A Beautiful Race.

Soon after two o'clock on Tuesday people began to fill the long observation train of forty cars, which lay on the Lehigh Valley tracks at State Street, and by three-thirty the train was filled to the utmost capacity with some thirty-five hundred eager spectators. The shore of the lake was also black with people and fully eight thousand were gathered at Renwick. The train reached the head of the course at about four and it was then found that the water was too rough to row immediately. However, the lake quieted down about seven o'clock so that Referee Mumford was able to call the Cascadilla-Cornwall race, which was scheduled to take place after the second 'Varsity race.

The officials of the 'Varsity race were as follows:

Referee, William W. Mumford, Harvard '94.

Judge (for Pennsylvania), Charles A. Patterson.

Judge (for Cornell), F. G. Schofield.

Timekeeper (for Pennsylvania), E. L. Quarlen.

Timekeeper (for Cornell), S. L. Fisher, '99.

Judge at finish, Professor Wilder D. Bancroft.

Judge at finish (for Pennsylvania), F. B. Call.

Judge at finish (for Cornell), H. S. Howland.

Cornell and Pennsylvania were ready for the contest immediately after the first race had been rowed. The observation train returned to the start and Cornell reached there at 7:15, Pennsylvania joining at 7:20 o'clock. Considerable time was spent in arranging the shells in position. Pennsylvania chose the inside course. At the word, Pennsylvania had a slight advantage in catching the water first, and gained nearly a third of a length after a dozen sharp strokes. Cornell did not attempt to spurt but rowed 32 strokes. Pennsylvania had started with 34, and from time to time increased it to 36. Cornell began to gain at the quarter mile and at the mile had more than made up the loss at the beginning. Pennsylvania had lost about half a length at the mile and a quarter and the crew began to put effort into their work.

Cornell's rowing did not vary, and although Pennsylvania pushed the nose of her shell nearly even with the Ithacans at the mile and a half, Cornell did not let out until within about 300 yards of the finish. The men in the Cornell boat then rowed a thirty-three stroke, while Pennsylvania's went up to thirty-seven. The Ithacans gained slightly, and at the end won by fully half a length in 11:26 1-2 seconds. Pennsylvania's time was 11:28. Both crews finished strong and pulled to the boat house in good form.

The race was beautifully rowed throughout and was a fine exhibition of good oarsmanship. Coach Courtney, who watched the race from the stake boat at the start, says that for the first mile and a quarter the Cornell coxswain did not have to use the

PROMINENT CORNELLIAN.

V. Joseph Benson Foraker, '69.

In a speech at the banquet given in honor of Senator-elect Foraker on Washington's Birthday, 1896, Hon. John A. Caldwell, mayor of Cincinnati, said, among other things concerning Mr. Foraker, that he "has long been a commanding national figure, filling the public eye—at once the Richelieu and Admiral Crichton of all that pertains to state-craft and politics, sharing honors with Sherman and McKinley as one of Ohio's political triumvirate, a triumvirate as pre-eminent in national affairs to-day, as was Ohio's galaxy of generals in the War of the Rebellion—Grant, Sherman, and Sheridan, whose undimmed fame shines forth resplendent—the most glorious constellation in all the star-studded night of war."

It is a source of pride to every Cornellian, and especially to the members of the class of '69, the first class to be graduated from Cornell, that a member of that class should have achieved so distinguished a place in public life. A sketch of his career cannot fail, therefore, to be of interest.

Joseph Benson Foraker was born near Rainsborough in Highland County, Ohio, on the 5th of July, 1846, and has therefore nearly completed his fifty-third year. In both mind and body he is young, elastic, full of spirits, warmed with a laudable ambition, and kindled with what the author of "Ecce Homo" calls "the enthusiasm of humanity." The parents of Senator Foraker are still living. They belong to the class of people who cultivate the soil, and at the same time cultivate men and women. Joseph B. Foraker spent the first years of his life on a farm in close touch with the ground and in sympathy with the ennobling influences of nature.

Passing from the period of his early boyhood, and with no note of his school-days in the country, in which he had the usual experiences of an Ohio lad of that day, we find him at the age of sixteen enlisting in the Union Army. He volunteered as a member of Company A, in the 89th Regiment of Ohio Volunteers. The date of his enlistment was July 14, 1862, nine days after his sixteenth anniversary. A young soldier—but many such followed the flag and fought our battles, in both armies.

Young Foraker served with his regiment until after the fall of Atlanta. By that date he had risen to the rank of first lieutenant. After the capture of Atlanta he was detailed for service in the signal corps and was assigned to duty as a signal officer on the staff of Major-General Slocum, who was in command in that time of the left wing of Sherman's army.

After the march through Georgia and the Carolinas, Lieutenant Foraker was promoted to the rank of brevet-captain of United States Volunteers, and was assigned to duty as aide-de-camp on the staff of General Slocum. This position he held until he was mustered out of the service at the close of the war. That event found him, at the age of nineteen, a veteran of three years' service.

SAGE CHAPEL.

Concerning the Enlarged Structure—The New Organ.

For a number of years the University authorities have felt that Sage Chapel was too small. It is not a matter of surprise that a building erected in 1873-74 to provide for the religious instruction of five hundred students should fail to provide for the needs of two thousand. Twice during the year 1896-97 the services were transferred to the Armory, and in each case the audience was three times as large as Sage Chapel would hold.

It was this pressing need which led to the enlargement of the building. Last summer extensive alterations were made under the direction of Professor Babcock as architect, which doubled the previous seating capacity of four hundred. In this alteration the eastern half of the nave, the south transept, and the tower have been removed, and in their place there have been added two adjacent transepts covering a space of 64 x 66 feet, unobstructed save by two ten-inch iron columns. The elevations show two gables on the north side and two on the south, each gable containing a rose window ten feet in diameter, with stone tracery. Four new porches are provided. The roof frames are of open timber construction, in Georgia pine, the arched trusses springing from corbels on the walls, and from the caps of the iron columns. Careful arrangements have been made for the heating, ventilating, and electric lighting of this space.

Simultaneously with the enlargement of the Chapel, there was constructed, at the eastern end of the building, a semi-octagonal apse, erected by the University as a memorial to the original donor of the Chapel, the late Hon. Henry W. Sage, whose remains, with those of his wife, are permanently deposited there. The apse is 31 feet wide by 16 feet deep, and opens into the main building by a massive cut stone arch. In the east wall of the apse has been placed the stone tracery window which was in the end of the original Chapel. The interior walls, from the windowsills upward, are of stone. The oaken ribs of the ceiling are carried on stone columns with carved capitals, supported by corbels. In detail rudder at all, and the boat went in a perfectly straight line until it reached the slight bend in the course just below McKinney's. Both Coach Courtney and Coach Ward expressed themselves as satisfied with the showing the crews made. Coach Ward said that the best crew had won but he thought his men rowed a magnificent race. The result of this race, however, does not shake his confidence in a final victory for the red and blue at Poughkeepsie on the 27th—but we'll wait for that.

The Cornwall-Cascadilla Race. Pennsylvania and Cornell Crews.

The race between the Cascadilla and Cornwall Military Academy crews proved a great surprise to all who had seen Cascadilla's eight row in practice. They displayed good form throughout the race, much better in fact than the Cornwall boys; but the power seemed to be lacking in Cascadilla's boat. The race was started at 6:55 P. M. Cornwall received a slight advantage at the start, but Cascadilla soon overcame this, and at the mile was a good three quarters of a length ahead. The boys from the Hudson, kept pluckily at it, pulling over the line winners by nearly a length. The dis-

Since the beginning of boat-racing with Pennsylvania, which dates from July, 1875, when Cornell won the famous victory at Saratoga, twenty-one races have been rowed, Cornell winning fifteen times, and Pennsylvania four times; Columbia defeated both Cornell and Pennsylvania in 1895, and at Worcester in 1885 Cornell won but was ruled out on a foul. In 1884 Pennsylvania turned out a crew which defeated the Cornell oarsmen in two races, one at Philadelphia in June, and again in July at Saratoga. In both of the races Cornell finished second, ahead of Columbia, Toronto Wins in Lacrosse.

The Cornell lacrosse team was defeated on Friday afternoon in a hard fought battle at Percy Field by the Toronto team. The game was called at 3:45. After a few minutes of play a goal was thrown by King of Toronto. After that both sides scored in rapid succession, Ferguson making three goals for the home players while two more were made by King, and one each was made by Grant and Snell of the visitors. Time was called with the ball in the center of the field. In the second half Jackson scored two goals for Toronto and E. P. Smith scored one for Cornell. The feature of the game was the accurate and aggressive playing of Toronto. The final score was 7-4. The line-up follows:

No act of the late Legislature nor of any recent predecessor, perhaps, has caused so much interest on the part of so many people. The plain people of the State, the people who pay the taxes, will not soon forget the man who, in spite of both open and secret opposition, forced the righteous measure through a Legislature which would have been glad enough to be excused."

The Masque--Senior Week Play.

The Masque has selected for its Senior Week play a farcical comedy in three acts, by E. S. Lankerster, entitled "The Guv'nor." This is a standard farce and has been played many times by professional companies, both in this country and in England. At the same time, it is well adapted to the needs of the Masque, and should prove more than usually interesting.

The scene of acts one and three is laid at Fulkam, a suburb of London, where Mr. Butterscotch, a retired confectioner, owns a villa. The scene of the second act is laid on the banks of the Thames, near London. Butterscotch has a son in love with the daughter of Macclesfield, a Thames boatbuilder, while Macclesfield's son loves a daughter of Butterscotch. Butterscotch has a young second wife, and a curious neighbor leads him to believe that she is mixed up in a love affair, which is really the daughter's. The general outcome of this misconception and its final correction furnish the action of the play.

"The Guv'nor" has a number of roles suited to strong character acting. Almost all of these are to be taken by men who have appeared in former Masque casts. The four female parts will be taken by Misses Kate Cosad, '01, Estella A. Leach, '99, J. C. McGrath, '01, and Annette Austin, '00, who have consented to assist the Masque in this production. This is a radical departure, but it is believed that through it a much more artistic production will be secured. It is probable that if the experiment prove a success the Masque will adopt it permanently.

Mrs. Ellen K. Hooker, formerly principal of Sage College, is now living with her son, Hon. Percy Hooker, at her former home in Leroy, N. Y.

THE LACROSSE TEAM.

In reviewing the athletic outcome of the team it is well not to forget the achievements of the lacrosse team, for which the members of the team and the coach, Mr. Shantz, deserve the highest commendation. The team has gone quietly but determinedly to work, practiced hard, and paid its own expenses. The Toronto team is the only college team which has defeated Cornell, while the team tied the well-known Rangers, of Rochester, and made a good showing against both the Crescent and the Staten Island Athletic Club. The team scored nearly twice as many points as did its opponents.

The men have worked faithfully, and their efforts for Alma Mater deserve hearty and generous recognition.

THE RACES.

Tuesday was certainly the greatest day that Ithaca has seen in a long time. That so many visitors should be attracted here to see a second 'Varsity race shows clearly that boating is still as popular as ever it was in the old days which the '75 and '76 men tell us about. It should be a source of gratification to the men who rowed in the races that their exertions were watched with such interest. They rowed a plucky race and their efforts won the admiration of the spectators. Cornell will remember them.

THE NEWS desires to congratulate Mr. Ward and his second 'varsity crew on the fine showing they made. Frankly, the race was much closer than many Cornellians had expected it would be, and shows clearly that only by hard work can Cornell win at Poughkeepsie on the 27th of next month.

THE NAVY IN NEED.

Despite the appeals for money made repeatedly by the Navy management this year, the response has been slow and by no means general. The fact of the matter is, that Cornell's Navy needs money, and needs it badly.

The principal source of the Navy's support has always been the subscriptions of the student body. For some unknown reason, these fell off this year over $500 and the management is forced to make up this deficiency in some other way. Proceeds from the observation train will contribute somewhat to this end, but are not expected to be fully sufficient. With the expenses of the regatta at Poughkeepsie ahead, the Navy is in a bad way financially.

While still under the spell of yesterday's splendid victory, another triumph of the Cornell stroke and a prophecy of the result on June 27th at Poughkeepsie, we ought with little effort to rally round the standard and set the Navy on her feet, with a prompt and generous contribution. All who wish to assist, please send remittances to Commodore Norman J. Gould.

From Manila.

A letter from F. E. Gannett, '98, to George E. Priest, dated April 24, and published in the Ithaca Journal on Monday, contains the following:

It may be of interest to the readers of The Journal, especially Cornellians, to learn that our great University is well represented on our battlefields in the Orient. Edgar Johnston, '93, has just been promoted to the position of sergeant of the Engineering Corps; Burton P. Flory, '95, and Farley G. Clark, '94, are also members of the same company. All three of these brave fellows were engaged in the capture of Malolos, and gallantly stood under fire for hours while reconstructing the railroad which had been partially torn up by the retreating Insurgents. George Dyer, '95, the well known athlete and member of the Henley crew, a few days ago also joined our little band of Cornellians, arriving on the gunboat Princeton. Davis, '98, non-grad. and well known for his work in the field events, who had to leave Cornell in his junior year on account of an accident, is also with us out here. He is a member of the 14th Infantry, having re-enlisted from the Connecticut Volunteers. Mr. Davis has seen nearly all of the hard fighting out here during the last few weeks and has been under fire so long that he can now almost live on the sound of Mauser bullets. I have no doubt that there are other Cornellians here whom I have not yet chanced to meet. Unfortunately, I have not yet had an opportunity to meet Dr. Armstrong of the Charleston, as that cruiser left Manila for Dagupan about the same time that we arrived in the city. I hope, however, that I shall see him soon.

Our work out here is progressing rapidly, though in regard to such matters we are not allowed to say much. What time we are not studying the people, the maps, the situation, the races, the government, and translating Spanish laws, etc., we are learning to talk Spanish. In this latter work we are all doing better than we expected, but President Schurman deserves especial praise for having acquired a familiarity with the use of Spanish in less than a month's study. He can now carry on conversation on most any subject and at the same time win the admiration of his hearers by his excellent use of Spanish constructions.

But the sun is setting and I must make ready for dinner. Just think! As the sun sinks below our horizon it is just rising in Ithaca. We have already lived the day which is just breaking to you in dear old Ithaca.

As I am writing these lines the roar of battle comes to my ears from the South. General Owenshine's brigade has evidently opened fire on the Insurgents. But this is a common thing for us to hear at Manila and we do not mind it. With due respect for Mauser bullets we are content to hear the sound of musketry and remain peacefully within our own domiciles safe under the protection of our gallant soldiers.

Yale: Her Campus, Class Rooms, and Athletics.

We are in receipt of a fine volume on "Yale: Her Campus, Class Rooms, and Athletics," by Walter Camp and Lewis S. Welch. Both these men are well known in New Haven and among all Yale alumni as editors of the Yale Alumni Weekly. Mr. Camp's reputation as an athlete and general Yale enthusiast adds greatly to the value of the book. One hardly knows how to describe it. It is so comprehensive, so complete, attractive, and well written as to reveal the lack of little. Full of interest to the ordinary reader, it will be read by the Yale man with an immense amount of satisfaction.

The title shows the authors' method of treatment, but fails to convey to one any idea of the fulness with which the work has been done. "The Point of View" has this to say: "This book, in one of its divisions, tells of the systems and deals of education in the different departments of the University, and supplements that with something about the different teachers and investigators in certain general departments of learning, showing how they co-operate in the Graduate School to lead those who are pushing out beyond the common confines of a liberal education into their chosen fields."

Not the least interesting part of the book is the portion devoted to the class rooms and campus. This part is profusely illustrated.

Yale's athletic history, which occupies the third part, is the most complete thing of its kind we have yet seen. This record alone will make the work of immense value.

Taken all in all, the book is a thoroughly admirable work, which must needs bring to its editors deserved congratulations, and to the University it so ably portrays a vast deal of benefit.

After the war Captain Foraker resumed the studies which he had cast aside in order to enlist, and became a student at Cornell. In college he was a charter member of Phi Kappa Psi. He was graduated at the close of his twenty-third year, in the summer of 1869. In his class were ex-Judge Morris L. Buchwalter, of Cincinnati, Consul Oscar F. Williams, of Manila, the Rev. Dr. George F. Behringer, of Nyack, on the Hudson, and four others. During his collegiate course he took up and prosecuted the study of law, so that after his graduation he was able to begin to practice. He went to Cincinnati and was admitted to the bar on the 14th of October, 1869. For nearly thirty years, he has practiced the duties of his profession in Cincinnati, with only such disturbances as have been incidental to his public life.

SENATOR JOSEPH B. FORAKER.

On the 4th of October, 1870, Mr. Foraker was married to Miss Julia Bundy, daughter of Hon. H. S. Bundy, of Wellston, Ohio. Of this union have been born five children—two sons and three daughters, all of whom survive. One son, Joseph B. Foraker, Jr., was a member of the class of '93.

The public life of Captain Foraker began in April, 1879, when he was elected judge of the Superior Court of Cincinnati. This position he occupied until the first of May, 1882, when, on account of ill-health, he resigned the duties of the judgeship. On his recovery, however, he resumed the practice of his profession. In 1883 he received the nomination of the Republican Party for governor of Ohio, but was defeated by his Democratic opponent, Judge Hoadly. In 1884 Mr. Foraker was a delegate to the National Republican Convention and was chairman of the Ohio delegation. In that relation he put in nomination for the Presidency Senator John Sherman. In the following year he was a second time nominated for governor against Judge Hoadly and was successful, defeating his opponent by a handsome majority. In 1887 he was a second time elected to the same office. In the following year he was again a delegate to the Republican National Convention, and was chairman of the delegation from Ohio. In this convention also it was his duty to place John Sherman in nomination for the Presidency, but the nominee failed of gaining a majority of the delegates.

In 1889 Mr. Foraker was for the fourth time named for governor, but was defeated by ex-Governor James E. Campbell. Mr. Foraker then remained in private life until 1892, when he became a candidate for the office of senator of the United States for Ohio. He received thirty-eight votes, but was defeated by Senator Sherman. In this year he was for the third time delegate at large to the Republican National Convention and served in that body as chairman of the committee on resolutions.

By this time the term of Hon. Calvin S. Brice in the United States Senate was drawing to a close and the voice of the people of Ohio was strongly heard in behalf of Mr. Foraker for the position. In the State Convention at Zanesville, held on the 28th of May, 1895, a resolution was unanimously passed endorsing Mr. Foraker as the Republican candidate for United States Senator. At the ensuing November election a Republican legislature was chosen by a majority of over one hundred thousand votes. The sentiment in favor of Mr. Foraker had become overwhelming, and when in January, 1896, the legislature assembled, all show of opposition had melted away. Without the formality of a caucus, and by the unanimous vote of his party, he was elected to the Senate of the United States for the term of six years, commencing with the 4th of March, 1897.

The State Republican Convention of 1896 was held in Columbus on the 10th and 11th of March. Senator Foraker presided over the convention and was by acclamation chosen for the fourth time to represent the State of Ohio as one of its delegates at large to the Republican National Convention to be held at St. Louis in June of that year.

Mr. Foraker's career in the Senate has in every way fulfilled the expectations of his constituents. He is regarded with admiration not only by the people of the State which he honors and which honors him, but also by the people of the whole nation. He is primarily a man of the people. His sympathies are broad and patriotic. He is strongly on the side of the people and is devoted to American interests in the highest and best sense. His instincts as an old soldier of the Union are blended with the patriotism of the civilian, for which the sons of Ohio have been pre-eminent.

In politics he has always been the leader of the young, aggressive, enthusiastic element of his party. He is a practical man who believes in practical politics; a man of ideas and resources, a brilliant orator, an able statesman; and withal a man of deep personal convictions, fearless in defense of the right as he sees the right, and a loyal American.

YALE'S NEW PRESIDENT.

Professor Arthur T. Hadley Chosen.

On Thursday, conservative Yale turned aside the traditions of two centuries and elected as president, to succeed Dr. Timothy Dwight, Professor Arthur Twining Hadley, of the Academic Department. Conservatism is departed from in the choice, for Professor Hadley is a liberal and progressive educator, although he and his friends have persistently protested against the application of the term "radical" to his methods. Since Abraham Pierson, a Harvard graduate, became Yale's first executive head in 1702, Congregational clergymen have succeeded each other as presidents of the university. Professor Hadley is the first layman ever to be seriously considered for the position. He will assume his duties as Yale's executive head at the close of the present college year. Dr. Dwight submitted his resignation on November 18, to take effect when the school year closed. He still directs the affairs of the university and has been urged to withdraw his resignation by the Corporation, the governing body. He has, however, persistently declined to do so, asserting that he has reached the advanced age of seventy and feels entitled to a rest.

Professor Hadley is the leading professor of economics in Yale. As an evidence of his world-wide reputation, the statement was made on Thursday that the Russian Government, in its construction of the new Siberian railroad, has taken his work on "Railroads" as a theoretical guide and that the Czar has ordered the work, which has been translated into Russian, to be introduced into the Russian universities as the text-book ranking next to one Russian standard work.

The election of Professor Hadley comes as a response to an almost overwhelming demand by undergraduates, alumni, and faculty. The undergraduates were asked, "Whom do you prefer for the next president of Yale?" The answer was, almost unanimously, Professor Hadley. The alumni have sent a petition containing hundreds of names to the corporation asking for Professor Hadley's election, and the faculty have submitted a similar petition containing the names of nearly every professor.

By the election of Professor Hadley a complete new era is begun at Yale. Its educational policy will be altered, and the president will cease to be the college pastor. A new college pastor will be chosen in a few weeks. The policy of continuing compulsory chapel is undergoing a grave discussion. Professor Hadley, although never an athlete, is a keen lover of sports, and new methods dealing with inter-collegiate sport will be inaugurated under his direction.

Arthur Twining Hadley was born in New Haven, April 23, 1856, being the only son of James Hadley, the noted Greek grammarian. He prepared for college in the Hopkins Grammar School, and graduated from Yale in the class of '76. He led his classes in scholarship. He studied political science for a year in New Haven, and then went to Berlin for two years, where he pursued special work in history and political economy. In 1879 he was made a tutor at Yale. His promotion to a full professorship came in 1883. From 1883 to 1886 he was university lecturer on railroad transportation. In 1891, when Professor Summer went abroad, Professor Hadley had entire charge of the work in social science and political economy. He has been lecturer at Harvard, at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and at many Western universities. He is President of the American Economic Association. He was formerly dean of the Yale Graduate Department, but resigned, because of his lack of sympathy with the administration. From 1891 to 1893 he was Connecticut State Labor Commissioner. From 1887 to 1889 he was associate editor of The Railroad Gazette. He has written a large number of articles on railways, among them one for the ninth edition of the "Encyclopædia Britannica."

THE CAMPUS MEETING.

Held in Spite of the Rain.

Owing to the inclement weather the Campus meeting last evening was held in Library Hall, instead of in front of Lincoln. Notwithstanding the rain, the hall was comfortably filled. Jervis Langdon, '97, presided. After a few opening remarks he introduced President Crane who congratulated the University upon the recent baseball victory over Princeton, and gave some kindly advice about the proper manner of celebrating such victories. His address was followed by the singing of Alma Mater led by H. B. Lee, '99. Professor Wheeler was then introduced and spoke in his usual felicitous manner, making an appeal for aid to the Navy, and explaining the details of the coming regatta at Poughkeepsie. The next speaker was W. W. Mumford, Harvard '94, the referee of Tuesday's race, who spoke pleasantly of the friendly relations that have always existed between Harvard and Cornell. "Freddy" Colson was then spied in the back part of the hall, and amid a storm of cheers, was asked to come forward and address the meeting. His speech was followed by one by Captain Ripley of the track team, who spoke briefly of the meet with Princeton at Elmira. Then followed a fencing exhibition by Messrs. Brustlein and Brigandi of the Fencers' Club. The next speaker was Eugene Cary, '78, who spoke of the crew and naval matters during his four years at college, and described vividly the enthusiasm of the old Saratoga days of '75 and '76. The last speaker of the evening was Professor Huffcut.

Regatta Concert.

Last night the musical clubs gave a successful concert at the Lyceum, which was well filled with an enthusiastic crowd of Cornell admirers and a few Pennsylvania supporters.

The stage was draped with American flags and Cornell colors. The upper loges, which were occupied by the Pennsylvania and Cornell crews, were draped with the colors of the respective universities. The former occupied the loges on the left, the latter those on the right of the stage.

On account of the delay of the race the concert did not begin until 9:30. During the first selection by the Banjo Club the Cornell crew entered and immediately the audience broke forth with cheers which was followed by Cornell yells. Pennsylvania entered a few minutes later and was received with equal applause.

The new "Rowing Song," the words written by E. A. McCreary, '00, and the music composed by E. Haviland Jr., Grad., was well received.

The first number was "Alma Mater," followed by "Cornell." The Banjo Club appeared for the second number playing "The March of the Minute Men." The first number of the Mandolin Club was "The Fortune Teller," which was very effectively rendered. For encores to number six on the program Mr. Ebersol sang several songs which were well received.

"America Forever" was played by the Banjo Club on its second appearance and "Darktown Swells" was played in response to an encore. One of the best hits of the evening was made by the Glee Club with its song, "The Pope." The English version being encored, a quartet sang the song in German much to the amusement of the audience. As a second encore "What Could a Farmer do?" was given.

All in all the concert was a great success not only financially, but as an example of the work of the clubs. $100 of the proceeds were given to the Navy.

SAGE CHAPEL.

the architecture of the addition corresponds to that of the original building, but the general effect within and without will be entirely changed.

The fine three-manual organ of thirty-five speaking stops was rebuilt for the new Chapel by Messrs. William King & Son, of Elmira. The organ in the old Chapel was a two-manual organ, containing nineteen speaking stops; it was built by Messrs. Hook & Hastings of Boston. This instrument was the gift of William H. Sage. The expense of rebuilding and of the additional stops was paid by the University and by several private subscriptions.

The specifications are as follows:

Great organ: bourdon, 16 ft.; open diapason, 8 ft.; melodia, 8 ft.; gamba, 8 ft.; dulciana, 8 ft.; octave, 4 ft.; twelfth, 2 2-3 ft.; fifteenth, 2 ft.; mixture, 3 ranks; trumpet, 8 ft.; clarion, 4 ft.

Swell organ: contra gamba, 16 ft.; open diapason, 8 ft.; stopped diapason, 8 ft.; viola, 8 ft.; vox celeste, 8 ft.; violina, 4 ft.; flute harmonic, 4 ft.; piccolo, 2 ft.; cornet, 3 ranks; contra fagotta, 16 ft.; corno-paan, 8 ft.; oboe, 8 ft.

Solo choir organ: open diapason, 8 ft.; keraulophon, 8 ft.; concert flute, 8 ft.; flute d'amour, 4 ft.; French horn, 8 ft.; clarinet, 8 ft.; cor anglais, 8 ft.

Pedal organ: bourdon, 32 ft.; open diapason, 16 ft.; violon, 16 ft.; bourdon, 16 ft.; 'cello, 8 ft.

Mechanical accessories: couplers to manuals and pedal; balanced swell pedal; balanced choir swell pedal; grand crescendo pedal; twelve combination pedals adjusted by means of a switch board containing one hundred thirty-six electric switch pins; swell tremolo and choir tremolo.

The action is electro-pneumatic.

Professor Carpenter.

University of Chicago alumni and President Harper are reported to have called Professor Carpenter from Cornell to the presidency of Lewis Institute, under a new scheme of arrangement of work in conjunction with the University of Chicago. This is said to underlie the recent call of Professor Carpenter to lecture there. Should the plan succeed it may make as complete an overturn of the Department of Experimental Engineering as occurred a year ago in the Department of Machine Design, when Professor Barr was given a sabbatical year but all of his staff meantime accepted positions elsewhere. Professor Durand did not get his leave but it is said will obtain it next year. In Professor Carpenter's department, already, four of the staff have, during the year, found important positions at larger compensation elsewhere, and the fact has been a cause of much anxiety.

The marriage of Professor Duncan Campbell Lee and Miss Elizabeth Williams, daughter of George R. Williams, of Ithaca, will occur in Sage Chapel on Thursday, June 8, at twelve o'clock.

'86 MEMORIAL CONTEST.

William Osgood Morgan, of Pittsfield, Mass., Awarded the Prize—J. H. Gould, Second.

As Professor Lee said in opening the contest on Friday evening, this prize in declamation is the best memorial that the class of '86 has left us. It has brought out many a good speaker, developed undreamt possibilities in others, and stirred men on to the higher work in oratory and debate. Each year sees a clean step in advance. The interest taken in the event grows keener, the character of the work is higher and more uniform, and best of all, one sees the ideals of the University for plain, straightforward, earnest speech approaching nearer realization with each succeeding contest.

The committee of award consisted of Bishop Cyrus D. Foss, of Philadelphia, Professor Edward R. Whitney, of Binghamton, and Mynderse Van Cleef, of Ithaca.

Sidney S. Lowenthal, of Rochester, was the first speaker. His selection was an extract from the address by R. G. Ingersoll. The charm of Mr. Lowenthal's speaking lay in a deep, rich voice, full of expression. He exhibited too much physical emotion at times. His appearance was on the whole very good.

Clayton Ivy Halsey, of West Groton, spoke an extract from Longfellow's "Essay on Success." The effect of his good interpretation was somewhat impaired by a lack of physical earnestness in his manner occasioned by a slight nervousness. His gestures lacked spontaneity.

James Bennett Nolan, of Reading, Pa., gave "The New South" by Grady. Mr. Nolan seemed a little stiff. There was a lack of variety in his gestures. He showed much earnestness in his work, however.

Lee Franklin Hanmer, of Bradford, chose an extract from George William Curtis's address at Union College. Mr. Hanmer's appearance was one of the best of the evening. There was a natural composure in his manner, a sincerity and sympathy in his voice, which together with his earnestness gave him not a little personal magnetism. He is deserving of special mention.

Miss Lydia Independence Jones, of Pittsburg, delivered an oration by C. H. Fowler on Abraham Lincoln. Miss Jones spoke plainly and with considerable force. Her anxiety to be heard in all parts of the hall caused her to use a high tone of voice throughout, which became tiresome, and handicapped her considerably.

Charles Burlingame Smallwood, of Warsaw, who spoke a selection by Curtis, was probably the biggest surprise of the evening. Surely the Department of Oratory can point to him with pride as an example of what can be accomplished by sheer effort. His appearance was extremely crude and his gestures were awkward; but he spoke feelingly and with much force, probably showing more improvement than any other speaker.

Frank Howard Hausner, of Farmington, delivered an address by G. W. Curtis. He did exceedingly well. Earnest, forceful, he lacked only a natural ease in delivery to give greater effect to his speaking.

James Henry Gould, of Seneca Falls, gave "Moral Courage" by F. W. Farrar. Mr. Gould surprised his friends by the excellence of his showing. Nervousness handicapped him to some extent. His gestures were weak. His selection, however, was well interpreted and forcefully delivered. A sympathetic sincerity in his tone of voice contributed greatly to the effect upon the audience.

William Osgood Morgan, of Pittsfield, Mass., had as his selection an oration on "The Heroic Age" by Rufus Choate. Mr. Morgan combined ease, dignity, and polish in his address. While the impression he left upon the audience probably did not equal that of some of the others, nevertheless he did excellently and was well received. A criticism of his work would be, a lack of physical earnestness and a slight weakness in gesturing.

Lewis Stanton Palen, of Monticello, spoke an address by James G. Blaine. Although handicapped by a sore throat, Mr. Palen did well and held his audience well. A slight self-consciousness at times detracted from his appearance. His work was extremely creditable.

Jesse Henry Wilson, Jr., of Washington, D. C., spoke an extract from Emerson's "Essay on Self Reliance" Mr. Wilson was undoubtedly the most composed of all the speakers and for that reason his speech was the more effective. Naturalness, ease, and force characterized his whole work. His gesturing was very good. He seemed to possess not a little personal magnetism with the audience, for they followed closely. Many picked him for a winner. At any rate he did exceedingly well.

Clarence Bartlett Etsler, of Goshen, delivered "The Flag" by H. W. Beecher. His speech was probably the most finished of any. Every inflection, gesture, change of position was carefully worked out. He spoke strongly and with much feeling. He looked like a possible winner and he with the others is deserving of high praise.

The whole contest was a good one: it was at the close, but a toss of the hat between four or five, as to who should have the prize. The judges returned after a brief consultation, to award first honor to William Osgood Morgan, and second honor to James Henry Gould.

As has been intimated, there were many who deserved the prize. At the conclusion of the contest fully six, we believe, justified the appellation of dangerous competitors. The winners, however, deserved to win. We extend our hearty congratulations to both.

Princeton Wins.

Cornell was defeated by Princeton in the dual meet held at Elmira on Memorial Day, by the score of 72 to 45. The day was ideal, and through the earnest work of the officials of the Elmira Athletic Club, a crowd of two thousand people witnessed the games.

The Cornell team went to pieces physically; Sweet fainting at third lap of the two mile run while Berry was unable to curve the tape. Hastings' knee which was injured at the Intercollegiate, gave out just before he crossed the tape, at the finish of the quarter. He was leading, at the time.

Owing to the poor work of the starter, in the 100 yard dash, in rushing the start, Cornell was unable to secure a place, although Baker, in the 220 yard dash, succeeded in getting a close second to Jarvis. Bellinger, in the mile, and Bassett in the half-mile, pushed Cregan hard in both events.

In the Pole Vault, Kinsey and Derring each cheered the bar at 11 feet 2 inches, Lueder won first in the hammer throw, and broke the Cornell record by a throw of 125 feet and 6 inches.

Lyon's finish in the 220 yard hurdles was one of the sensational features of the meet. As both he and Jones of Princeton crossed the finish within six inches of each other.

In the shot put, Lueder led with a put of 38 feet 6 inches until the last trial, when Bottgers, of Princeton won out with a put of 39 feet. Ripley and Wilson finished first and second, respectively, in the 120 yard hurdles.

In the high jump, Princeton won all three places, while in the broad jump, neither Kelly, Larkin or Riply could get out much beyond 21 feet, and Princeton, in consequence, captured first and second places.

Both teams were royally treated by the officials and members of the Elmira Athletic Club, and the town was decorated profusely with the colors of Cornell and Princeton.

Owing to the large crowd both the managements were able to make good profits.

The official summary of events follows:

100 yards dash: won by Jarvis, Princeton; Kratz, Princeton, second, and Smith, Princeton, third. Time 9 4-5 seconds.

Half mile run: won by Cregan, Princeton; Bassett, Cornell, second, and Chamberlain, Princeton, third. Time 2:04 1-5.

120 yards hurdles: won by Ripley, Cornell; Wilson, Cornell, second; Herndon, Princeton, third. Time 16 2-5 seconds.

440 yards run: won by Jarvis, Princeton; Alexander, Cornell, second; Hastings, Cornell, third. Time 53 2-5 seconds.

One mile run: won by Cregan, Princeton; Bellinger, Cornell, second; Chamberlain, Princeton, third. Time 4:55.

220 yards dash: won by Jarvis, Princeton; Baker, Cornell, second; Joseph, Cornell, third. Time 23 1-5 seconds.

Two mile run: won by Palmer, Princeton; Cregan, Princeton, second; Torrance, third. Time 10:27 4-5.

Running high jump: won by Carroll, Princeton; Curtis, Princeton, and Liebindefer, Princeton, third, tied for second place. The jump was five feet, 10 inches, but Carroll cleared 6 feet, 2 inches.

Running broad jump: won by Bottger, Princeton, distance 22 feet, 1 1-2 inches; Von Krug, Princeton, second, distance 21 feet, 6 1-2 inches, and Larkin, third, 21 feet, 3 inches.

Enlargement of the Medical College.

The New York Tribune, in its issue for May 25, prints the following concerning the Medical College:

"The many friends of the Woman's Medical College of the New York Infirmary for Women and Children, at No. 321 East Fifteenth Street, were greatly interested yesterday in The Tribune's exclusive announcement of the report that the college is to go out of existence. This report was fully confirmed by Dr. Henry P. Loomis, of the Cornell Medical College, who said last night that the Cornell institution was going to take all the members of the junior and senior classes of the Woman's Medical College into its fold. There will be no amalgamation of the two colleges, nor will Cornell take over any of the property, real or personal, of the Woman's Medical College. The latter will simply go out of existence. Students in the freshman and sophomore years at the Woman's Medical College cannot be admitted to the New York classes of the Cornell school. They will have to spend those two years at the Cornell lectures in Ithaca or elsewhere. Such are the regulations of Cornell with regard to its New York school.

"This movement will add about fifty women students to Cornell's list, and Dr. Loomis said they would be most welcome. The women students of medicine get credit for making better progress than the men."

The reasons for the step on the part of the Woman's Medical College are set forth in the following announcement, which was read to the audience at the commencement exercises in Mendelssohn Hall, New York, on Thursday evening:

"The Board of Trustees announces that the Medical College hitherto maintained by the Infirmary will be closed at the end of the current college year. The constant tendency of the medical as well as other professional schools has been toward a university connection, until at the present time each of the other important medical schools in New York is the medical department of a university. The Medical College has been in existence for forty years, and until last year has offered to women the only means of medical education in New York. It has now fulfilled its purpose, and medical education may hereafter be obtained by women in New York in the same classes, under the same faculty and with the same clinical opportunities as men.

"Under these circumstances, the Trustees have considered it undesirable to continue longer the maintenance of an independent school, and believe that the medical education of women can be better served and more speedily advanced by recognizing the inevitable result of competition with the university schools and by devoting the entire energies of the Infirmary to the enlargement of its hospital for women and children, and thereby offering to women students in medicine increased clinical opportunities, through the use of which the greatest advance in medical education must necessarily come.

"The history of the Medical School deepens the regret with which the Board has reached its decision. Standing alone during the last forty years, it has, during its existence, maintained a high standard of education. Starting at a time when the medical education of women was distinctly unpopular, it numbers among its earlier graduates those whose strength and vigor of mind enabled them successfully to encounter unpopularity. Dealing from the first with prejudices, it has one by one lived these down, and now as it closes its own doors, others open to women wider opportunities than it has been able to give.

INTERCOLLEGIATE ATHLETIC GAMES.

Pennsylvania First. Cornell tied for Fifth Place.

As we expected, Pennsylvania had an easy time of it at Manhattan Field on Saturday. Her stars did great work, showing up in front in nine of the thirteen events, with the result that the championship honors remain in Pennsylvania.

Torrance got fourth place in the two-mile for Cornell, while Deming and Kinsey both did 11 feet 2 inches in the pole vault, which tied them with Johnson of Yale for second place. The points were divided, Cornell getting four, which with the other, gave Cornell five points.

Kranselein made a new world's record of 24 feet 4 1-2 inches in the broad jump, and clipped one-fifth of a second off the Intercollegiate record. Long of Columbia won the quarter in 49 2-5 seconds, which is just one-tenth of a second better than the previous Intercollegiate record.

The score by points: Pennsylvania, 57; Harvard, 28; Yale, 22 1-2; Princeton, 11; Syracuse, 10; Cornell, 5; Columbia, 5; Williams, 3; Georgetown, 1; Haverford, 1 1-2.
