VOL. XV. No. 4

ITHACA, N. Y., OCTOBER 23, 1912

PRICE 10 CENTS

THE Cornell University Medical College opened on Wednesday, October 2, 1912, with an enrollment as follows: first year, 39; second year, 24; third year, 20; fourth year, 19; special students (work not leading to the degree of M.D.), 5; Doctors of Medicine engaged in research, 7; for the degree of Ph.D., 2; a total of 116 students. There is an increase over last year of 15 students in the enrollment for the course leading to the degree of M.D. All students now registered, with the exception of those who are pursuing the combined seven year courses leading to the degrees of A.B. and M.D., are graduates in Arts or Science, or Doctors of Medicine doing advanced work.

Another moving-picture man has been here. He made some films for the Essanay Company Saturday at Percy Field during the Penn State game. There was an undergraduate parade, headed by the cadet band, to the field, and the photographer took the parade. The cheer leaders were conscious of his presence on the field, and they found it difficult to keep out of range. Between the halves of the game the photographer planted his camera in front of the steel stand and then a freshman was discovered in the top row of seats. While the picture man turned his reel the freshman was hustled down the aisle by a couple of upperclassmen and put out, right in front of the camera. Then the photographer crossed the field, and when he was all ready the freshman was brought over and tossed up among his classmates. The Proctor got into both pictures. Of course the freshman must have known better than to go into the steel stand, and it probably won't happen again until the next moving picture man comes.

Upon the nomination of the Acting President, the following appointments for the year 1912-13 have been made by the Executive Committee: P. L. Peach, instructor in experimental engineering, vice C. L. Current, resigned; Leland W. Bennett, instructor in machine design, vice P. L. Peach, transferred; L. A. Wilson, instructor in experimental engineering, vice T. B. Hyde, resigned; E. T.

Jones, instructor in power engineering, vice L. A. Wilson, transferred; Thomas A. Hussey, instructor in machine design; Arnoud Jacob Joris van der Does de Bye, instructor in machine design, vice H. L. Beecher, resigned; Harry Hill Waters and Ralph A. Brown, assistants in machine design, vice J. R. Cautley, resigned.

The undergraduates of the College of Architecture have chosen Wednesday, November 6, for their annual boat ride. They have chartered the steamboat Horton and will spend a part of the day at some point on the lake shore.

With freshmen from foreign lands as their principal guests, the members of the Cosmopolitan Club gave their first smoker of the year last Saturday night. The principal object of the meeting was to give the new men a chance to get acquainted with one another and with their hosts. The history and purposes of the club and of the worldwide organization of which it is a part were explained in short talks by Professor F. A. Barnes, J. C. Faure, and M. A. Gonzalez, the president of the club.

Preliminaries for the annual triangular intercollegiate debate are in progress. Each of the three universities submits two questions, and from the six questions submitted, one is chosen by ballot for the disputation. Two questions have been decided upon by the Cornell Debate Council for submission. They relate respectively to old age pensions and the initiative and referendum. A committee is now putting the questions into proper form for submission to Columbia and Pennsylvania.

Alexander Meiklejohn, Ph.D., '97, was inaugurated last week as president of Amherst College. Cornell University was represented at the ceremony by Professor W. F. Willcox and Professor J. R. Creighton.

For presentation at the Lyceum this winter, the Deutscher Verein has chosen a modern comedy, "Pension Schoeller." The final trials for places in the cast were held early this week.

The University Preacher last Sunday was the Rev. Herbert Hensley Henson, the canon of Westminster Abbey and rector of St. Margaret's, who is a well known author and lecturer. He is making a three months tour of Canada and the United States. While he was in Ithaca he was the guest of Dr. Andrew D. White.

Aleph Samach, the junior society, has announced the following membership from the class of 1914: Taylor James Chamberlain, Salt Lake City; Philip Joseph Coffey, jr., Long Island City; Thomas Bouldin Crews, jr., St. Louis; William Howard Fritz, jr., Berwyn, Pa.; Harold Camerden Halsted, Brooklyn; Edward Albert Hill, Short Hills, N. J.; Emerson Hinchliff, Rockford, Ill.; Walter Henry Kobusch, St. Louis; Samuel Sturgis Lawler, Minneapolis; John James Munns, Pittsburgh; Harry Ernest Schirrick, Kingston; Brower Cox Spransy, Washington, D. C.; Howard Kelly Walter, Sharpsburg, Pa.; George Morrison Williamson, Brooklyn.

The 1912 crop of "stuntsters" is large. Both the Masque and the Savage Club have many applicants for admission to membership. The two committees on admission have given many evenings to hearing the applicants show what they can do in the way of entertainment.

The extension department of the College of Agriculture has planned two school trains for this fall, one to run over the Harlem division and the other over the Auburn division of the New York Central. The latter train will begin its run October 28.

Nobody took the examinations this fall for the Padgham Scholarship, and it will be awarded to some student in mechanical engineering who received his preparatory education wholly or in part in Syracuse.

The intercollegiate cross-country race will be held November 16.

Director Bailey left Ithaca last Saturday for Alberta, Canada, to attend the National Dry Farming Congress as the personal representative of President Taft. He expected to be absent about ten days.

Annuals to be Associated

A Single Board of Editors for "Cornellian" and "Class Book"

The editorial boards of the Class Book and the Cornellian have formulated a plan for merging the two boards into one body which shall publish both annuals hereafter. The scheme was presented to the junior and sophomore classes for their ratification at a joint meeting early this week, and steps are now being taken to incorporate the new board.

Under the new scheme, the men who are elected to the Cornellian board at the end of the sophomore year will assume membership in the Class Book board at the conclusion of their junior year. Herebefore the boards have been elected separately. The new plan calls for an open competition in the sophomore year. In May each year, the five men who stand highest in the competition will be named by the board then in office and the class will be asked to elect three of these men to the editorial board for the following year. After their election to the board the men will enter another competition from which the future editor-in-chief of the two annuals will be picked. This man will be editor-in-chief of the Cornellian in his junior year and editor-in-chief of the Class Book in his senior year. The two other members of the editorial staff will act as associate editors during their junior and senior years, the juniors being in charge of the Cornellian and the seniors being in charge of the Class Book. The business manager and artistic editor will be chosen by competition as is done now.

The present editorial staff which has been elected to publish the 1913 Class Book and the elected staff of the Cornellian will publish their respective books this year and the new law will go into effect with the incoming boards. A competition will be started soon for the 1914 Class Book and the 1915 Cornellian.

A down-town office has been fitted up at 241 East State Street for the editors of the University annuals.

These two annuals are among the last of the undergraduate activities to become beneficiaries (or victims, just as you choose) of the modern spirit of competition and efficiency that has taken hold at Cornell. About everything is run by competition nowadays. Unless a man is an athlete or a student and has his career all charted up to his senior singing he goes into some competition. There are competitions for freshmen, competitions for sophomores who were left out of the freshman competitions, and competitions for juniors who made good in the sophomore competitions and are seeking higher and more concentrated honors, such as editorships-in-chief. This process governs the selection of athletic managers, editors and business managers of publications, stage managers, property managers and managers of the Student Laundry.

A lot of Cornell men (and women, too) have been editors of the Cornellian, for that annual has been published ever since 1868-69, which was the Year One. The spelling of its name has varied, and it has not been continuously under the same auspices. At first it was "published by the secret societies," but in 1883 the junior class took it over and has elected the editorial board ever since. Among the editors have been Julius Chambers, John DeWitt Warner, Frank H. Hiscock, Theodore Stanton, Walter C. Kerr, Ira A. Place, George Shiras 3d, H. C. Chatfield-Taylor and Governor John A. Dix. It will be interesting for the future historian to note whether the competitive system gives the Cornellian a better grade of editors.

The first Class Book was published by the class of 1897, although there are several classes that will dispute that statement. But although '91 and '93, and perhaps some others, published "souvenir books" of class portraits, and '95 got out a book of class statistics, the present series was really begun in 1897. The first editor-in-chief was J. Kenneth Fraser. Every class since '97 has published a similar book in its senior year. The volumes have been getting thicker and thicker, and the 1912 Class Book was very thick indeed.

Custom has given each of these annuals a board of eight or ten persons, but two or three of the board have generally done most of the work. With only three editors and a business manager to constitute the board, the responsibility (and the reward, too, probably) will require less division.

The Canadian government has just issued the second preliminary report on the clay and shale deposits of the western provinces of Canada. The report was prepared by Professor Heinrich Ries of the department of geology and Joseph Keele, a representative of the Canadian government. Professor Ries was appointed head of a commission to investigate the clay resources of the entire Dominion four years ago. This is the second of a series of reports which give the results of the investigation.

Next Sunday the Rev. William Pierson Merrill, pastor of the Brick Presbyterian Church, New York City, will preach in Sage Chapel.

The Fraser Scholarships

The members of the senior class in the College of Law last week elected the holders of the two Fraser Scholarships for the present year. The first scholarship, of the value of $100, was awarded to Harold James Tillou, of Buffalo, and the second, which is worth $50, was given by the class to Fred Dobmeier, also of Buffalo.

These scholarships were founded a year ago by William Metcalf, jr., of Pittsburgh, a graduate of the law school, in memory of Alexander Hugh Ross Fraser, late librarian of the college. By the terms of the gift, they are awarded at the beginning of the senior year, to students who have successfully completed the curriculum of the preceding years. The holder of the Boardman Scholarship is not eligible, and no student is eligible whose law course has not been taken entirely in Cornell University. They are awarded to deserving students of superior scholarship. The professors of law submit to the class a list of the seniors deemed eligible by reason of high scholastic standing. The class then awards the scholarships by ballot. It is expected to take into account the character of the men, not excluding interest and participation in undergraduate enterprises.

Besides Tillou and Dobmeier, the following men were named in the list submitted to the class by the Faculty: Frank L. Dolfini, Winterton; Levi Ginsburg, Elmira; Leslie H. Groser, Brooklyn; John A. Kelly, Ithaca; Leslie Reid, Schenectady; Edward Morgan St. John, Ithaca; Samuel D. Scudder, jr., Kingston; William Walzer, Brooklyn.

Elections to Tau Beta Pi

The Cornell chapter of Tau Beta Pi has announced the election of fifteen seniors and one junior to membership. Members of this society are chosen from the colleges of architecture, civil engineering and mechanical engineering and the department of chemistry. Students taking the special course in chemistry have been included among the eligibles because that course is purely technical, although the department is a part of the College of Arts and Sciences.

The junior who was chosen is Stanley Bruce Elwell, of the College of Architecture, who comes from Cambridge, Mass. He is the man of all the juniors eligible to the society who has maintained the highest scholastic standing up to the beginning of his junior year.

Following are the names of the seniors elected:

College of Architecture: William Howard Smith, Easthampton, Mass.

Department of Chemistry: Herman Carlisle Kenny, Wakefield, Mass.

College of Civil Engineering: John Albert Boshard, Provo, Utah; Meyer Hofstadter, Brooklyn; Regnar Theron Kidde, Detroit, Mich.; Roberts John Mann, Oklahoma City; Stephen Hubble Smith, Utica.

College of Mechanical Engineering: Benjamin Franklin Bardo, Bethlehem, Pa.; Arthur Raymond Blood, Warren, Pa.; Richard Alexander Dittmar, Falls City, Neb.; Parr Hooper, Baltimore, Md.; Gorham Maltbie Lynes, Santa Barbara, Cal.; George Plummer McNear, jr., Petaluma, Cal.; Frederic Bazine Wiperman, Logansport, Ind.; Oliver Adelbert Wood, Gardner, Mass.

The list of eligible men, that is, the men whose averages for the three years in the University have been over 80 per cent and who have ranked among the first eight of the class, was as large as usual.

May Omit Music Festival

It is reported that some members of the committee which has charge of the Music Festivals are averse to holding any more of the festivals in Sage Chapel. The committee is composed of members of the Board of Trustees and the Faculty. The objections to using the Chapel for such a purpose are well known. The building is too small, the seating arrangements are not conducive to comfort, and many persons dislike to see the Chapel used, even reverently, for secular purposes. It has been reported that a Festival will not be held again until there is a suitable auditorium on the campus.

The new auditorium of the College of Agriculture will seat more than 2,000 persons, and will be a much better place than the Chapel for these Festivals, but it is not likely to be completed until next summer. The Festival is usually held in the latter part of April or early in May. There has been a scarcity of labor in Ithaca for several months. Work on the auditorium has been so delayed that the contractors now set the first of April as the earliest possible date for its completion.

No action has been taken with regard to a Music Festival for next spring, but there is a possibility that it will be omitted.

The Alumni Meeting

The general meeting of Cornell alumni which is to be held at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York on Saturday, November 16, is to be a regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Associate Alumni. The by-laws of that association provide that the directors shall meet regularly in November and March of each year. The directors decided to make the meeting a public one. They plan to have presented to them, and to the representatives of alumni clubs who may be present, statements of the work being done by the Cornellian Council, the Association of Class Secretaries and other such organizations.

2 to 5 p. m.—Open discussion by representatives of alumni clubs and other alumni who wish to participate.

The following notice has been received by the NEWS for publication: "The Cornell Club of New England believe that the meeting of the Associate Alumni called for the sixteenth of November in New York City is a step in the right direction. The club will be represented at that meeting." The notice is signed by Edward J. Savage, president.

Sibley's Registration

Director Smith Gives Two Reasons Why the College Is Numerically Smaller

Director Smith of Sibley College last week expressed the opinion that the falling off in the registration in Sibley was due to a decrease in the amount of engineering work in New York State during the last three or four years, together with stricter requirements for entrance to Sibley.

"For the past few years," he said, "the engineers of New York State have let their sons take up agriculture when they would not have done it had engineering work been more active. The present, however, is a time of increased engineering activity, even for the eve of a presidential election." A decrease in the number of students had been expected, he said. He has a chart in his office which shows graphically the changes in enrollment from year to year.

"This chart shows that the growth of Sibley for a group of years, 1886-94, was steadily upward," said Director Smith. "In 1894 new entrance requirements were made, and admission to the college became more difficult. Consequently the line at this point begins a downward curve. It took about four years for it to regain its former height, but once there it continued upward, now more steeply, until 1904. In this year it was found advisable to make the entrance requirements still more strict. The curve loses some of its steepness at this point, but does not drop back. It reached its highest point in 1909, when there were nearly 1,200 undergraduates in the college. We again raised our standard of entrance requirements, and enforced them to the letter. Since that time our registration has been falling off. The case is almost exactly analogous to the situation in 1894.

"Then, too, certain professors who made a study of statistics bearing upon this question assert that the United States has now reached a point where all men who desire higher technical education can be accommodated. Up to the present this has not been the case—hence the steady and continued growth of our technical schools.

"An outside cause which has affected our registration is the development of the technical departments of state universities in the west, such as Michigan, Illinois, and Wisconsin. It is but natural that the men of the west should now go to these colleges rather than come east. So it is in other sections of the country—they are developing their own technical schools and we are losing the men.

"As to the growth of the other colleges, I believe it but proper that we should even up in size as fast as possible. It has been said that in some parts of the country when the word 'Cornell' is spoken, engineering is immediately thought of. I do not think that this should be the case. One college should not make the university. Furthermore, it is impossible for a college to grow fast without sacrificing some of its internal efficiency. There should be a balance among all of the colleges which constitute a university. This process of equalizing is now going on in Cornell through the very desirable growth of the other colleges."

Advisers of Freshmen Commended

Editor of the Cornell Alumni News:

Through you I wish to commend most strongly the spirit shown by the upper-classmen acting on the Freshman Advisory Committee, as mentioned in the NEWS of October 16. My sincere compliments to Chairman Zang and his committee. The biggest thing on earth is humanity and the most paying thing is to help a fellow human.

It is tough the first year in the University. A world rover as I have been, I was never homesick but once—that first six weeks in the fall of '74 when a freshman. And I didn't know what ailed me until, wandering restlessly about on a Sabbath afternoon, a girl of four gave me a little flower and insisted I fasten it in my coat, for "I picked it for you." That brought tears to my eyes. I have searched for that house often, and not so long ago at the last. Let us be brothers all,—and especially elder brothers. I want to be a democrat in religion, at least. What is better for a senior than to take a freshman by the hand and give him a lift? "The world is dying for sympathy" was the slogan of a good man I knew. The lines of Foss are in point:

There are hermit souls that live withdrawn

In the place of their self-content;

There are souls like stars, that live apart

In a fellowless firmament;

There are pioneer souls, that blaze their paths

Where the highway never ran;

But let me live by the side of the road

And be a friend to man.

WILLARD BEAHAN '78.

Cleveland, October 20.

Judge Frank H. Hiscock '75

Among the Cornell men nominated for high office this fall is Judge Frank H. Hiscock '75, Republican candidate for one of the two vacancies in the New York Court of Appeals.

Under the influence of the Bar, supported by a large part of the press of the state, it has been the practice of the Republican and Democratic parties for many years, when two vacancies existed in the highest court of the state, to unite in electing one judge from each party, thus removing the offices from politics and preserving a non-partisan membership of the court. This year, although the Republicans offered to follow this course and take as their candidates Judge Hiscock and a Democrat, the Democrats refused to follow the precedents of former years and selected two candidates from their own party. Many independent newspapers and some influential Democratic papers are condemning this action and advising voters, independent of political affiliations, to support Judge Hiscock and his running mate, Judge Chase, on the ground of their long judicial experience and demonstrated fitness. While elected and for many years serving as Justices of the Supreme Court, both these men have now served in the Court of Appeals for several years under special assignments, first by Governor Higgins and subsequently by Governor Dix.

Judge Hiscock in the course of a busy life has given a great deal of time to service on the University Board of Trustees. For many years he was president of the Cornell Association of Central New York. In 1889 he was elected an alumni trustee of the University and in 1901 he was elected a trustee by the board itself and still is serving. Among the trustees Judge Hiscock has acquired a reputation for tact and good judgment, and this has led to his appointment on several committees which have had to solve perplexities resulting from conflicting claims and interests in the University. Last year he was a member of the committee appointed to formulate a code of government for the state colleges. Of his work at that time ex-President White recently said in a public address:

"I should not omit here one recent and very important step in what may be called the constitutional program of Cornell. Several departments—once weak but now strong—and notably the Agricultural College, had outgrown their earlier limitations. After careful discussion it was resolved that the College of Agriculture should be given the largest measure of self-government possible under the Charter of the University. This has now been done and the results thus far are most encouraging. I cannot forbear informing you that the man who did by far the most in shaping this new legislation, making it sane, sound and strong, was our friend Judge Hiscock."

WIDE ATTENTION has been attracted by the novelty of the general alumni meeting to be held in New York on the 16th of November. The program, published in this issue of the NEWS, indicates that there will be an opportunity at that time for Cornellians to get full information about their own various activities and about the condition of the University, and to talk things over thoroughly. We are scattered all over the country, we alumni, and our opportunities for getting together and exchanging information are too few. We don't always pull together, because sometimes we are not all equally well informed about matters that interest us, and we form different opinions. Differences of opinion are often reconciled when the parties get together and review the facts. What we call alumni opinion has sometimes, in the case of Cornell, been ineffective because a part of it was based on scanty or inaccurate information about facts. A clearing-house of information on Cornell matters will be useful. Discussion at a conference such as is now proposed will be more effective than discussion in a printed periodical because the man who wants to know can ask questions right on the spot.

THE MEETING may do good in serving to call the attention of alumni more closely to what their organizations, especially the Cornellian Council, are doing. If you analyze any alumni organization you will find that if it has any vital purpose that purpose is to be of service to the University. The Cornellian Council, which is raising the Alumni Fund, goes at its purpose more directly, perhaps, than any of its fellow organizations. Its object is to enable the average Cornellian to express his interest in his alma mater in the most serviceable way. Some alumni are able to found scholarships or to give buildings to the University. Most of us are not so fortunate. What the Cornellian Council needs at present is wide advertisement of its purpose and of the fact that it is already of substantial service to the University.

The Man Who Gives $1

During the summer I received from the Cornellian Council a leaflet which gave me food for thought. This leaflet contained a statement of the number of alumni contributing to the "Alumni Fund," and the number contributing each of the various sums, which ranged from $1 to $500 per year.

What struck me most forcibly was that there were 33 persons giving but $1 per year. Just revolve that in your mind for a short time. They cannot be giving that amount because they are penurious. It is easy enough not to contribute, as many of our alumni must know. Why are they giving this mite? For the simple reason that they cannot give more, and, strange as it may seem, are probably pinching themselves in some small way to give what they do. I am convinced that it is a great deal harder for these 33 persons to give $1 than it would be for most of us to give $5 or even $10.

The same leaflet tells me that there are 10,000 alumni who have not yet contributed—10,000 who don't even give $1 per year. Even that would be an appreciable help.

Think a moment. Have you ever repaid Cornell for what she did for you? Perhaps you did not make it easy for her to do anything for you. You know that the University is facing a deficit, and that a man's tuition comes nowhere near paying for his education. You know that the cost of living has gone up, and that it is harder for poor men, and I sometimes think the best men, to get through. Yet the remedy which has been suggested is to raise the tuition fees!

I have taught in the University as well as studied there, and I know that it is increasingly hard for members of the Faculty to make both ends meet, that it is harder to keep good instructors, and that were it not for the fact that some men are willing to allow fine opportunities to pass by for the sake of the colleges, Cornell would be in a very bad position.

Finally, do we not owe something to the men who are going to Cornell in the future? Can we not show something more than the spirit of grab? If the Cornell of the future is to keep the traditions of the past, we must give as much as we are able.

I am sure that the 10,000 who have not given can average at least half as much as the 2177 who are giving $22,000. If they did the fund would be over $70,000 per year, no mean sum in itself, and one that would attract more money, as well as be a great help to the University.

Be as big a sport as the man who gives $1 and you will get full satisfaction from it. Give $1 or $100, as much as you can afford, and some day, when you go back to reunion, and the seniors up in front of Goldwin Smith (We sat on the steps of Boardman) are singing the Alumni Song, you will feel more than repaid for all you have given.

The Eleven Still Progressing

It is possible to find encouragement in the Pennsylvania State-Cornell football game of last Saturday, although the score was 29 to 6 in favor of the visitors. For one thing, the Cornell eleven showed more fight than in previous games. Also, the line did better. There were real holes for the Cornell backs to get through, and the State College backs were nailed for a loss by a Cornell tackle or end time after time. If the visitors had had a less versatile attack or had been less skilled in the use of the forward pass the comparatively crude but determined defence of Cornell would have stopped them oftener than it did. Another improvement was shown in the absence of any penalty imposed upon Cornell. State was penalized twice for a total of ten yards.

For a team that has been giving its time to practice mostly in elementary things, the Cornell eleven showed a good deal of promise. Coach Hollenback brought to Ithaca a team fully developed for this early in the season. The game showed that Cornell is learning some things, and it revealed some other things that have yet to be learned. One glaring weakness was shown when Berryman, State's right halfback, got through the whole Cornell team for a run of eighty-five yards. No amount of coaching can prevent a thing like that if one or two of the team are taking it easy and trusting that somebody else will get the runner. As this score came soon after Cornell's touchdown it looked as if some members of the team had relaxed their vigilance as soon as they were ahead. But that was the only time during the game when such an accusation could be made. From then on the team, although inferior in skill, was not lacking in strength or determination.

Cornell players have made great improvement in tackling this season, but against so agile a runner as Quarterback Miller, the tackling Saturday showed room for further improvement. State's backs, especially Miller, gained many yards in their run-backs of punts and kick-offs. In this respect, however, the work of some of the Cornell players, especially O'Hearn and Lahr, deserves praise. They were down fast under kicks and were sure tacklers.

The one Cornell weakness which perhaps gave State the most points was the inability of the backs to break up the forward pass. Two of the visitors' touchdowns resulted directly from short passes over the goal line after long passes had brought them close to the goal.

Freshmen Used as a Scrub

During the week the attendance of spectators at the practice on Alumni Field was restricted to those who had business there. To that extent the practice was secret. The feature of the week was the use of the freshmen in scrimmages against the varsity on the three days when scrimmages were held—Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. The coaches had two purposes in using the first-year men. The 1916 squad is husky and contains some pretty good players, so that they are able to give the varsity men good practice. Then, too, using them for the scrub makes it possible to use the varsity second string men in the varsity line-up, which gives the substitutes better practice than if they were used continuously as a scrub team.

Several changes were made in the seating at the training tables. The place at the first table left vacant by E. S. Bates, who had to give up the game, was taken by Fritz. Smith and Rees were moved from the third table to the second, Bame and Zeller from the fourth to the third, and Andrews and McKenna, two new candidates, were seated at the fourth table.

The number of injuries is still a serious handicap, and the number was not lessened by the Penn State game. O'Connor, Champaign and O'Hearn left that game disabled; Fritz, Weidenthal, Munns, Eyrich and Lahr received injuries of various sorts. Captain Butler is just recovering from a hurt which had kept him out of the play for several weeks. Williamson is not yet recovered from his injuries. R. B. Whyte is on the injured list yet, but J. S. Whyte played for a few minutes last Saturday.

Penn State 29; Cornell, 6

Cornell defended the west goal, and State kicked off. On the return punt Cornell gained an advantage by recovering the ball out of bounds at State's 35-yard line. This initial advantage was retained until Cornell had made a touchdown, but that score was not obtained till toward the close of the first period. On the first play Cornell lost five yards, but on the next O'Connor went through center to State's 18-yard line. State was offside and was penalized five yards. Fritz gained three, but on the 10-yard line there was a fumble and State got the ball. They rushed the ball fifteen yards, gained five on an exchange of punts, and rushed to midfield. Then O'Hearn turned an exchange of punts to Cornell's advantage by tackling Miller on State's 20-yard line. State failed to gain and punted and Taber ran the ball back thirty-five yards to State's 15-yard line. O'Connor was hurt and his place was taken by Smith, who caught a forward pass almost under the goal, and Taber on the next play carried the ball over. Champaign missed goal. Score, Cornell 6, State 0.

State kicked off again and got the better of a punting contest, and when the first period ended they had the ball on Cornell's 40-yard line. From there, with the help of a long forward pass, they carried the ball to Cornell's 8-yard line, where they were stopped, and Mauthe kicked a field goal. Score, Cornell 6, State 3. The next play put State ahead. Berryman caught the kick-off on the 15-yard line and got through the whole Cornell team for a run of eighty-five yards and a touchdown. Mauthe kicked goal. Score, State 10, Cornell 6. Cornell kicked off and lost fifteen yards on the return, but Taber got through center for over thirty yards and Eyrich took a forward pass to State's 25-yard line, but further advance was stopped and Fritz failed at a field goal. Owing to a poor pass to Taber soon afterward, State got the ball on downs at Cornell's 45-yard line, but a good tackle by O'Hearn forced them to punt and the ball went over the line for a touchback. Champaign was injured and left the game. State got the ball on a fumble, and just as the period closed was marching toward the goal when Smith intercepted a forward pass.

The third period was all in favor of State College. On a fake play Miller rounded Cornell's left end for thirty yards and a forward pass to Very gained twenty-five more. Cornell held on the two-yard line for four downs, but then a forward pass over the goal line gave State another touchdown. Mauthe missed goal. Score, State 16, Cornell 6. In this period a strong west wind may have been of some help to the visitors, for they had decidedly the better of the punting and were able to make two more attacks on the Cornell goal, the second of which resulted in another touchdown and goal, making the score State 23, Cornell 6.

Trainer was substituted for Taber and Rees for Eyrych in the fourth period, and Hill and J. S. Whyte had gone in for Granbery Miller and McCutcheon. Trainer began throwing forward passes. One of them went to State, who retaliated with a long pass which put Cornell once more on the defensive, and again a pass was shot over Cornell's goal for a touchdown. This made the score 29 to 6. In the last few minutes of play Cornell did nothing but try forward passes, and by this means the team marched fifty yards to State's 15-yard line, but the eighth pass of the series went over the goal line for a touchback. State had the ball in midfield when the game ended.

"Right Wing's" Comment

The Evening Sun of New York published the following comment on the football situation at Ithaca last week. The article was written by "Right Wing" after he saw the game between New York University and Cornell:

Familiar as I have been with the situation at Ithaca, I was surprised to find complications that I had supposed had been disposed of. What I did find was a head coach determined to teach football from the ground up at whatever cost—football as it is understood by those who swing around the circle and get into touch with the broad gridiron point of view—a pretty solid opinion back of him; a willingness on the part of the older Cornell men to go through the mill in the hope of satisfying results in the future; the first appearance of fight in certain of the men themselves; the beginnings of a realization that the game is worthless unless founded upon rock bottom principles, and a very general feeling that the Cornelian and White is at last on the right track.

To be perfectly frank with my Cornell friends, I did not find a football "atmosphere" that enveloped one upon arrival as it does in other university centers; I did not find that some of the old troubles about hours of practice had disappeared, nor did I find that the men had had the opportunity to learn much of one another in a football way. In a word, one of the new coach's most serious difficulties lies in the foundation of what for lack of a better term I shall call a "football family." Much of the lack of a football spirit—the spirit that believes in itself as, one might say, almost a savage, persistent, unbeatable force—was remedied to some extent by a few rallies of certain members of the team against the New Yorkers. At Ithaca the difficulty lies not so much in projecting the spirit of the stands to the teams as in projecting the spirit of the team to the stands, provided that the team has developed that spirit. In the old days Cornellians have stood shouting in their seats, splendidly backing an eleven that did not know the foundations of the game and was thus nothing more than a thing of plays and surface polish, the shouters oversatisfied with having been extremely loyal. There seems to be the shadow of a change and it has come from the field of play itself.

With all its faults, the team that played last Saturday did many novel and encouraging things. In the first place the men grouped themselves around their injured captain, Butler, before the game, and in the center of this little huddle of red jerseys the captain proceeded to lay down the law and to exhort his men as I have never seen it done in the past. Again, there was a small but satisfying beginning in the matter of headwork—just orthodox, simple headwork—that so often has been lacking in the big game at Philadelphia. I find it, indeed, a ticklish matter to dole out praise to this Cornell eleven, for the praise is for things that in other quarters would be taken as a matter of course at this stage of the season. The Ithacans have had so far to go, so much to learn, so much to execute as habit when hitherto there has been strictly speaking no "habit of football" at Cornell, that there must be a gradual readjustment of the point of view.

I have said that so far as I can learn graduates and undergraduates alike are strong in the support of Dr. Sharpe and his system and in support of his aides, Dan Reed and Ray VanOrman, two men of sound football knowledge, long experience and honorable record, but the support needs welding, needs the "punch" that the head coach is asking the team itself to develop. The men who play on the squad have learned that football is in many ways a serious matter, that surface development will never win a game against Pennsylvania no matter how many defects the Quakers may sustain earlier in the season; have learned that the way to victory is toilsome. And of one thing I feel certain—that if the Cornellians are defeated on Franklin Field this year the defeated team will be made up of sound football players, whatever their physical shortcomings or natural faults. Dr. Sharpe has been laboring at Ithaca to teach the men there not alone what to do, but also why it should be done in just that way.

Where the Freshmen Come From

In a game with the Ithaca High School Saturday, the freshman eleven rolled up a score of 53 to 0. The present freshman squad is faster than the 1915 squad was, and that bunch of freshmen had a very good record, including a defeat of the Pennsylvania freshmen. It may interest some readers to know where the 1916 players come from. Here is the list:
