Reunion Rally in Making

Class of '13 to Be Host to Alumni in Bailey —Half-Fare Railroad Plan Formed

In accordance with one of those Cornell traditions which really are old enough to merit the title, the Class of '13 will be the host at the Alumni Rally in Bailey Hall on Saturday, June 16. These Saturday night rallies have been the climaxes of reunion weeks ever since 1914. Back in those days the reunions were not concentrated on the Hill. Saturday night in 1914 found miscellaneous lots of alumni with no definite program. The fifteen-year Class, '99, on the inspiration of Professors Charles L. Durham and Charles V. P. Young, quickly organized a meeting in the old Star Theater. The success was such that every year since 1914 the fifteen-year class has played the host.

John Whinery, chairman of the '13 reunion, is not divulging his program for this year's rally, but he does promise that it will be up to the standard of the last few years. John is particularly anxious at least to equal the record established by his brother Andrew, secretary of the Class of '10, as well as by the celebrations of '09 and '12.

The other high lights of the reunion program this year are in the main similar to those of recent years. The two luncheons in the Drill Hall, on Friday and Saturday, increase each year in popularity. The luncheon on Saturday, when the University plays host to the alumni and their families, to Faculty members, and to the seniors, is one of those parties which are distinctly Cornellian. The annual meeting of the Alumni Corporation, held at the Baker Laboratory on Saturday morning, is notable largely because President Farrand makes his annual confidential talk to the alumni. The women will this year have an interesting meeting of their own, when under the auspices of the Federation of Women's Clubs, all alumnae are invited to meet at Prudence Risley Hall at four o'clock on Friday, with a buffet supper to follow.

Alumni returning for the reunions this year will as usual be granted the reduced railroad rates. The rates apply to alumni and members of their families. The saving amounts to twenty-five per cent of the round trip cost of transportation.

In order to participate in the plan it is essential that a convention certificate be obtained when the ticket is purchased to Ithaca. Full fare is paid for the trip to Ithaca. The certificates should be presented at the temporary railroad office in the Drill Hall, on June 15 or 16, and the privilege of purchasing return transportation at half fare will be given as soon as 250 convention certificates have been duly validated at the Drill Hall.

Alumni are asked to participate in this plan even though the saving to them may be relatively small. Presentation of the certificates will be of material assistance in the general plan. Alumni are also requested to turn in their certificates at the Drill Hall as soon as possible on Friday morning, that the necessary minimum of 250 may be obtained as soon as possible.

STUDENT COUNCIL OFFICERS

John F. Anderson '29 of Glendale, Ohio, was elected president of the Student Council for 1928-29 on May 9. Anderson has won his C in football and track, and is a member of Delta Upsilon and Quill and Dagger.

Lester B. Knight, Jr., '29 of White Plains was named secretary, a post carrying with it the secretaryship of the Class of 1929, and Joseph T. Froehlich '29, Rockville Center, was elected treasurer.

Senior representatives named were Horace H. Benson of Esperance, Irving Cohen of Newark, N. J., Henry Gichner of Washington, D. C., Harold W. Halverson of Rochester, and Dudley N. Schoales of Cleveland Heights, Ohio.

The junior representatives next year will be Michael Catalano of Buffalo, George B. Emeny of Salem, Ohio, Walter C. Heasley of Warren, Pa., Charles E. Treman, Jr., of Ithaca, and Samuel Wakeman of Quincy, Mass.

HOLLIDAY '05 HEADS OIL COMPANY

Wallace T. Holliday '05 has been elected president of the Standard Oil Company of Ohio, succeeding Andrew P. Coombe, who resigned after forty-four years with the company. Holliday is the fourth head of the company, and succeeded to the position from the office of general counsel, in which capacity he had served for several years.

He was born in Newburg, Ohio, and he attended Cleveland South Side High School and Western Reserve University before he came to Cornell. He spent one year in Ithaca, obtaining the A.B. degree. He completed his education at Harvard, studying law.

Tuition Increases

Arts, Engineering, Architecture, and Hotel Management Fees to be Advanced

Increases in tuition have been announced for the Colleges of Arts and Sciences, Engineering, and Architecture and for the course in hotel management in the College of Home Economics at Cornell.

The first to take effect will be an increase of $50 in the hotel management course tuition, making the yearly charge $350, for new students of the year 1928-9. In 1929-30 the increase will be effective for all students.

In the three colleges the tuition has been increased from $350 to $400 per year, the change to be effective for the academic year 1929-30.

Figures for the year 1926-7 show of the paying students, the average student paid only sixty per cent of the cost of his education. Increases in tuition, officials point out, are made because of the increased cost of education of the student. An effort is made to keep the cost to the University and what the student pays within reasonable distance.

The figures compiled for last year show that the average cost per student in the University as a whole was $665.69. Of this figure an average of $401.01 is paid by the student, $352.36 in tuition charges and $48.65 in fees. The cost to the University, to be met from the endowment, use of buildings and equipment, and other sources, per average student, is $264.68.

Average figures for five colleges of the University follow:

Arts and Sciences: cost per student, $623.64; tuition $350; fees, $47.33; cost to the University, $226.31.

Architecture: cost per student, $834.82; tuition, $350; fees, $55.87; cost to the University, $428.95.

Engineering: cost per student, $718.54; tuition, $350; fees, $53.95; cost to the University, $314.59.

Medicine (Ithaca): cost per student, $755.17; tuition, $500; fees, $50.09; cost to the University, $205.08.

Law: cost per student, $866.07; tuition, $250; fees, $29.55; cost to the University, $586.52.

OFFICERS FOR 1928-9 have been elected by the Deutscher Verein as follows: Hugh Doob, Jr., '30 of New York, president, and Charlotte E. Dallmer '31 of New York, secretary-treasurer.

ATHLETICS

Cornell Sweeps Regatta

Decisive victories marked Cornell's clean sweep of the Spring Day regatta with the crews of Syracuse over a two-mile course on Cayuga Lake May 26. It was a notable victory for the Red and White sweepswingers, a triumph the like of which has not been seen in years.

Opening with the varsity's two-length win over the Orange, the regatta developed into even more decisive margins of victory, for the freshmen, in the second race, came across the finish line six lengths ahead of the Syracuse yearlings, and the Red and White junior varsity boat scored a victory by $3\frac{1}{4}$ lengths over the Orange second boat.

An observation train crowd of 2,400 was outnumbered by the spectators on the bank of Cayuga and in the many craft anchored near the finish line at McKinneys, and as the Cornell shells came into view, leading their Orange opponents, the shout of Cornell victory rose, a sound unfamiliar in recent years.

The times:

Varsity: Cornell, 10.34 $\frac{2}{5}$; Syracuse, 10.42.

Freshmen: Cornell, 10.57 $\frac{3}{5}$; Syracuse, 11.20.

Junior varsity: Cornell, 10.57; Syracuse, 11.10.

Preceded by an intercollegiate race, won by Chemistry over Agriculture and Electrical Engineering, over the Henley distance of a mile and five-sixteenths, the shells of the competing colleges, meeting in the first dual regatta in rowing history, found wind and water conditions favorable.

The water was a little choppy when the regatta opened, and Referee Briggs of Princeton changed the order of the races sending the varsities away first.

Syracuse's orange-tipped blades caught the water first in a fine racing start, and the Red and White trailed in second place until the beat was lowered. Rowing at 32 for the first mile, the Cornell shell caught the Orange in the first quarter and led to the finish, in spite of the consistently higher stroke of the Syracuse oarsmen.

Cornell led by a length at the mile mark, when Syracuse's spurt closed the open water that showed between the shells for the fourth quarter-mile of the race. Abbott, Cornell stroke, raised the beat slightly, and the Cornell shell started a finishing drive that, topped off by a fine racing spurt in the last quarter, gave Cornell a two-length victory.

The Cornell freshman crew, in spite of a near disaster at the mile mark, when Durham, stroke, caught a crab and lost control of his oar, had things all its own way throughout its brush with the Syracuse yearlings. Getting away in fine form, the Cornell yearlings opened up a three-length lead in the first mile. Durham's missed stroke at the half-way mark cost the Red and White boat a length, but the recovery was rapid, and as the crews were hitting the stretch, Cornell had a lead of four lengths.

With three hundred yards to go, a whistle was heard, the signal of Burke, Cornell coxswain, for the finishing spurt. The Cornell stroke went up to 38, and the boat sped to victory by six lengths.

The junior varsity race saw a Syracuse eight leading for three-quarters of a mile before the Cornell crew settled down to the business of winning. Off to a fine start, the Orange blades dug in to gain a quarter-length lead, held until the mile mark neared, when Cornell's beat went up to shove the prow ahead at the half-way mark.

The gap widened during the last mile, and with a quarter-mile left to go, the Cornell whistle was again heard. Shoemaker, the Red and White stroke, answered it, his men with him, and the shell slipped ahead faster and faster to cross the line $3\frac{1}{4}$ lengths ahead of the Orange.

Cornell, in all three races, displayed smooth oarsmanship, and there was a fine run to the boats.

Cornell rowed each race at a lower beat than her opponents, making manifest the power in the shells.

Chemistry's time in the intercollegiate race was 7.31, with Agriculture clocked in second place at 7.34. As usual, this was a scrap all the way.

The times for the two-mile Cayuga course were consistently good. The varsity rowed the course in the third fastest time on the record books. In 1913, the Cornell varsity, competing against Harvard, rowed the course in 10.29. In 1921, Princeton won the Carnegie Cup regatta in 10.33.

The junior varsity time of 10.57 was 32 seconds slower than the course record of 10.25 set by Pennsylvania's jayvees in 1908.

The freshmen's time has been bettered on several occasions, the Cornell yearling crew in 1923 hanging up a mark of 10.46. Syracuse's freshman crew of 1920 negotiated the course in 10.45 $\frac{2}{5}$.

The Intercollegiate Meet

Cornell's track athletes finished in a tie for third place in the annual I. C. A. A. A. games at Harvard Stadium May 25 and 26, scoring sixteen points to share the position with Penn State behind Yale, with $25\frac{1}{8}$ points, in second place, and Stanford, which retained its meet title with forty-three points, scored in mud and rain that slowed competition in the finals on the second day.

The qualifying rounds on May 25 saw Cornell establish six contenders in eight events, Caruthers in the 120-yard high and 220-yard low hurdles, Anderson in the shot put and discus throw, Wright, Cohen, and Worden in the hammer throw, and Williams in the pole vault.

Wright's mark of 167 feet 7 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches, made in the qualifying round, won him the hammer throw title, for the contenders in the final on May 26 were unable, because of the weather conditions, to better their marks of the previous day.

Wright's toss was the best he ever made in intercollegiate competition and the last, for he graduates this year, the holder, in addition to his hammer throw title, of the 36-pound weight throw championship in indoor competition.

Cornell scored half of its points in the hammer, Cohen finishing in fourth place with a toss of 151 feet 7 inches and Worden in fifth place with a mark of 150 feet 6 3-4 inches.

Three points were scored by Caruthers, who took third place in the low hurdles behind Kieselhorst of Yale and Tupper of Harvard. He was eliminated from the high hurdles in the semi-final heat, in which he finished fourth.

Anderson added four points by getting two fourth places in the shot put and discus throw, bettering his best previous marks in both events. He tossed the shot 46 feet 9 1/4 inches and hurled the discus 144 feet 2 1/2 inches. Both events were won by Krenz of Stanford, who shared major honors of the day with Barbuti of Syracuse, winner of the 220-yard dash and the 440-yard dash.

Benson scored a point for Cornell by taking fifth place in the two-mile run, in which a high class field started. Reid of Harvard won the event in the fast time of 9.48, considering track conditions, and Benson crossed the finish line less than five yards back of the winner.

Williams in the pole vault was the only Cornell qualifier who failed to tally in the finals. Carr of Yale retained his title in the event, leaping 13 feet 6 inches.

Nine Splits Even

Cornell suffered its second defeat at the hands of Yale on Hoy Field May 26 before a large, colorful Spring Day crowd, 9-0. The defeat gave the Red and White nine an even break in its two games of the week, for it defeated Colgate at Hamilton, 10-7, May 23.

Cornell, in its two games against Yale, failed to score a run, for the Elis blanked us, 1-0, in their first meeting at New Haven.

The Colgate game was a repetition of the free-hitting first encounter on Hoy Field earlier in the season, when the Maroon won, 12-9. At Hamilton Cornell turned the tables, and six runs in the fourth inning certified the Red and White victory.

The Spring Day game was played in the fast time of 1 hour 40 minutes, but the game, except for brilliant fielding by Cooper and McConnell, Cornell outfielders, was all Yale's. Cornell's infield weakness was responsible for Yale's early runs, but the Elis started hitting and collected twelve safeties off Froehlich before the end of the contest, one of them a home run by Garvey with the bases filled in the eighth.

Cornell was held to four hits by two Yale pitchers, and Gichner was the only Cornell player to reach third base. He also got two of the four Red and White hits.

Yale scored a run in the first and another in the third on Cornell errors. Misplays in the seventh accounted for two more Eli tallies. Garvey's home run cleaned the bags in the eighth, and Yale added another tally in the ninth of two singles and a sacrifice hit.

Cooper and McConnell made two fine running catches, robbing Yale batsmen of what looked like extra base hits. In the fifth, with two Yale men on the paths, Caldwell drove to deep left, but Cooper leaped after the ball and snared it to prevent Yale scoring.

Fuertes Room Opened

Memorial to Ornithologist in McGraw Hall Contains Many Specimens of His Work

The Louis Agassiz Fuertes Memorial Room on the second floor of McGraw Hall at Cornell was officially opened to the public on May 27. The room contains a collection of memorabilia of Louis Agassiz Fuertes '97, including a large number of stuffed and mounted birds used by Fuertes in his work, many of his original drawings and paintings, books illustrated by him, and documents of permanent interest to the public.

The opening of this room marks the consummation of the desires of his many friends and associates who have long been stressing the appropriateness of a fitting memorial to the great bird painter on the Campus. The collection has been fittingly housed in a location which strikingly recalls the man who was so closely connected with the University.

The first objects which catch the eye as one enters the room are a number of specimens of mounted birds which he once kept in his private study. A glass case in the middle of the room contains typical specimens of his work, from one of his first drawings at the age of fifteen to several pictures unfinished at the time of his death.

A number of larger paintings in water colors and oils, including some exceptionally fine pictures typical of Fuertes' best work are on the walls. There are also eight small paintings which he did for the Church and Wright Company, to be used in their advertising work and recently donated to the University by them.

In files around the room are some 3,500 stuffed birds which Fuertes used as working models and a number of papers and documents of general interest.

The collection is expected to be of great interest to ornithologists, bird fanciers, and artists who may wish to paint from some of the models. It will be held permanently open to such persons, as will the more general collection on display in the cases. In addition to the paintings and documents, an effort is being made to have on display every book illustrated by Fuertes and a list of every painting and sketch not in the collection, to facilitate the study of particular drawings.

The collection is not yet complete, but Professor Arthur A. Allen '08, to whom has been entrusted the forming of the collection, hopes that it will soon be much larger, through donations, legacies, and loans of Fuertes' friends and possessors of his works. The present collection has been made possible by the assistance of Alpha Delta Phi, to which Fuertes belonged.

A tablet which is to be placed in the room reads:

SOVIET ENGINEER VISITOR

B. I. Boohofsef of Moscow, Russia, chief engineer for the Russian Electrical Industry, dealing with electrical manufacturing, was the guest of Professor Vladimir Karapetoff on May 8. He was accompanied by E. A. Shinkevich, engineer for the International General Electric Company, Inc., who acted as his interpreter.

In an interview, Mr. Boohofsef said that the Soviet régime in Russia was making possible great developments in the electrical field, and that complete electrification of the country was being sought. He said that he was studying the electrical industry in America to carry back ideas to Russia for the development of the industry there.

"Prior to the World War and the revolution in Russia," the interpreter quoted Mr. Boohofsef as saying, "the Russian electrical industry was meeting only twenty-five per cent of the country's own requirements. The remainder was brought from foreign nations.

"Now the situation is reversed. The Russian electrical industry produced seventy-five to eighty per cent of its own requirements and manufactures all of its own wire, cable, lamps, and so forth.

"The present system of government is making these things possible, being right now much interested in electrical development. The Soviet Government is helping, sponsoring, and financing the industry in every way."

JONES '03 PROMOTED

Arthur L. Jones '03, assistant manager of the Rocky Mountain District of the General Electric Company since August, 1925, has been appointed manager of the district. He entered Cornell in 1899 and took the degree of M.E. in 1904.

He is at present chairman of the Denver Section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, and will have an active part in the national convention of that organization at Denver, where the General Electric district office is located, in June.

After his graduation Jones joined the testing department of the General Electric Company. He was transferred to the Denver office in 1907.

Medics' May Day

Students at Medical College Hold Annual Festivities—Dr. Niles '00 Is Honored

The annual May Day activities of the Medical College were held Saturday, May 19. The Faculty, according to the custom, were given the privilege of seeing themselves as others see them, through activities of the first three classes, including a playlet by the members of the third year class.

Dr. Walter L. Niles '00 was presented with a statuette as an expression of the esteem and admiration of the student body. The activities closed with a dance in the main hall of the clinic.

Dr. Niles was also honored on May 10 at the annual dinner of the Medical Alumni Association in the Hotel Commodore, New York, when embossed resolutions expressing the appreciation of the alumni for bringing them and the college closer together were presented to him.

Speakers at the dinner were President Farrand, Dr. G. Canby Robinson, '03-5 Grad., director of the New York Hospital Cornell Medical College Association, Edward W. Sheldon, chairman of the New York Hospital-Cornell Medical College Association, Dr. Henry C. Barkhorn '07, president of the Alumni Association, who also acted as toastmaster, and Dr. Niles.

Officers of the Alumni Association are Dr. Barkhorn, president, Harold S. Belcher '20, vice-president, John E. Sutton, Jr., '20, treasurer, Preston A. Wade '25, secretary, Cary Eggleston '07, Mary Reesor '20, and Nelson W. Cornell '21, members of the executive committee.

GIVES TO TABERNACLE FUND

Ellis L. Phillips '95 of New York has contributed $500,000 to the building fund being raised by the Methodist Episcopal Church for the proposed Broadway Tabernacle in New York. Announcement of the gift was made by Arthur J. Baldwin '92 of East Orange, N. J., at a dinner conference in Kansas City on May 12, in connection with the Methodist General Conference.

Phillips is president of the Board of Trustees of the Tabernacle, and Baldwin is one of the board members.

DR. FREDERICK M. DENNIS, professor emeritus of Bellevue Medical College and the Cornell Medical College in New York, was the guest of honor at a dinner at the Hotel McAlpin in New York April 14 of alumni of the Class of 1888, the "Blizzard Class." The commencement that year was on March 12, the day of the great blizzard. Dr. Dennis is the only surviving member of the Faculty of 1888.

BOOKS

A Blow at Pseudo-Science

The Higher Foolishness. By David Starr Jordan '72. Indianapolis. The Bobbs-Merrill Company. 1928. 21 cm., pp. ii, 226. Price, $2.50.

This is a jeu d'esprit in which the learned author indulges in some entirely justifiable sarcasm and mirth at the expense of those who take the shortcut to learning by simply saying that they know.

For these charlatans of the so-called world of science the author has coined the term sciosophists, which means those who deal with the wisdom of shades, and thence, by inversion, with the shadow of wisdom. The first sciosophist he takes up is Dr. Adolphe d'Assier of Bordeaux, who in his "Posthumous Humanity: a Study of Phantoms" deals with the spontaneous activity of ghosts, astral doubles, and shadows.

He then goes into the beliefs of Abner Dean of Angels, who counsels us to believe all things, and whose line is much like that of the fake psychologist whom Professor Pitkin shows up in the June Century.

There are quacks in every line of research, and it is not strange that anthropology should have its share. One recent English writer has proved "without effort the separate origin of the three primal races of men. These, it appears, sprang from three different species of ape: the Aryan races (Nordic, Latin, Slavic, and Hindu) from the chimpanzee; the Mongolian from the orang-utan; the negro from the gorilla."

Astrology naturally comes in for much attention. The number of persons who still pin their faith to this sort of thing must be very large, if one may judge by the number of professional cards in the press and by Dr. Jordan's numerous quotations. "The horoscope," says one of these optimists, "when properly cast, indicates the condition of health and constitution—how it may be strengthened when weak; it shows all kinds of diseases; deaths; your talents and profession; financial affairs; your environment, domestic affairs; love and marriage; tells about children; when and where to travel; what to seek and what to avoid; when in danger of illness, accidents, death, losses, troubles, etc."

In other words, sciosophy is nothing more nor less than folk lore sublimated and raised to the dignity of science and made to make money for the unscrupulous. There may be now and then a dash of modern scientific theory or hypothesis, more or less distorted, but the foundation is plainly the unwisdom of men and women. What is the remedy for this state of affairs? In a final chapter full of kindly wisdom Dr. Jordan counsels us to trust to the authority of experts and to be sure that they are experts. He concludes with some fine words on the vain search for a master-key. "Canst thou by searching find out God?" On the other hand, the more we know, the less easy it appears to entertain the theory that no rational intelligence lies back of things. Huxley tells us that "nothing endures save the flow of energy and the rational intelligence that pervades it." And we have got no farther. "In the beginning was the Logos or Reason, and the Logos was with God, and the Logos was God."

A brave and wise book.

IT NEEDED ONLY SPECTATORS

SPRING DAY is probably the victim of its immediate past. Long years with no regatta whatever, with observation trains but no racing water, with unsuccessful crews, rain, perfunctory circuses, wretched side-shows, Spring Day has run the gamut from that holiday that was the envy of every other college down to something that was squalid and altogether ornery. The event is not the victim of progressive decay. The ups and downs, where not due to weather conditions, probably represent the individual variations in committees.

Whatever the underlying causes, however, the institution has the outward appearance of an event that is doomed. It is conceivable that Spring Day, an invention of persons now in their late forties, has passed its usefulness and is no longer in demand by the generation of its founders' children. If it is to become a spectacle without spectators, it must inevitably go the way of the Masque, the Mud Rush, Class Day, Junior Week, intercollegiate baseball, and any other event that finds itself meaningless to the present-day student regardless of its brilliant history. After all, a university that remained exactly as it was a quarter century ago would be rightly adjudged dead. Progress consists as much of eliminating as it does of inventing.

We suspect, however, and earnestly hope, that Spring Day is merely the victim of its recent past. Surely the events of the late celebration were on a parity with the finest exhibitions on record. The Circus, the Savage Club Show, the Glee Club Concert, the Navy Ball, and the weather left little room for improvement. Baseball is baseball, of course and any ball team might be whitewashed by any other team, but the three crews that came tearing down the lake gave as fine an exhibition and as fast a performance as any three Cornell crews ever gave at any time in history. Only the spectators were lacking to give the 1928 Spring Day its proper place as the high water mark.

We trust the management will not become discouraged about the spectators.

Spring Day Successful

For One Thing the Weather Was Good— Large Crowds at Circus and Athletic Events

Spring Day, favored by good weather, saw Nero's birthday games duly celebrated. It differed from other Spring Days because there was no parade, either downtown or on the Hill.

Spring Day really began on Thursday, May 24, for the first of the house party guests and returning alumni arrived in time for the Savage Club's presentation of "Class Day at Heidelberg," a most successful musical satire, in Bailey Hall.

Veterans of the club carried the show. The songs and music, the dancing, and the specialty numbers were good. The libretto, not too strong, provided a thin string for the telling of a story of a student tour to Heidelberg, where Class Day was suffering from general debility.

The final act depicted the Class Day exercises and provided the climax of the show, with the Daisy Chain an unusual feature.

The house parties became realities on Friday, May 25, with tea dances, the Colgate lacrosse game, the concert of the Musical Clubs, and the Navy Ball in the Drill Hall. At the ball, the theme of Spring Day became more apparent. The guests were in a Roman holiday mood that found satisfaction on Saturday morning at the carnival at the Cornell Crescent.

The carnival was like many of its predecessors, and the Neronian birthday games provided much amusement, chariot races, upon the outcome of which Campus discussion had raged for days, proving excellent entertainment.

The crowd increased on Saturday morning, as the visitors from Syracuse arrived for the regatta. Many of the visitors had luncheon in the Drill Hall before watching the Yale baseball game. Others watched the Pennsylvania tennis match on the Baker Courts. The circus drew out the the largest crowds in recent years.

After the Yale game, the crowd started for the lake and the observation train. The day was overcast but warm, and the threat of rain became a fact but once during the day, a light shower at the start of the baseball game.

As the finish flag fell on the last race of the Syracuse regatta, the crowd started for home. Traffic in Ithaca was heavy during the evening, but by midnight things had quieted down. On Sunday morning, a few house party girls were still to be seen, but Spring Day was over.

JAVIER LARCO '29 of Trujillo, Peru, has been elected president of the Fencing Club. Other officers are Patsy P. Pirone '29 of Mount Vernon, vice-president, Herman M. Seldin '30 of Jamaica, secretary, and Marvin L. Smith '29 of Albany, treasurer.

The Week on the Campus

SPRING Day and its preludes and postludes occupied the week to such an extent that we would rather say nothing about it.

THOSE STUDENTS who are awake as these lines are being written are rousing to a conviction that gayety is all well enough, but life is a pretty serious business on the whole, and final exams begin at 8 a. m. on June 4. Let us likewise concern ourselves with serious matters.

THE RECENT INCREASE in tuition is in line with the tendency in the endowed colleges of the country, wherein the endowment has not kept pace with the increase in applicants, cost of everything, and standards of education. It marks also a subtle change in the meaning of the tuition fee. As late as 1915, when the Arts student paid $125 a year, the tuition fee was not much more than a guarantee of the student's good faith; he received his education free from certain men of good will. Now however he pretty nearly pays for what he gets. According to figures issued by the Comptroller, Charles D. Bostwick '92, the average cost per student to the University is $665.69.

WE HATE to suggest it to the students, but before long some of the trouble-making type are going to ask what they are getting for their money, as they could not gracefully have asked when their education was a gift. The Faculty is now appointed largely for its record in research; it is permitted plenty of leisure for the continuance of its work in laboratory and library. How large a share of the $665.69 per student should be credited to research-overhead? The querulous students may say, reasonably enough, "In our upper-class years $400 is none too much to pay for the stimulation of working with teachers who are doing research; but in our underclass years especially we are not getting our money's worth. We ask, for instance, for something more than half the time and half the attention of graduate assistants in our freshman year." I suppose that the answer is that the students are paying for the privilege of studying in an institution which is maintaining its high academic standing; but no doubt they will continue to grumble.

THE LOUIS AGASSIZ FUERTES Memorial Room in McGraw Hall was opened last Friday, and was visited by many of the artist's friends. The collection of mounted birds and bird-skins, drawings and paintings, and other mementos, will awaken poignant memories in the thousands who have visited his studio, crowding in to his lavish Sunday teas. Do not fail to include this room in your itinerary when you return during Alumni Week.

THE ART GALLERY continues its record of novelty. It has now on view a display of the work of over thirty architects who have had their training at Cornell. The exhibit includes not only photographs of buildings designed and executed by our graduates, but also paintings, water colors, and other expressions of the overflow of the builders' creative faculty. It would be invidious for this amateur to select any names for praise.

THE '86 MEMORIAL PRIZE in public speaking was won by Seibert L. Sefton '29, with a speech on "The Power of Understanding." There were ten contestants, mostly speaking on questions of current import, and mostly taking a point of view of mild liberalism, about left center according to the European arrangement of political standpoints.

THE ANNUAL R. O. T. C. Review was held last Thursday; President Farrand and Miss Katherine Barton, daughter of the late Colonel Barton, presented the cups and medals. The awards were too many to list here. The performance of the Band was especially brilliant; indeed, the entire corps applauded as it paraded by. . . . Do you remember all the woful obsequies pronounced over the Band last October?

THE SAVAGE CLUB put on a good show last Thursday. On the whole, the Old Savages rather put it over on the Young Savages. This fact should feed a crumb of comfort to us old-timers who suffer under the abuse of the young. We may have made a mess of civilization; we may be more reactionary, stupid, and ignorant than the youths of today; but anyhow we're funnier.

OUR SPORTS EDITOR, agog with news of the crew, the Intercollegiates, and the baseball team, will probably omit the fact that Laurence L. Clough '29 won the Potter Cup, doing the three-mile course in 17.49. And Arts won the intercollegiate track meet, with Agriculture second.

CONSTANCE A. COBB '29, is the new president of the W. S. G. A., taking over from Catherine B. MacLeod '28.

THE REV. FRANK LAMBERT, students' minister, proposed at the recent diocesan convention of the Episcopal Church in Utica that a students' church be established on the hill. He said that "in college circles religion is under suspicion and the divided church with its fundamentalists and modernists adds fuel to the flame of that spirit."

THE THURSTON AVENUE bridge is to be drastically repaired; new floor beams and flooring will be laid, according to plans prepared by Professor Earle N. Burrows '07. Work begins Monday, May 28; it should be completed by Commencement Day. In the meantime you must come into town by the Stewart Avenue bridge.

NO LECTURES last week!

THE FRESHMAN ADVISORY COMMITTEE is opening a competition for sophomores.

Competitors must return a week before registration in the fall and do the assigned tasks. The winner will become chairman of the Freshman Advisory Committee, and the second contestant secretary. Here, we should say, is a rich subject for reflection on the power of the competition as a means for producing work-units and creating heat, light, and energy out of nothing.

ANECDOTE FOR THE WEEK: Our scout watched for some time the proprietor of the pop-corn stand next the Crescent driving a nail through stacks of paper bags. "Why do you drive that nail through those stacks of paper bags?" inquired our scout. "To keep the educated fools from exploding the bags during the show," replied the paper-bag-piercer, grimly.

SPORT STUFF

Spring in Ithaca has been just a momentary hesitation between winter and August. Professors who cling to the grim practice of wearing their itchy undies into June have found keeping the faith no hardship.

Cayuga remained amiable and unruffled on Spring Day. For the first time in years a regatta crowd was at home and sitting down to dinner by daylight.

The Athletic Association has a small block of seats for the observation train at Poughkeepsie. These are available to alert alumni at $5.50 per copy. Add 22 cents to remittances to cover registration and postage.

R. B.

SWIMMING UNDER SUPERVISION

The Athletic Association which operates the winter sports on Beebe Lake, will this year take over management of the Fall Creek swimming pool. The pool will be opened about June 1, with Walter C. O'Connell '11, coach of wrestling, in charge.

The pool will be cleaned out, and approaches will be constructed for the benefit of swimmers. A life-guard system will be operated at all times. The erection of diving boards and the installation of flood lights to provide night swimming are also on the program.

THE FLYING CLUB has initiated into membership Daniel B. White, Grad., of Fort Sam Houston, Tex., Samuel E. Yuille '29 of Huntington, Pa., Lawrence A. Williams '29 of Ithaca, Lucius L. Apgar '30 of Rye, Allan B. Dickinson '30 of Brooklyn, Otto E. Schneider, Jr., '30 of New York, Lewis J. Wolcott '30 of Corning, Richard P. Essex '31 of Washington, D. C., and John P. Mange '31 of Plandome.

Other Sports

Cornell closed its lacrosse season May 25 with a 7-4 defeat at the hands of Colgate on Lower Alumni Field. Cornell scored four goals in the second half, but the rally failed to cut down the Maroon lead. Allen and Salisbury each shot two tallies.

Cornell's tennis team closed its dual meet season May 26, losing to Pennsylvania on the Baker Courts, 9-0. Pennsylvania found little opposition, Lavine having the hardest battle with Bicket of Cornell.

"What would you advise?"

HOW many times have you been asked that question by undergraduates looking forward to their careers—and seriously considering the bond business.

Of course, the first thing for a young man to do in such a case is to carefully consider his capabilities and temperament—to determine if he is genuinely attracted to the bond business and suited to it.

Assuming that he has reached a studied decision to enter the bond business, your best advice to him would be to choose a reliable bond house—one which is old and well known, whose experience covers a wide field of conservative investment, whose record goes back for a long period of years.

An investor, dealing with such a house, not only protects himself, but also greatly simplifies his investment problem. Similarly, the man considering the bond business as a career, through connection with such a house, is provided a substantial background for his own efforts. It enables him to reach more quickly an assured position and a substantial earning power.

As a help to those considering the bond business as a life work, we have published a pamphlet, "The Bond Business as an Occupation for College Men." If interested, for yourself or for others, write for pamphlet AC-58 for boys nine to sixteen years of age.

Otter

ONTARIO

Season opens July
6th and closes
August 31st, 1928.

WHEN YOU send your young son to camp for the summer you must be sure that he will be constantly safe; that he will be well-fed; that he will have intelligent instruction and individual supervision during his work or play. For these things Camp Otter has an established reputation. There will be regular instruction in swimming, life-saving, nature study, horseback riding, and general athletics. Special tutoring in academic work may be arranged.

This is the last opportunity to make application for the season of 1928.

It is not necessary to carry the things home when you come for Spring Day

It has been our policy for several years to mail the things for you if you buy them at the Co-op. Post Office Station No. 2 is at the Co-op. It is a bother carrying packages to the Crew Race or Baseball Game. It is the way the Co-op can still help you.

von Engeln Concerning Cornell

Do you know enough about the University to talk convincingly to others who might become interested? Read "Concerning Cornell." Know the history, the traditions, and the illustrations in the book will help. The present prices are: cloth binding $3.00, leather $4.50.

Book of Views

There is hardly likely ever to be another edition. The supply of the present edition is getting low. You should have a copy. Only $4.00. Send your order to the Co-op.

Cornell Songbook

Have you ever seen a copy? Some of the Cornell songs you may know. Here is a chance to learn them all. Many know all the songs because they have a songbook. Only $1.75, postage paid.

Bookplates

There must be many more who would like to see samples. The samples are very convincing. They bring orders. Cornellians have libraries so why not bookplates? The price is only $1.50 per hundred. Printing the name is extra.
