VOL. XXV. No. 36

ITHACA, N. Y., JUNE 14, 1923

PRICE 12 CENTS

TENTS and army cots are coming out of long storage in the attic of Lincoln Hall, by means of block and tackle, to be spread out on the lawns to air in readiness for the Civil Engineering summer camp; this activity furnishes about the only relief on the Campus during the final blue period of the final blue books.

THE MEDICAL COLLEGE graduated sixty-four students last week at the annual Commencement where President Farrand made the principal address and awarded the diplomas. Morris Berkowitz of Brooklyn received the John Metcalf Polk Prize of $300 for general efficiency.

THE CAMPUS TRAFFIC COP has a brand new uniform, and it is quite an addition; for it is neat dark blue, with visored cap and a very shiny shield on the left breast. A new zest is added to his old silence and erectness, and his businesslike air, which makes him more straight, and quiet, and effective than ever. And there seems to be a keener twinkle in the sharp blue eyes, now that Jimmie Riordan is iv'ry inch a policeman.

FUNERAL SERVICES were held in Ithaca on June 10 for Juanita Bates '17, who lost her life in an airplane accident in France, her body having been brought to Ithaca for interment in the mausoleum of Lakeview Cemetery.

COACH MOAKLEY served as referee of the field meet held by the Zonta Clubs at the Ithaca School of Physical Education. The business women who make up this organization contested in various events such as the hundred-yard dash, high hurdles, low hurdles, relay race, standing broad jump, high jump, crew race, and obstacle race. The meeting was not open to the public.

NEW YORK STATE publishers met in Ithaca on June 4 at the Empire State School of Printing and heard Oswald Garrison Villard forcibly present his ideals for American journalism. Members of the Faculty, guests of the Association, were President Livingston Farrand and Professors Bristow Adams, Millard V. Atwood '10, and Alexander M. Drummond.

THE CAYUGA VALLEY Hunt Club recently elected Captain George P. Hays, of the artillery unit at Cornell University, as president for the ensuing year. Captain Hays succeeds Major Thomas J. J. Christian. The Hunt Club plans many new activities, including a number of rides, during the summer.

PROFESSOR JAMES T. QUARLES recently gave an organ recital in the Presbyterian church in Trumansburg. This church has acquired a new organ, and Professor Quarles has taken much interest in the installation.

THE COLLEGE BOOKSHOP on Eddy Street has gone into bankruptcy, and among the unsecured creditors are the Sun and the Widow for sums owed for advertising.

PROFESSOR CHARLES L. DURHAM '99 roundly scored the Republican Party, according to newspaper accounts, on June 7, at a dinner of the Ithaca Democratic Women's Club.

GEORGE F. BAKER, donor of the new Chemistry Building, accompanied by a party of friends last week made an inspection of the building, which is now nearing completion. He expressed himself as being particularly pleased with the progress that has been made. On the outside, the most recent activity has been the completion of the stone terraces, and the clearing away of some of the temporary structures and the builders' debris.

THE EMPIRE STATE School of Printing, under the directorship of Ross W. Kellogg '12, has recently expanded until it can now accommodate twice as many students as it could when it opened a little more than a year ago. Now there is some talk that it may be developed into a newspaper vocational school for the training of the writing as well as the printing staff.

THE LAST ORGAN RECITAL of the year was given Thursday afternoon in Sage Chapel, and it also marked the last University recital to be given by Professor Quarles before leaving to become head of the department of music at the University of Missouri.

ERIC DUDLEY and Mrs. Dudley gave a vocal recital at the residence of President Farrand on June 5, with Mrs. Farrand playing the accompaniments. The occasion was a meeting of the Cornell Dames, made up of women who have husbands, fathers, sons, brothers, mothers, daughters, sisters, or other near relatives who are now students at Cornell.

COLONEL JESSE C. NICHOLLS, commandant of the R. O. T. C. Unit, will be commander of the camp at Plattsburgh this summer. Other Cornell officers who will be with him there are Major J. P. Edgerly, Captain C. T. Senay, Captain J. R. Eden, and Lieutenant L. A. Pearson.

PROFESSOR VLADIMIR KARAPETOFF has perfected a visual demonstration of the Einstein theory of relativity, by means of a model with moving parts and colors.

while diving in Fall Creek Gorge last week struck his head on a hidden rock, receiving serious scalp lacerations and suffering concussion of the brain.

THE WEDDING of Clara Z. Howard '14 and Thomas Turnbull, 3d, '18 of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania will take place on June 29.

THE ADVANCED CHOIR refused to be dismissed after the final vesper service of the University year on June 3, and remained in their seats while Louis A. Fuertes '97 presented Professor Quarles with a silver tray on which was inscribed the names of all the members of the choir.

THE FIRST SHIPMENT of salt, amounting to about three hundred tons, since the opening of navigation this year in the State Barge Canal, left Ithaca for New York on a fleet of barges last week.

THE SOCIETY for the Promotion of Engineering Education opens its four-day meeting on the Campus on June 20. Most engineering colleges of the country will be represented by delegates.

WALLS are going up for a new store and apartment building on West State Street on the site of the former home of the Salvation Army, which was destroyed by fire several years ago.

AIRPLANES carrying photographic engineers and city officials have been flying over Ithaca during the past week. Mayor Smith reports after a trip over the city that the north end, including Cornell Heights, and the Campus make a particularly good impression from the air.

THE MARRIAGE of Dr. George B. McAuliffe, a member of the Faculty of the Cornell Medical College in New York, and Miss Marguerite Laux, daughter of Mr. Joseph Laux of Brooklyn, N. Y., took place on June 6 in the Church of Joan of Arc, Jackson Heights, Elmhurst, Long Island.

PROFESSORS JAMES E. RICE '90 and Martha Van Rensselaer '09 addressed a recent meeting of the Woman's Farm and Garden Association in Rochester. Professor Rice's subject was "Some Things Women Should Know About Chickens."

Transfer Percy Field

Cascadilla School Buys It and Will Lease Summer Use of It

The Ithaca Trust Company, as trustee under the will of the late Mayor Edwin C. Stewart, has purchased in the name of the City of Ithaca the Cascadilla School property adjoining Stewart Park on the west at the head of the Lake, subject to certain temporary leases. This property consists of an athletic and gymnasium building, a boat house on Fall Creek Cove, and an athletic field developed by the late Prof. L. A. Wait when he had charge of the school, and which has been used by the Cascadilla School students since that time. The property has been known as the Parsell Field and Wait Boat House.

The Cascadilla School officials have in turn purchased the Percy Athletic Field, buildings and appurtenances, for its future use as an athletic field for the use of the students in the school, and will take possession soon.

When, in 1888, a committee of Trustees of Cornell was endeavoring to find a place for an athletic field, William H. Sage, who had given much assistance in the development of interest in athletics at Cornell and who was of the originators of, and served for many years as a member of the Athletic Council, generously purchased a plot of land lying to the north of Fall Creek and west of the lake road and conveyed it to the Athletic Association, July 27, 1889, but provided in the deed that: "This conveyance is made for the purpose of furnishing said party of the second part, its successors and assigns, with an athletic field for the use of the students of Cornell University but if for any reason it shall be abandoned or cease to be so used by said party of the second part for a period of one year, then this deed shall become null and void and the property hereby conveyed shall revert to said party of the first part, his heirs, executors or assigns."

Some few years since Mr. Sage, feeling that sooner or later Cornell would develop athletic fields on the Campus, conveyed, through the suggestion of the late Emons L. Williams, all his rights in the Percy Field property to the City Hospital, and provided that when it was sold the proceeds should be added to the endowment fund.

With the transfer of the baseball field from Percy Field to the new athletic field on the Campus, adjoining Schoellkopf Field, the officials of the Athletic Association were faced with the problem of the disposition of Percy Field.

Some weeks since a joint conference was called of representatives of the Stewart Park Commission, the Cascadilla School Association, the Ithaca City Hospital, and the Athletic Association, the parties interested. At this conference a desire was expressed, on the part of the different representatives, to retain Percy Field for athletic purposes, if ways and means of doing so could be arranged.

The Cascadilla School authorities had assured the late Senator Stewart before his death that whenever the Cascadilla School property at the head of the lake was needed for the proper development of Stewart Park they would cooperate in such a movement, and they stated at the conference that they were ready to do so now, but must find some other place which they could use as an athletic field for their students.

The hospital authorities stated that they would cooperate, provided a fair and reasonable sum could be realized for the sale of that portion of Percy Field in which they had an interest.

The northern portion of the field and the keeper's house were owned in fee by the Athletic Association, it having purchased the same some years after Mr. Sage's gift of the southern part, and it, in turn, agreed that if it could be assured that the athletic field would be retained as a play ground and athletic field it would cooperate in a most generous way.

As a result of this conference the members of the Stewart Park Commission were called together early in May, and after the plan was proposed to them they authorized the purchase of the Cascadilla School property out of the funds available from the bequest of the late Edwin C. Stewart.

The Cascadilla School officials entered into an agreement to purchase the rights of the City Hospital in Percy Field, and to accept the generous proposal of the Athletic Association officials to transfer to Cascadilla School the entire Percy Field property.

It is understood that the Cascadilla School officials will fit up and maintain the grounds as an athletic field primarily for the use of students of the Cascadilla School. As, however, Cascadilla School students will use the field mostly in the spring months and up to about the middle of June, and will not ordinarily need the field again until September, the Cascadilla School officials plan to lease the use of the field from time to time during the summer months to such local organizations and athletic teams as may desire to use it.

PROFESSOR WILLIAM L. WESTERMANN will present "Current Problems of the Near East" before the third annual session of the Institute of Politics which opens at Williams College, Williamstown, Massachusetts on July 27 and continues to August 25.

PRESIDENT LIVINGSTON FARRAND recently spoke at Salamanca under the auspices of the Cattaraugus County Tuberculosis and Public Health Association, which is trying to rid the county of human and bovine tuberculosis.

Cornellian Shoots Tiger

Walter B. Townsend '21, Indian Missionary, Kills Jungle Beast

A letter from Walter B. Townsend '21, who is now a missionary in Calcutta India, relates how he shot a panther that had been terrorizing the natives:

"For some time past Miss Naylor, the missionary in charge of the work in a wild section of the country, three days distant from Calcutta, was having a bad time with tigers and leopards. Finally a little child was carried off from a front porch.

"Miss Naylor knew that I could shoot and wrote for me to come down. She and her party are located just in the center of the Indian peninsula in the heart of a huge jungle more than one hundred miles from a railroad and a white man.

"I obtained a leave of absence at Christmas time and went down. They met me at the railroad and took me the one hundred miles to the jungle mission in a Ford. "The night I arrived a large panther jumped over the six-foot stockade around the cattle yard and carried off a two-hundred-pound calf.

"In the morning another missionary and myself set out with our guns to trail the brute. The jungle was thick and we kept our guns raised and cocked. The trail of the calf as it had been pulled along was very plain and after about a half mile we found it under a brush with its stomach eaten out. We were sure then that its slayer was a panther as a tiger always begins to eat at the tail.

"We immediately climbed trees and I made a mistake which nearly cost me my life. We were both on our first hunt, you see and were green.

"I sat in a tree about fifteen feet from the ground on the far side of the dead calf and facing it.

"We climbed into those trees at nine o'clock in the morning and sat until one o'clock in the afternoon. Then we went for food and a rest until two o'clock. Panthers never come out at that time of day.

"There were many crows and hawks eating the intestines and other exposed organs. About four o'clock in the afternoon they all acted excited and looked toward me.

"I glanced around to see a huge leopard walking toward me. He stopped about ten yards away and smelled me, but couldn't see me.

"Believe me, I sat still. Here was a panther standing three feet high, directly in back of me so that I couldn't turn or move my gun. There was I sitting there with nothing but a six shooter between me and eternity, if I moved. I solemnly vowed that I never again would sit in a like position under twenty-five feet from the ground. The animal could have taken one spring and knocked me for a goal.

"The brute stood there for about twenty minutes and it seemed like hours. All the time he wagged his tail like a mischievous dog. Finally he was satisfied that it would be safe to come back at night for his meal and walked off.

"I immediately faced around and prepared for action, but the animal didn't come back.

"At sun down I called to Perkins, my companion, who was out of sight. We changed our positions to a tall tree near by. We tied a cot to some limbs, so that it was level and prepared for the night about thirty feet from the ground.

"It was very dark, no moon—so we tied a lantern to the tree.

"Perkins rolled up in his blankets and went to sleep while I kept watch.

"At one o'clock the old fellow came. We could see his head nosing around the calf. We raised our guns and gave him four shots—two buckshot—two balls.

"The ball missed and the shot caught him in the face at thirty yards, but he got away.

"We slept till morning and then went to where the calf was. Later we returned to the stockade.

"A day later a man came running into the yard and said that a tiger had carried off a big cow. We got our rifles and set off to track that fellow.

"A mile away we found the cow, partly eaten. We tied her leg to a tree so Mr. Tiger wouldn't carry her off and again climbed into a tree. We took turns watching at night.

"In the morning the crows which again had come near flew into the trees. It was about ten o'clock. I had gone a little higher into the tree to get a better view and saw a coyote come slinking toward the cow. It suddenly stopped, put its nose into the air and 'pointed' at the bushes near by. Then away it went like a shot.

"I watched the bushes and out stepped a huge, beautiful tiger walking as majestically as a king and making not the slightest sound. It stood about three feet six inches high and was more than nine feet long. Never have I seen anything more graceful.

"I covered it with my big gun and held it on the animal as it approached.

"It came straight up to about within fifty yards of us and then stopped and sniffed. It smelled us and drawing its face into a hideous, silent snarl, began to turn away.

"I aimed at its heart and pulled. It went at least twenty feet into the air and alighted on all four feet. It ran into the jungle.

"I knew it was finished, but to be sure we waited an hour before going down. Perkins had expected the tiger to approach nearer and so didn't have his gun up when I had fired.

"The village people all came running, after the shot and after about an hour we lined them up and set out through the jungle to find the tiger.

"After struggling through the thick wilderness for about a half mile we found it stretched out at full length with its tongue hanging out.

"It took eight 'coolies' to lift him and they had a hard time carrying him a mile to my tent.

"As we approached nearer the village men with tom toms and drums met us and a parade formed. The natives walked in front of us. They were mighty glad to be rid of that tiger.

"I had the pleasure of skinning it and found that the bullet had entered its breast, just missed its heart and had torn out a lung, punctured its stomach and liver and stopped on the other side of its body.

"Its vitality was so great that it could go a half mile after all that. The skin measured eleven feet."

WARREN ON IMMIGRATION

A recent issue of The American Agriculturist included an article by Professor George F. Warren on immigration as affecting farm labor. He advocates improvement in the present law rather than a return to unrestricted immigration.

"Comparatively little of the work on farms in the United States is done by persons from Southern Europe. Most of the farm hands in this country are native Americans. Some come from northern Europe. Since the present law tends to stimulate immigration from Northern Europe, the chance of our having a Swede, Dane, Englishman, or German to work on our farm are better than they would be if immigration was unrestricted. The quality of the immigrants now coming is much above the average that came before the restriction law was passed."

"Because of the high wages in cities, some farmers believe that if we allowed indiscriminate immigration it would break the labor market. Since farmers as a class depend more on the labor of themselves and members of their families than they do on hired labor, and depend more on their own labor than they do on the returns from capital, it is to their interest that wages be high. If over a series of years wages remain high, the pay that farmers receive for their own labor will be high. It is very trying to see one's sons and hired men go to the cities and receive high wages at a time when the farm products are low. It is not in the interest of farmers to have country and city wages out of adjustment, but it is in their interest to have wages high. Adjustment between city and country can be brought about by the movement from farm to cities as readily as by bringing in foreigners." With the increasing population, good land is no longer readily available and the production of the future will come from slower and more expensive methods of expansion. We must conserve our resources to provide a place for our own surplus population."

"BUCK" ANDREWS REJOINS

The following received from "Buck" Andrews '94, is of interest to all Cornelians, but especially to the members of the two classes mentioned. It refers to the article headed "93 Reunion Committee" on page 366 of our issue of May 3, 1923:

"I demand an apology, sir! I am the original and only 'Buck' Andrews (always use the quotation marks, please), and I shall object most strenuously to any '93 man laying claim to that appellation.

Yours truly,

WILLIAM J. ANDREWS '94

"P. S. Consult 'Colonel Louie' Bement. He knows. But I can't be robbed of my entitlements without a protest. In business at the old stand, Raleigh, North Carolina. 'Colonel Buck' Andrews, one of the founders of the Southern Club of Cornell."

Research into the archives has elicited the curious but undeniable fact that both men are entitled to the honor of wearing "Buck" in their buttonholes.

ATHLETICS

Varsity Crew Has Shake Up

One week before the crews leave for their quarters at Highland-on-Hudson to tune up for the Poughkeepsie regatta, the make-up of the Varsity and Junior eights is still unsettled. For the past two weeks Coach Hoyle has been conducting a series of experiments in an effort to obtain a Varsity eight that will row together as Cornell crews are accustomed to row, and which can develop the speed which Cornell eights are accustomed to develop.

At the beginning of this week only three men of the eight that rowed in the Yale-Princeton and the Harvard races remained in the Varsity shell, C. N. Strong, 3; E. C. Calleson, 6; and E. V. Baker, who had been moved from 6 to stroke. M. W. Filius, who paced the Varsity all last season and in the two preliminary races this year, has been shifted to stroke of the Junior shell. The other varsity men transferred to the Junior eight are C. F. Kells, bow; R. O. Egeberg, 2; W. L. Hearn, 5; and J. Purcell, 7.

The reorganized Varsity, as it rowed early this week, was boated as follows:

Bow, E. W. Hoffman; 2, F. W. Fix, Jr.; 3, C. N. Strong; 4, H. Garnsey, Jr.; 5, H. H. Krider; 6, E. S. Calleson; 7, W. B. Parshall; stroke, E. V. Baker; and Coxswain B. J. Nicholson.

Only two of these men, Baker and Strong, were in last year's Varsity at Poughkeepsie; Hoffman, Fix, Garnsey and Calleson were members of the crack freshman eight of 1920 and have rowed in the Junior varsity since; Parshall and Krider were in last year's freshman shell.

Whether these changes are permanent, races this week with the freshman eight will determine. The yearlings have defeated the original Varsity eight, even over the three mile course. If this eight fails to defeat the freshman crew, further changes are in prospect.

ROCHESTER STILL GOING

Walter I. L. Duncan, returning from his work for the Alumni Fund with the Rochester, New York, committee, says that that city bids fair to set up a record for the Alumni Fund at which all the Cornell clubs in the country may shoot.

"The total to and including June 9 for the Rochester campaign is more than seven thousand dollars," said Duncan. "The way the money continues to come in is a distinct compliment to the men on the committee, and the backing that the Cornellians of the district have given them.

"Ed Nell's team is still in the lead with a total of over $2,800 annually. One of the subscriptions turned in by his team this week was for a thousand dollars a year. This is the largest single subscription received to date. Right behind the leaders comes the team captained by Ralph Gorsline '89. The other teams are closely grouped together and are now rushing the work through to a finish. It has been the great enthusiasm of all the men that has made the campaign a success.

"Next week is the last week of the campaign and judging from the expressions of the men behind the work there isn't the slightest doubt that Rochester will make its quota of ten thousand dollars. It will be a great thing to have accomplished for Cornell, and a piece of work of which every Cornellian in the Rochester section may be justly proud. That it will be one of the outstanding accomplishments of Cornell alumni for the year 1923 goes without saying."

SPORT STUFF

Professors and underclassmen are leaving. Girls and Old Grads are arriving. There has been no adverse criticism of the wisdom and expediency of the exchange. Yet another week and the whole place will be cleaned out. Then for a fortnight the permanent sediment of merchants, sporting tailors, graduate managers, bankers, ornithologists, editors, and waterside characters can devote themselves exclusively and conscientiously to correcting the slice and developing the back spin.

We approach the reunion walking delicately and glancing furtively from right to left. This is because the teams have not been going so well this spring. When the teams are winning alumni en masse are an admiring claque. When we are losing they are a grim investigating committee, each convinced that his particular pill—and no other—will cure the patient. Even so we are a lot better off than most governments in the Balkans.

A REMINISCENCE

Editor, THE ALUMNI NEWS:

The recent lamentable death of Elwin A. Ladd '95, of Batavia, N. Y., recalls an incident of the old days. Ladd entered with '93, and as a freshman roomed with George McKnight '92 in the house on East Seneca Street now occupied by Foster Coffin. Ladd had some ability as a versifier and was chosen freshman poet, it being his duty to provide the high-brow stuff for the freshman banquet. On the evening before the banquet his wicked roommate, it is alleged, stole Ladd's effusion out of his trousers pocket, and the next morning it appeared as a broadside, to the great delight of the sophomores and the dismay of Ladd and his mates. But he was equal to the emergency. Pulling himself together he produced another and far better poem, with which the freshmen were duly edified.

As an educator Ladd had a useful and honorable career.

A group of Delaware alumni met at the home of Joseph S. Wilson '09 in Wilmington on May 31 to make plans for the reorganization of the Cornell Alumni Association of Delaware. A June picnic was planned to be held on Elk River, and the new association expects to get in touch with as many as possible of the Delaware Cornellians for that event. It asks that all in the State communicate with the officers if they are not reached otherwise.

The temporary officers elected at the first meeting were Alfred D. Warner, Jr., '00, president; Allan W. Carpenter '16, vice-president; and Joseph H. Shaw '12, secretary-treasurer.

Wilkes-Barre

The two hundred Cornellians in Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, may have a Cornell Club, according to the Times-Leader of May 29, which gave an account of an informal luncheon held on the previous day to discuss possibilities. Arrangements are to be made, according to this account, for a later meeting, at which the local club will be organized. The Cornell Alumni Directory lists the names of fifty-one alumni who were living in Wilkes-Barre on March 8, 1922.

Rochester

The Cornell Club of Rochester will hold its regular annual picnic on June 23 at the Newport House in Irondequoit Bay. The club and its guests will meet at Convention Hall at 2 p. m. and drive in cars that the club will provide.

Entertainment will include several baseball games and track and field sports. The Johnston Memorial Pipe Band will furnish the music. All Cornell men are welcome and special invitations will be sent to all men now attending the University and resident in Monroe, Livingston, Genesee, Wayne, Orleans, and Ontario Counties.

Washington, D. C.

The Cornell Alumni Society of Washington announces a boat ride to Great Falls on the Canal on June 23. The boat leaves at 2 p. m. and returns at 10 p. m. Ice cream and soft drinks will be provided by the society, the rest of the refreshment being brought by those who go. Further information may be secured from Miss Abbie Tingley, 1501 Hamilton Street, Washington, D. C.

Mark Dr. White's Birthplace

Trustees Place Engraved Bronze Tablet on Old House in Homer Where First President Was Born

A bronze tablet to mark it as the birthplace of Cornell's first president, Andrew D. White, was placed on the old house at the corner of Main and Albany Streets, in Homer, New York, on June 6, by Robert H. Treman '78, acting for the Board of Trustees. The tablet was placed without formal exercises.

Engraved on it is the following inscription:

"In This House Was Born November 7, 1832, Andrew Dickson White, Educator, Historian, Diplomat, First President of Cornell University."

The house, which is now occupied by Walter D. Briggs, is of brick with a mansard roof. It is the opinion of Prof. George L. Burr '81 that the roof is a more recent addition, but in other respects the house has been little changed.

Dr. White's ancestors on both sides came from New England toward the close of the eighteenth century, as he himself explains in the Autobiography, and settled in the New York wilderness where the village of Homer is now situated. At the time of Dr. White's birth, about forty years after the pioneers arrived, the town was already well established, and Dr.

White describes it as "one of the prettiest villages imaginable. In the heart of it was the 'Green,' and along the middle of this a line of church edifices, and the academy. In front of the green, parallel to the river, ran, north and south, the broad main street, beautifully shaded with maples, and on either side of this, in the middle of the village, were stores, shops, and the main taverns, while north and south of these were large and pleasant dwellings, each in its own garden or grove or orchard, and separated from the street by light palings—all, without exception, neat, trim, and tidy."

The old brick house in which Dr. White was born was purchased by his father at the time of his marriage, and was probably built some years before, so that it would now be about one hundred years old. Apparently the family lived there only a few years or until 1835, when Andrew Dickson, Dr. White's maternal grandfather, died, and they went to live in the Dickson homestead, which is the old colonial house still standing on the other side of the street. This is the house referred to in the Autobiography as having a "stoop," long and broad, on its southern side, which in summer was shaded with honeysuckles.

WELCOME TO OUR CITY

CONVERGING on Ithaca, as we go to press, are the thoughts of many hundreds of Cornellians, preparing to attend the greatest reunion in point of size that Cornell has yet seen. This very size is an indication of a certain vitality about the University, and a testimonial to the grip she has on the imagination of her children. Perhaps a tenth of all those who have gone through the four years of preparation for citizenship and for their professional and business careers look upon the University and their Cornell friends as of sufficient importance to make attendance at a reunion worth the effort. Another year, another tenth, until perhaps in the cycle of ten years a third, or even nearly a half of all the living Cornellians will have come back once at least to renew their youth and see for themselves how the place and the people are getting along.

The almost spontaneous return of the alumni each year demonstrates, if a demonstration is needed, an attraction of a different magnitude than that existing between a picnic ground and its devotees. Undoubtedly there is the pull to review the scenes of happy days, but that alone cannot account for reunions. Neither can gratitude which in many cases is owing directly to the University for the material success that might not have been achieved but for the opportunities offered because of the training and friendship of the University course.

Behind all these is a feeling that resembles reverence for the organization that took hold of the plastic, putty-like mind of the prospective alumnus and, after a series of ups and downs and varying, but on the whole intensive, training, turned it into a thing that was equipped to do independent thinking. If it had not stored up a great volume of facts it at least had begun to know how to find out anything it needed to know.

The affection of the alumnus for Alma Mater is not then wholly from the memory of happy days, nor wholly from the gratitude for greater prosperity, but to no little degree a reverence for the agency that has made it possible for him to obtain his full share of the unmaterial things of life.

To the many alumni returning for the reunion this week, we feel sure that we speak authoritatively when we extend the cordial greetings of the Faculty, the Administration, the students, the town, and the many organizations and individuals who are in Ithaca because of Cornell University.

OBITUARY

Harry A. Flint '88-90

Harry Allen Flint, who was a special in the University from 1888 to 1890, died of typhus on May 21 in Constantinople, Turkey, where he had been stationed for the past four years with the American Relief Administration.

For a number of years, Flint was with the Solvay Process Company of Syracuse, holding the position of assistant manager at the time he entered the service of the American Relief Administration at the beginning of the war.

Mrs. Flint who was formerly Miss Lydia Power of Syracuse, was with her husband in the East, and was also engaged in relief work. Arrangements are being made to bring the body to Syracuse for burial.

Elwin A. Ladd '95

The body of Elwin Albertus Ladd, superintendent of schools in Batavia, N. Y., was found in a cistern in the rear of his home on June 5. He had suffered a gradual breakdown in health in recent months, and his friends believe that his sensitiveness over the resentment voiced by some, over the conduct of the schools resulting in the recent strike of students, in a community hitherto unanimously in accord with him, prompted self-destruction.

Ladd was born in Central Square, N. Y., in 1870. He came to Cornell in 1889, remaining a year, and returned in 1892, receiving the degree of Ph. B. in 1895. For a few years he was principal of the High School in Bergen, N. Y., going to Batavia in 1902 as principal of the High School; he was promoted to be superintendent of schools in 1913. He was at one time an examiner in French in the State Education Department.

Surviving him are his widow, Mrs. Florence A. Ladd, and two sons, Era A. Ladd, A.B. '19, and Cyril L. Ladd, both students in Hamilton College.

LITERARY REVIEW

An Epoch-Making Work

A Life of William Shakespeare. By Joseph Quincy Adams, Ph.D. '06, Professor of English in Cornell. Boston. Houghton Mifflin Company. 1923. 24.5 cm., pp. xviii, 561. 690 Illustrations. Price, $7.50.

At last we have the long-expected Life of Shakespeare on which Professor Adams has been engaged for some years, and which a Heckscher Grant has enabled him to bring to completion. We are not disappointed in the work. Those who are familiar with Dr. Adams's method of approach to Shakespearean problems and who have followed his brilliant solutions of some of the most perplexing questions connected with the Elizabethan drama and stage, have learned to expect a book that would take high rank in its class. And such a book is now before us.

Professor Adams believes the name Shakespeare to have been derived from the Norman saquer, "draw," and espee, "sword," made over by folk-etymology into Shakespeare; we actually find Draw-spear and Drawsword. This is ingenious and highly plausible. One possible objection to it (to be devil's advocate for a moment) is that folk-etymology is less likely to work on names after they become fixed (as in Saxpey and the like) than phonetic shortening; a name that would normally give Saxpy is not very likely to become lengthened by the addition of an r or rd sound even to satisfy somebody's notion of etymology. We should like to suggest that the presence of d in some forms of the name—Saxberd, Shaxberd—deserves attention. Such a sound is more likely to have been dropped from the original than added. We admit that "Saxonbeard" is perhaps unpoetical; but it is not to be ruled out without thought. It might conceivably have been a Norman epithet, for a Saxon, that stuck.

Dr. Adams is far more convincing in his skilful handling of the circumstances attending Shakespeare's marriage, the Lucy myth, and the problem of what Shakespeare was doing from 1585 on until he began to be busy about the theater. The work of the schoolmaster would provide income for the growing family and would furnish an avenue of approach to the literary life such as no other work gives. One may add that the wise teacher is constantly trying to get a view of his subject—youth—as a whole. A born teacher is far more likely to become a philosophical man of letters than, for example, a born lawyer. This view involves no reproach upon the noble profession of the law; it merely has to do with types of minds.

In these pages Shakespeare stands out not as a superman or a freak of nature, but as an ordinary man, well balanced, sane, gifted to see life steadily and see it whole to a degree beyond the capacity of most other men, and to set down concrete pictures of this complex life. The theory so long prevalent of the four periods ("On the Heights," "In the Depths," etc.) vanishes and in its place we have a shrewd and experienced playwright giving the public what it craved.

Two features of the book are of outstanding importance; first, the careful way in which the author develops the story of Shakespeare's connection with the theater, a rather good history of which might be excerpted from these pages; and secondly, the surprising fullness with which it is now possible for a scholar, with an equipment such as is possessed by Dr. Adams, and without too much dependence on conjecture, to treat of the external life of the Bard of Avon. The dramatist stands out in these pages as a real man, human, imperfect yet magnificently great in his imperfections, as he does in no other existing biography. Without even mentioning the curious Shakespeare-Bacon controversy, Adams indirectly offers a completely demolishing argument against it.

A word about the illustrations. They are well chosen, and add much to the attractive appearance of the volume. Many of them have never, we believe, appeared before in reproduction; at least they are not at all familiar in this connection.

The price of the book, if one considers its altogether probable sale, is regrettably if not needlessly high, and we hope the publishers will see the desirability of reducing it or soon issuing a less expensive edition. A work of such sterling and lasting value should be accessible to more than a few wealthy bookbuyers.

"I was at Cornell only one year, why should I give anything to the Alumni Fund"?

Cornell men who say this are answering hurriedly and without adequate consideration. They do not mean it literally. They may, of course, feel that they do not need to contribute as liberally as a graduate or one who used the University's facilities for a longer time. But they should recognize the University's fair claim upon them and should contribute accordingly.

Among the graduates of Cornell are naturally a majority of her most loyal and able sons, but in the ranks of those who were with her only a year or two are many outstanding figures.

Many of these men have served steadfastly for years on committees and even as trustees. They constitute  $33\frac{1}{3}$  per cent of the total Alumni body. ONE CORNELL MAN IN EVERY THREE YOU MEET DID NOT COMPLETE HIS UNIVERSITY COURSE.

When you hear a man say,—

"I was at Cornell only one year, why should I give anything?"

Stop and talk it over with him. He does not mean it. To prove it, stand beside him at the next big athletic event in which Cornell competes. You will find him cheering even more lustily than you.

Cornell needs the support of every former student whether he was with her ten years or one. All are members of the Cornell Family. For them and their Sons' Sons her shrines must ever burn.

ABOVE are exact words of the Treasurer and General Manager of a big corporation manufacturing personal articles for men. Yet their advertising agency does not understand the intimate appeal of the alumni magazines. Their advertising manager is afraid that they should not use alumni magazines on their regular advertising schedule because they are not known as "major" mediums, or because they are not read by this manufacturer's dealers, or because they do not carry page after page of competitive advertising.

Really, these objections are good reasons why this manufacturer and others should use the alumni magazines. The reader interest of the news notes is incomparable. The intimate appeal of this and similar alumni magazines has specific advertising value.

Forty-four alumni publications have a combined circulation of 160,000 college trained men. Advertising space may be bought individually or collectively—in any way desired. Two page sizes—only two plates necessary—group advertising rates.
