrestling team and of Alpha Zeta and the Friars Club.

He was in the service for two years, and was discharged with the rank of sergeant. He was married on June 4, 1921, to Miss Pearl E. Young of Scranton, Pa., who survives him. He leaves also a brother, Eugene R. Smoley '19.

Cake Eater —model of 1900

He was called dude and dandy then, but you recognize the type.

He majored in haberdashery and took his degree with honors in soxology.

As if that were not enough, he evolved some variations on the cake walk which made them stare.

He even found time to develop a remarkable proficiency on the tandem bicycle, and on Saturday nights he was good enough to bring pleasure into Another's life by wheeling away to the "Ten-Twent-'Thirt."

To crowd all this into four short years would seem enough for any mortal. Yet in spite of his attainments there are times, in after life, when our hero wonders.

The glory of his waistcoats has long since faded, while his books are still fresh and clean. Did he perchance put too much thought into the selection of his hats and too little in what went under them?
