President Corson: No Amnesty For Carpenter Hall Protesters

DISCUSSING THE ISSUES: President Dale R. Corson follows Safety Division director Lowell T. George out of Carpenter Hall early Friday morning after speaking with the group that occupied the building.

University President Dale R. Corson said yesterday that there will be no amnesty for persons who occupied Carpenter Hall last week and that he expects a substantial number of those occupiers to be charged with violations of University regulations or civil law, or both.

Corson made these remarks at an 11 a.m. news conference in the Day Hall Board Room. The session was called to review the Carpenter Hall sit-in and to respond to queries from the news media.

Corson said that one of the principles he had followed from the beginning of the Carpenter Hall takeover was that there would be no amnesty. He reported that so far 13 temporary suspension letters have gone out from the judicial administrator and that more are in process. In addition, seven show cause orders have been signed by State Supreme Court Justice Frederick B. Bryant and that more are being prepared.

A "substantial" number of people have been identified so far, Corson said. Reportedly, some 100 people have come forward to date to aid the Safety Division in identification.

In terms of off-campus prosecution, Corson said the University had taken the "civil route in every instance." However, he did not rule out the possibility that criminal actions might be taken in the future. He said he read in a flyer distributed by the occupiers of the Carpenter library that they said they had taken documents from Carpenter.

In response to questions about why efforts were not made to evict the demonstrators immediately after they occupied the building and to prevent them from having free access to the library through the windows, Corson said his decision to use minimal force and the size of the Safety Division mitigated against such action.

Corson, who was out of town last Wednesday, when the occupation began, said "I didn't want anyone hurt" and after consultation with Provost Robert A. Plane, Corson said he personally made the decision not to try to evict the demonstrators on Wednesday afternoon.

Cornell's Safety Division does not have enough men "to stand shoulder to shoulder" around Carpenter Hall, Corson said, and therefore could not seal off the building completely. He said he would always try to do everything possible to deal with on-campus problems with the University's own force and not call on outside law enforcement agencies.

At the outset of the news conference, Corson reiterated his comments on the several demands made by the demonstrators. He said the University is continuing its efforts to sell Cornell Aeronautical Laboratory (CAL) "at the earliest possible moment." Corson went on to say: "There is no secret, war related research on this campus." On ROTC, Corson stated that this matter has been dealt with by the faculty and University Senate and "the campus has decided that ROTC should be maintained." Corson referred the newsmen to a Monday statement by Trustee Jansen Noyes Jr. on the University's investment policy. (See story on this page.)

When asked why discussions between Carpenter Hall demonstrators and University officials broke down during the occupation, Corson noted that the University had made proposals to the group for discussion on the substance of issues, contingent on the occupants vacating the building. The demonstrators refused to accept that condition.

Corson made it clear that he had the authority to invoke temporary suspensions under the University's

University Votes Anti-Management In Proxy Ballots

Votes against the management of two corporations on issues involving ecology and pollution were cast Monday by Cornell.

The University also cast votes opposing management of a third company in an issue calling for the disclosure of the firm's involvement and employment policies in South Africa and cast ballots against a fourth corporation in a matter involving recommendations to provide an orderly transition to civilian oriented production.

The University's decision on voting its proxies in the four corporate stockholder meetings was disclosed by Janson Noyes Jr., chairman of the Cornell Board of Trustees Investment Committee.

The University voted against management on proxies involving the Kennecott Copper Corp., International Telephone and Telegraph Inc. (ITT) and General Motors Corp. (GM). On a Ford Motor Co. proxy, the University expressed approval with one section of a proposal and disapproval with another.

The committee voted in favor of a proposal to require Kennecott Copper, in compliance with ecological laws and regulations, to EXIT MARCH: Carrying banners and chanting slogans, the protesters leave Carpenter Monday afternoon and begin a march across campus to gain support for their demands.

'Early Finish' Commencement Set for May 26

Cornell's 104th Commencement exercises are set for Friday, May 26, one of the earliest Commencement dates in the history of the University. The May 26 Commencement was brought about by the "early-start" calendar adopted by Cornell for the 1971-72 year.

The academic procession will begin forming on the Arts Quadrangle at 9:40 a.m. The faculty will march as a body behind the students from the respective schools and colleges, with each degree group led by student marshals. The cap and gown will be optional attire for students for the second straight year. Last year, about two-thirds of the 2,708 graduates chose to wear the traditional academic garb.

At 10:10 a.m., the procession, led by Blanchard L. Rideout, University marshal, will begin moving to Barton Hall for the 11 a.m. Commencement. As it passes the Olin Library terrace, the procession will be reviewed by University President Dale R. Corson, the Board of Trustees, other officials and guests.

All members of the faculty and the board will sit on the main platform in Barton Hall.

Following a musical prelude, Morris G. Bishop Kappa Alpha Professor of Romance Literature, emeritus, will deliver brief remarks of introduction and welcome. Corson will then deliver the Commencement address. After another musical number, he will confer approximately 3,150 degrees — 2,900 bachelors' and some 450 master's and doctoral degrees.

In accordance with Cornell tradition, no honorary degrees will be awarded. Cornell has awarded only two honorary degrees in its history, both in 1886. They went to Andrew Dickson White, Cornell's first president, and David Starr Jordan, an alumnus who became the first president of Stanford University.

Bachelor's degrees will be awarded in the same manner they were last year. The deans will present their degree candidates to the president and as each group is presented it will rise and remain standing until all undergraduates have been presented. At that time, the president will award all of the bachelor's degrees simultaneously by the formal language provided. Prior to last year, the formal language was repeated as the various schools and colleges were presented.

Master's degrees will be conferred in the same manner.

Doctoral candidates will wear their hoods in the procession and will be called to the platform by name and greeted by the dean and the president.

Music for Commencement will be provided by the Cornell Wind Ensemble, directed by Marice W. Stith, and the Cornell Glee Club, directed by Thomas A. Sokol.

In addition to Commencement ceremonies on May 26, commissioning exercises for 69 graduating members of the Cornell Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) will be held in Alice Statler Auditorium at 8 a.m. The commissioning speech will be given by Lt. Gen. Robert C. Taber, principal deputy to the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower and Reserve Affairs.

On May 31, Corson will confer 185 degrees in New York City at Commencement exercises for graduates of the Cornell Medical College, the Cornell Graduate School of Medical Sciences and the Cornell University-New York Hospital School of Nursing.

New Cornell Students To Explore Wilderness In Orientation Program

Bounty Waters Canoe Area in northern Minnesota has no buses or mass transportation going to it. Truly a wilderness location, it will be the destination point of a small group of new Cornell students this summer. It will be one of 20 such groups heading for various wilderness areas in North America and trying, at the same time, to get to know each other.

The wilderness experience program is one designed by David B. Henderson, assistant dean of students, to help freshmen and new transfer students to know themselves more intimately, to become close to some of their classmates and to eliminate feelings of alienation students often experience when they first arrive at Cornell.

"We want to have for the new student an extended friendship network before he even gets here ... so in that first part of school, when many students feel quite alone ... he will have 10 to 12 other friends to go to," Henderson explained.

Each trip will last about 10 days and will be led by an expert guide and an assistant.

The expeditions will go "anyplace in North America the guide wishes to go to or the guide is competent to lead," Henderson said. "A student need only show up with the clothes on his back and we can outfit him with everything he needs from sleeping bag, backpack, tent ... at a rather minimal fee.

"We're not looking for people who have a lot of outdoor experience in terms of those who will come," he said. Basic outdoor skills, outdoor cooking and first aid will be taught at the beginning of each expedition.

Guides and their assistants will be carefully chosen from faculty, staff and student volunteers. Those who volunteer to lead a group are asked to design the trip they want to take, to estimate the costs and to fully explain their qualifications for leading a group into a wilderness area.

Most of the trips will take place in August. Arrangements will be made so that the student may drop off his belongings at Cornell before he goes on the wilderness expedition.

When they return, Henderson said, "we will have a student in a little better physical condition with new skills and competency both as a person and as an outdoors person, as well as a more sophisticated appreciation for his environment."

A large number of qualified undergraduates have signed up to lead various proposed trips, said Henderson, adding that he hoped more faculty and staff members would volunteer to be guides.

"Here's a chance for some faculty or staff member to really influence the lives of these incoming students," he said.

"If a faculty member wants to go but doesn't have many skills himself, we can provide him with an undergraduate expert," Henderson said. "We're interested in having someone along who can communicate the Cornell experience. ... It'll be a biased view, but it's a view."

After the guides are chosen, each will be asked to prepare a statement containing biographical information about himself, where he intends to take his group, why he is going there, what are the expected outcomes of the trip for the students and for himself and what are the expected costs.

'Who's Got His Own' Opens Tonight

BLACK FAMILY DRAMA — United Black Artists rehearse for the premiere of "Who's Got His Own," set for 8:30 p.m. today. From left are John Peak as Tim, Gwendolyn Nelson as the mother, Brackette Fay Williams as Clara and Deborah Peterson, Willie Mae Perry and Shirley Hairston as mourners and the chorus.

in a booklet which will serve as a catalog of the various trips being offered. The booklet will be mailed to the new students, each of whom may choose the trip of his choice and may sign up for it on a first come, first serve basis. Each expedition will consist of equal numbers of men and women and will cost between $25 and $100 from the designated point of departure.

"The whole experience will be carefully evaluated in terms of how people interact. ... We want to find out whether this experience is justifiable educationally," Henderson said.

Faculty and staff members who wish to volunteer as guides may pick up applications in the Office of the Dean of Students.

Unit on Status of Women Seeks Community Inputs

The problems of women faculty, staff and students at Cornell were discussed at an open meeting last week of the University's trustee committee on the status of women. About 50 members of the Cornell Community — including students, employees, spouses and members of the faculty — attended the meeting to discuss with the committee possible ideas for its agenda.

Patricia J. Carry, a trustee, presided. Speaking for the committee, she expressed gratitude for the candor of those at the meeting and she invited them, as well as other members of the community, to contribute additional ideas.

Other committee members present at the meeting were Desdemona P. Jacobs and Paul Olum. Jacob Sheinkman and committee chairman Constance E. Cook were absent.

Ramon E. Rivera, director of Affirmative Action, and Joycelyn Hart, assistant University ombudsman, were also present.

Suggestions for the committee should be directed to Mrs. Cook, Chairman, Trustee Committee on the Status of Women, Coy Glen Rd.

The next meeting of the committee is a working meeting scheduled for May 24 at Cornell.

Chronicle Summer Schedule

Next week's Cornell Chronicle (May 11) will be the last regular weekly edition for the academic year. The Chronicle will be published during the summer on May 25, June 1, June 8, July 6 and Aug. 10, and will resume its weekly schedule in the fall.

Single Charge to Combine Statutory Tuition and Fees

The Board of Trustees of the University voted in March to adopt a single charge combining both tuition and fees for students in the University's statutory units. The composite charges, effective at the close of the 1971-72 academic year, are as follows:

	Residents	Nonresidents
Agriculture and Life Sciences	$1,200	$1,800
Human Ecology	1,200	1,800
Industrial and Labor Relations	1,200	1,800
Veterinary Medicine	1,800	2,400
Graduate School (except Veterinary Medicine)	1,400	1,400
Graduate School (Veterinary Medicine)	1,800	1,800

Due to the increase in the tuition figure, scholar incentive awards for students in Cornell statutory divisions are expected to be larger for the 1972-73 academic year than for the current year, 1971-72. The awards are made based on the student's financial need, which is determined when initial application is made, and the cost of tuition at the student's college or university.

During the present academic year, scholar incentive awards were based on a tuition cost in the statutory units. For 1972-73, the awards will be figured on the composite charge.

Students in the statutory units need not take specific action to receive the increased awards, according to Sharon Herzel, senior accounting clerk in the Office of Scholarships and Financial Aid. Each summer, the state sends scholar incentive recipients a form to fill out for the upcoming year on which the recipient indicates the cost of his tuition. The State will automatically take this increase into account when making the student's award, she said.

In addition, the financial aid office has notified the state of tuition increases in both the statutory and endowed divisions of the University for 1972-73.

In Year's Final Meeting

Senate Backs PIRG Check-Off

The University Senate has recommended that the University assist the Central New York Public Interest Research Group (CNYPIRG) in collecting funds through a voluntary check-off system that would be included on the bill for student fees.

As proposed by the senate Tuesday night, the fees statement would include a line that could be voluntarily checked by a student, indicating if he wished to contribute $2, over and above the general fees, to CNYPIRG.

The senate chose this method of collection over another which would have required a student to negatively check the $2 contribution off the fees statement if he did not wish to pay it.

CNYPIRG is a non-profit group that will concern itself with research, analysis and public education on issues such as consumer protection, discrimination, environmental concerns, occupational health and safety, landlord-tenant relations and other matters that affect the welfare of people in central New York.

The senate recommendation contains a provision that CNYPIRG will reimburse the University for any costs resulting from the proposed method of collection.

At the senate meeting, Robert A. Plane, provost, and William D. Gurowitz, vice president for campus affairs, answered questions concerning the recent takeover of Carpenter Hall.

The senate approved legislation that established a procedure for approving any substantive change in the Campus Life budget involving more than $3,000 or affecting policy.

In other business, the senate authorized the president to appoint an interim judicial administrator to hold office until the first senate meeting in September. The present administrator's term expires July 31. A search and review committee recently established to propose candidates to the judicial administrator's position has not yet suggested any candidates for the job.

The senate also authorized the continuation of the present membership of the University's judicial boards and traffic boards until the first fall meeting of the senate, when new members will be appointed to these boards by the Committee on Committees.

The following meeting schedule for the senate for the 1972-73 academic year was approved:

Sept. 12, Oct. 3, Oct. 10, Oct. 24, Oct. 31, Nov. 14, Nov. 28, Dec. 5, Jan. 23, Feb. 6, Feb. 13, Feb. 20, Feb. 27, March 13, April 3, April 17, May 1.

Book by M.H. Abrams Wins '71 Lowell Prize

M.H. Abrams, the Frederick J. Whiton Professor of English at Cornell, has been awarded the 1971 James Russell Lowell Prize given annually by the Modern Language Association of America for the best book of the year on the criticism of literature.

A $1,000 cash prize goes with the honor given Abrams for his book "Natural Supernaturalism: Tradition and Revolution in Romantic Literature." Published last fall by W.W. Norton & Company, the book was also a candidate for a 1971 National Book Award in the category of arts and letters.

The judges for this year's James Russell Lowell Prize were Raymond Giraud, Adolf Klarmann and Earl Wasserman.

Unit to Propose Candidates For Judicial Advisor

A five-member search committee to propose candidates for the new position of a judicial advisor, who will consult with individuals who may be brought before the University's judicial administrator or judicial boards, has been named by Dale R. Corson, president of Cornell University.

Chairing the committee is Joseph B. Bugliari, associate professor of agricultural and business law, who was Cornell's first judicial administrator.

Others on the committee are: Peter F. Heywood, graduate student; Deepak K. Merchant, graduate student; Thomas R. Rogers, director of academic planning, and Tatnall W. Warner, undergraduate.

The position of judicial advisor was recently established by the University Senate. The advisor will provide, if requested, advice and assistance to defendants charged with violations of the Campus Code of Conduct. He may help a defendant secure counsel and may obtain from the judicial administrator a copy of charges placed against a defendant.

The Office of the Judicial Advisor will be independent and will be subject only to the powers of the senate to redefine the role of that office. The judicial adviser will be appointed for a two-year term by the president, with the approval of the senate.

The committee presently is soliciting suggestions for candidates. Committee members may be reached at the following phone numbers: Bugliari, 256-2194; Heywood, 256-4559; Merchant, 277-3568; Rogers, 256-5014 and Warner, 256-6911.

Named to New Post

Cage Coach Lace to Be Replaced

Jerry Lace, head basketball coach at Cornell the last four years, has been appointed an administrative assistant in the Department of Physical Education and Athletics, Athletic Director Jon T. Anderson announced last night. Anderson said the department will begin a search for a new coach immediately.

He said Lace will be working in the areas of administrative and business affairs. "Jerry will be a welcome addition in completing a number of important projects," he added.

Lace, 35, was a basketball aide and in charge of varsity soccer from 1963 to 1968. His four varsity court teams had a 29-69 record.

In the 1969-70 campaign the Big Red finished third in the ECAC Quaker City tournament, upsetting Villanova.

Lace served three years as freshman basketball coach and was varsity assistant for two seasons through 1968. His freshmen had their best mark in 1965-66 when they were 14-1.

Lace is a 1960 graduate of MacMurray College in Jacksonville, Ill., where he was a standout in both soccer and basketball, captaining the court team. In 1961 he was awarded his master's degree in education by Eastern Illinois University.

In 1961 and '62 he was head coach of soccer at MacMurray. The '62 team placed fourth in the National Collegiate college division tournament.

A native of Rockford, Ill., he served two years in the Army and was a member of the 86th Infantry Regiment stationed in Germany.

Arbor Day Celebrated

TREE-RIFIC! — A tree planting ceremony climaxes last Friday's commemoration at Cornell of the 100th anniversary of Arbor Day. The trees were bought with donations from faculty, staff and students.

Statement by Giap-Cabral Group

Editor:

Monday we ended our occupation of Carpenter Hall.

Cornell's involvement in the military destruction of people in Indochina and Africa continues.

We began our occupation because the silence and inaction on this campus had become unbearable.

We asked the university to negotiate with us, that is, to recognize the issues and act on them in some way. We still believe that this university could deal with the very specific questions of CAL, ROTC, and war-related research on campus but we also understand that the problem of university complicity goes much deeper. Scholarship and technology are paid for by those with power in this country. These same interests have the power to use what the university produces. These are the interests which the administration serves, not the interests of the university community which supports our demands. The university would not negotiate with us because it does not feel responsible to us, or to the people throughout the world which it is complicit in oppressing. The administration saw its relation to us as that of the powerful to the powerless, much as the U.S. government sees the people of those countries which it tries to manipulate. We challenge that, moved by the example of liberation struggles throughout the world which challenge the deaf and illegitimate authority of money and force. We will continue to act, discuss and organize, to press our demands.

Monday the Trustee Investment Committee voted several proxies against management to influence corporations to consider their social responsibility. This is a verbal gesture of response to our action. It is time they acted where they have direct power — in their own institution. If the administration and trustees are committed to social responsibility, and to an ending of the Indochina war, they can act immediately on the CAL, ROTC, and DoD research issues. For example, according to Franklin Long, a CAL director, military research at CAL could end in ten minutes, if the university was willing to accept the financial consequences.

We came to Carpenter Hall with 25 people. We marched away with almost 400. This is the foundation of a political movement on this campus. We need one. A community without a political movement is immobile, powerless to determine any of the conditions of its life. We are organizing into work brigades so that we can know the people we work with and decide what to do in a conscious and reasonable way. We welcome anyone who is looking for a way to work politically to join us, as soon as we set up our office. We have a picket around Day Hall from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. Join us or come and talk.

Psychology Statement

Editor:

In an open meeting of the faculty and students of the Department of Psychology the following statement was adopted:

We abhor the continuation of the Vietnam war, and see the Carpenter Hall takeover and ensuing demonstrations as a manifestation of deep revulsion for the war. The University must reanalyze institutional policies which relate to the war effort. Specifically: (1) the war related research at C.A.L. should be terminated, (2) the University should oppose Gulf Oil's support of colonial governments, and (3) the University's program of R.O.T.C. should be reexamined.

Moral values should take precedence over institutional requirements. We hope the University will not overlook the fact that the students who were involved in the takeover of Carpenter Hall are raising important moral questions. We recognize the restraint used by both the administration and students as being consistent with permitting a wider discussion of these important issues. We sympathize with these students and therefore encourage the administration to withdraw suspensions. We applaud the Board of Trustees decisions to vote against management in recent stock issues. We hope that this recognition of the social implications of our financial policy will be continued.

And Romance Studies

Editor:

In light of the recent events on the Cornell Campus, the faculty of the Department of Romance Studies unanimously urges the President of the University to take action:

- 1) that war-related research at CAL be terminated.
- 2) that Cornell University act in its investment policy in accordance with the

We Urge End To War-Related Research at CAL

recommendations of the Advisory Committee and vote against management whenever social and humane concerns so demand.

Medieval Fair Staged

A GRAND OLDE TYME — Students dressed in medieval garb paraded across campus Saturday afternoon as part of Risley Residential College's second annual Medieval Fair, which included music, folk dancing, games and several plays.

An Open Letter on the Occupation

(The following letter to President Corson was written and delivered to his office on Friday, April 28. The writer has since requested that it be published in the Chronicle.)

Dear President Corson:

I am writing to you as a concerned member of the Cornell Community to express my views concerning the Carpenter Hall occupation, in the hope that my letter will help you to make the best decisions in response to this event.

I have observed the occupation from time to time since it began. I entered the building to hear the dialogue between the students and the administration, and left shortly after you did. I mention this only in order to emphasize that I am a third party writing thoughtfully after due consideration.

I have been struck, as I hope you have too, by the responsibility of the demonstrators. They have not damaged property. They conduct their meetings in an orderly, disciplined fashion. They have not asked for amnesty. My observations indicate that they are prepared for arrest if that is the price they must pay for acting upon their convictions. In short, this is not the old type of occupation, and I therefore believe it deserves more than an old type of response.

Your public statements indicate that you are refusing to negotiate the demands because you feel the action violates the rights and civil liberties of the overall university community. Yet rights and civil liberties entail responsibilities as well, one of which (in the university) is supposed to be concern for the overall welfare of humanity. The occupiers have questioned whether these responsibilities are being met. I have not heard the Administration or the Board of Trustees address this question. I believe the question has been evaded.

At the bottom of all this is the fundamental question of whether or not man can develop humane social institutions. This question is intimately related to the basic issues of war, poverty, pollution, and population explosion, and I believe its answer will determine whether or not we are fit to survive. In their own way, the demonstrators are asking that a great international university face up to these questions. In responding, I beg you to weigh the importance of these questions as well, and to recall people in history who have taken high risks for worthy stakes. Thank you for reading my letter, and you have my best personal wishes.

Rumors Controlled

Editor:

The community should be made aware of the efforts of 72 individuals who volunteered their time to answer telephones in the Rumor Control Center during the time Carpenter Hall was occupied and renamed Giap-Cabral Hall. Seven others had volunteered their services but had not worked by 9 p.m. Monday, May 1, 1972, when the Center ceased operations. During the 127 hours of continuous operations from 1:45 p.m. Wednesday, April 26, 1972, these volunteers answered 1,657 telephone calls requesting information or seeking to verify rumors. As director of the Rumor Control Center, I would like to thank them, for their efforts. Without these students, staff and faculty it would have been impossible to provide the community with this service. The student volunteers particularly are the backbone of the center, and I especially appreciate their dedication and willingness to work at odd hours. Thank you.

Regulations for the Maintenance of Public Order and that he had done so in an attempt to restore public order. He also noted that he did not have authority to invoke permanent suspensions or expulsions. The University Hearing Board will make the final decisions, Corson said, and he will respect the judgments of the board.

Neal R. Stamp, University counsel who attended the news conference, said that "great care" had been taken in drafting the temporary restraining order and the preliminary injunction to guard against infringing on anyone's civil rights. Corson added that he felt it would have been "redundant" to have made specific reference to the first and 14th amendments to the U.S. Constitution in the orders as requested by the defense attorney, because no court orders could override the Constitution.

W. Donald Cooke, vice president for research who also was in attendance at the session, responded to questions about research at Cornell. He pointed out that very often research is related to many areas of science and technology and that it is hard to know how it will be applied. He said that Department of Defense funded research at Cornell, which now totals about $4.6 million, would be reduced to about $1.9 million next year, largely because of decisions made in Washington to have funding for many projects supported by other, more appropriate agencies.

Some 200 people walked out of Carpenter Hall at 1:41 p.m. Monday, five days after the library of that building had been occupied by a group of demonstrators. The library was returned to full operation about one hour later.

Carrying two banners, singing and chanting, the group moved up Campus Rd., along East Ave., across the Arts Quadrangle and finally to the main entrance of Day Hall. After a brief public meeting there, speakers for the group announced that they were establishing a 24-hour a day picket line around Day Hall. Later, it was reported that the picket line would be maintained from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily. Between six and 12 persons have been picketing in front of the main entrance to the building.

While the demonstrators were marching from Carpenter to Day Hall, New York State Supreme Court Justice Frederick B. Bryant of Ithaca issued a preliminary injunction against the demonstrators at the request of the University. The 2 p.m. hearing, which lasted 15 minutes, came three days after Judge Bryant had issued a temporary restraining order against the demonstrators.

The sit-in began shortly before 1 p.m. Wednesday (April 26) when approximately 75 demonstrators entered Carpenter Hall on the engineering quadrangle. The demonstrators allowed occupants of the building to leave and then chained the entrances to the building. About five members of the College of Engineering staff remained in the building. The Cornell Rumor Control operation was put into effect. (While they were in operation, Rumor Control handled more than 1,650 calls.)

2:15 p.m.: Edmund T. Cranch, associate dean of the College of Engineering, one of the members of the engineering staff who remained in the building, ordered the demonstrators to leave, informing them that they were in violation of the University's Maintenance of Public Order regulations.

Shortly after occupying the building, demonstrators outside Carpenter Hall distributed a leaflet which included the basic demands — that Cornell immediately cease all Department of Defense and war related research at Cornell Aeronautical Laboratory (CAL) in Buffalo, that it end ROTC and all war-related and counterinsurgency research at Cornell, and that the Cornell trustees use their position as Gulf Oil stockholders to force Gulf out of Portugal's African colonies.

At 2:05 p.m. Lowell T. George, director of Cornell Safety Division, told the demonstrators inside the building that they were in direct violation of the University regulations and that he was ordering them to leave the building immediately.

At 2:40 p.m. George and Ralph J. Coskey, safety division captain, entered Carpenter Hall by breaking a window in the front of the building. Some 20 safety division officers accompanied George and Coskey into the building.

After opening the building, Safety Division officers secured it against further entry. Some 75 demonstrators retreated to the library of Carpenter Hall. While the Safety Division officers were entering the building, a brief scuffle developed involving some 10 demonstrators. No injuries were reported.

William D. Gurowitz, Cornell's vice-president for campus affairs, announced at 4:15 p.m. that he was going into Carpenter Hall at the invitation of the demonstrators to talk with them.

Gurowitz left the building at 5:00 p.m. He returned to Day Hall to report to University Provost Robert A. Plane.

He said that when he met with the group he offered to have the group meet with Plane at another location outside of Carpenter Hall, or to have four or five of the demonstrators meet with Plane, or that four or five of the group could meet with University President Dale R. Corson at an appropriate time.

At 8:45 p.m. the Safety Division received a telephone call stating that there was a bomb in Uris Library.

Following a meeting of the Executive Committee of the University Senate, the committee issued a three point statement about 9:30 p.m. calling the attention of the read by Coskey at 8:10 a.m. to the persons involved in the sit-in:

"I have an announcement to make. I am Captain Ralph Coskey of the Cornell Safety Division. I have been authorized and directed by the Acting President to order all of you to leave this building immediately. If you do so, all Cornell students must identify themselves as they leave. They will be referred to the Judicial Administrator. If you are a Cornell student and fail to leave, I have been authorized to temporarily suspend each of you from the University, pending a hearing by the University Hearing Board. Temporary suspension means that you cannot attend classes or examinations or use university facilities, with the exception of your dormitory room and the university health services. I am going to give you five minutes to make up your minds. After that time, those Cornell students who are still in this room will be temporarily suspended from the University. We have many of your names and have taken photographs and those we do not know will be identified from the photographs."

After five minutes Coskey said: "Every person in this room who is a student at Cornell University is now temporarily suspended from the University until your case is reviewed by the University Hearing Board."

Further Charges and Suspensions Are Anticipated, According to Kisker

Notices of temporary suspensions and charges of violations of the Regulations for the Maintenance of Public Order have been sent to a number of persons allegedly involved in the recent Carpenter Hall takeover. They will continue to be sent out as more participants in the takeover are identified by the Safety Division, according to Hartwig E. Kisker, judicial administrator.

Kisker said that potentially up to 50 persons may be identified and charged with violations of the regulations. He said he hopes that hearings of the alleged violators will be held before final examinations.

"As yet, the temporary suspensions ordered by acting president (Robert A.) Plane at 8:10 a.m. Thursday are still in effect," he said, and "notices have been sent out on a rolling basis as identification is received from the Safety Division."

Kisker said although no photographs were taken of the demonstrators in the building when the temporary suspensions notice was read, photographs were taken after that time. He explained that anyone who was in the building after the suspension was announced and can be identified either by Safety Division personnel or through pictures is considered temporarily suspended and will receive notice to that effect.

Cornell community to standing policies of the Senate. The statement read as follows:

1. The Senate on April 18, 1972, adopted SA-131 condemning "the continued escalation of the War in Vietnam by the United States and the renewed bombing of North Vietnam."

2. The Senate on April 25, 1972, reaffirmed its support of SA-48, the Southern African Investments Bill, which recommends to the investment officers of the University a re-examination of African investment policies.

3. The Statement of Student Rights, SA-45, declares (Article I, Section 2): "No student shall be denied enjoyment of the benefits of University programs and facilities to which he would normally be entitled without due process. No member of the Cornell Community shall by his conduct obstruct this right."

Shortly before midnight Plane, accompanied by some faculty and a few trustees, went to Carpenter Hall to talk with the demonstrators.

As the second day of the sit-in began, Thursday, April 27, Plane addressed a group of about 300 people outside of the building. He told them he supported the resolution of the Senate Executive Committee, read the resolution, and said: "The library is central to the heart of the University. Students are asking for its use to complete their studies. In efforts to avoid needless injury to anyone, I am asking those inside once again to leave."

Plane, along with the news media, then entered the building, accompanied by members of the Safety Division. At the entrance to the library the group was stopped. Plane told the demonstrators, "I'm not here to negotiate. I'm here to talk and to listen." After a discussion among the demonstrators, they agreed to allow Plane and everyone except the press to enter the library. Plane said essentially the same thing to the group inside that he had said outside. Plane and the people who had gone into the library with him left after about 10 minutes, escorted by Safety Division officers. The group returned to Day Hall.

The demonstrators remained in the building throughout the night. The following announcement was President Corson returned to campus Thursday morning and at 10:15 a.m. issued the following statement:

"I have returned to the campus because of my grave concern over the events of the past 24 hours. Above all I am concerned for the survival and well-being of the entire community and for the preservation of Cornell University's educational mission which requires a free and open campus. The actions of the individuals who have remained in Carpenter Hall after being requested and ordered to leave constitute a serious threat to both individual freedom and safety on our campus.

"The individuals occupying the library describe their action as non-violent. To claim a non-violent stance is not sufficient when, in fact, their actions constitute both a harassment of other members of the campus and a denial of their rights.

"Those in Carpenter Hall have made several demands. They call for an end to defense research at the Cornell Aeronautical Laboratory and at other University units. As has been announced repeatedly since 1968, the University will separate from CAL through sale of the Laboratory. There is no classified defense research on our campus. They call for an end to ROTC which has been maintained at Cornell to provide these programs to those students who want them. They demand that the University force the Gulf Oil Corporation out of Angola. The Cornell Board of Trustees has made clear to Gulf Oil our concerns with their Angola operation and as a stockholder the University can do no more on this matter at this time.

"I have been in constant contact with Provost Robert A. Plane and other University officials since the occupation of Carpenter Hall began early yesterday afternoon. I agreed in each instance with the actions they have taken.

"These actions are:

—Opening the building and limiting the occupation to the library.

—The meetings with the protestors by Vice President William D. Gurowitz and Provost Plane.

The staff of the Engineering Library in Carpenter Hall has requested anyone who removed books from the library during the occupation to return them. No questions will be asked.

Protesters Leave Carpenter After

—The Provost's support of the Senate Executive Committee resolution on this matter.

—The Provost's further attempts to meet with the protestors.

—And finally, the suspension action taken this morning against the Cornell students involved in the Carpenter Hall occupation.

"At this time Cornell, because of the continued occupation of the Carpenter Hall library is no longer a totally free and open university. As President, it is my responsibility to do all within my power to maintain Cornell as a free and open university which protects the rights of all its members. To achieve this, I urge those individuals occupying Carpenter Hall to comply with the several directives they have received and to leave the building. I also urge all other members of the campus to continue to act responsibly in this situation so that we may soon return to the traditional atmosphere of Cornell freedom."

Early in the evening on Thursday, President Corson issued a second statement:

"Because of the continued refusal of the individuals occupying the Carpenter Hall library to leave that building, the University faces a serious dilemma. The occupation of the Library denies its use to students and others who have a right to use it. At the same time it is uppermost in my mind that we refrain from the use of force, if at all possible, because this will greatly increase the potential for personal injury and property damage. For this reason I request that the campus continue to endure the current situation for the time being even though it includes the limitation of freedom and, in particular, abridges the rights of the Engineering students and others who are being denied the use of their library. This request is in line with the recommendations which the members of the Senate Executive Committee expressed to me this afternoon. They urged, 'both the Administration and the rest of the University Community to attempt to avoid violence and the possibility of physical harm at the situation at Carpenter Hall.' I have also kept in close touch with the Dean of the Faculty, Professor Norman Penney, and for the time being he continues to support these views."

At about 8:20 p.m. a car belonging to the father of a Cornell graduate student was scorched when a device described by the Safety Division as "possibly a Molotov cocktail" exploded near the vehicle.

The car belonging to Alexander Banyo of Kingston had been parked in the Sage Hall lot across from Carpenter Hall by his son, John A. Banyo, a graduate student.

Safety Division officials said some paint on the car was scorched and the bottom of the vehicle was slightly damaged.

Late Thursday night four University officials entered the library of Carpenter Hall to talk with those occupying the library. W. Donald Cooke, vice president for research and dean of the Graduate School; Franklin A. Long, Henry R. Luce Professor of Science and Society and a director of CAL; William D. Jones, assistant to the University provost; and Robert J. Young, professor of animal nutrition and chairman of the Committee on University-ROTC Relationships went into the building at 10:52 p.m. They were to engage in a discussion of the general moral and political implications of the CAL, ROTC and Gulf-Angola issues.

Cooke, who headed the group of four, said those inside the library had agreed prior to the four University officials entering Carpenter that the talks would be discussions and not negotiations.

On Friday (April 28), Corson entered the library of Carpenter Hall at 2:15 a.m. to join four other University officials in discussions with the demonstrators.

Corson entered the building to speak under two guidelines, the first being that the talks were discussions and not negotiations and the second being that he would speak for only a brief period of time. He was there for 35 minutes, including a short period of response and questions from the demonstrators.

At the conclusion of the session, the moderator asked Corson if he and the trustees were prepared to negotiate with the demonstrators on their demands. Corson reminded them that he had not come there to negotiate. "I am the president of the whole University. I am being pressed hard on the other side...." He described the situation as a serious dilemma.

On the one hand, he said, the demonstrators have shown deep concern with problems of the country and have made their concerns known. But, on the other hand, the University is faced with the fact that the rights of students and faculty have been severely abridged in that they cannot use the library. "I am asking you to leave the library and return it to the use of students who need it," he said.

Corson began his remarks by stating, "We are all in the terrible experience in Southeast Asia together, and I deplore it as much as you do." He then addressed himself directly to the issues raised by the demands made Wednesday by demonstrators.

Corson said he supports the separation of CAL from the University and has done so from the beginning of negotiations in 1968. On the question of directing the work of the Laboratory toward non-defense activities, he said, "I would be very happy to do it if it were possible." He said if money and a national commitment in other directions were available, the University probably could make the change.

There have been attempts by the Laboratory, he said, to reorganize its work to aim at more civilian problems. He indicated that there had been modest success in that direction although the slump in the aerospace industry and a lack of national commitment hindered their efforts.

Corson said he would not take the time to go into details of the problems the University is having in trying to divest itself of CAL.

On war-related research on campus, Corson said there is no secret research on the Cornell campus. He said that what is done at Cornell is freely available and is freely published. It is hard to pin down what is war-related, he said.

He mentioned two large Department of Defense funded projects at Cornell, now funded by the National Science Foundation — the National Astronomy and Ionospheric Center at Arecibo, Puerto Rico, and the Materials Science Center on campus.

Corson said that Defense Department funded research is dropping off. As to when Air Force and Navy sponsored projects will be phased out by the Defense Department, he said he could not give an exact date.

In commenting on ROTC, Corson said he believes that a military force in this country will continue to exist. He said he believes the military force is essential and that it is better for officers to be trained at the universities than elsewhere.

He said he had taken the lead in seeking reforms in ROTC programs and that his recommendations have been generally adopted and accepted by the Defense Department. Military agencies have moved to adopt a number of changes, he said. As an example he mentioned that a number of courses in the Engineering College at Cornell that had formerly been open only to ROTC students are now open to all students.

Corson said "I share your concerns" about University investments, but that according to the University by-laws, he had no presidential authority in the area of investment policy. The University treasurer, who implements investment policy, reports directly to the trustees, he stated. Corson said the trustee investment committee and the joint University Senate-trustee investment advisory committee will soon have their first formal meeting together.

A member of the negotiating committee of the demonstrators said they were pleased to see Corson at Carpenter Hall because it revealed recognition of their seriousness of purpose. The woman demonstrator said "We would strongly urge the administration to take a political stand" by withdrawing from Defense contracts.

She also said the demonstrators do not believe the University should remain involved in any directly military related activities.

William V. Keene, a representative of Operation STOP, asked Corson if there is a policy that trustees always vote with management on proxy proposals. Corson replied that this has traditionally been true but "I'm hopeful that that won't always be the policy." — He said he hoped he could urge the trustees to consider alternate policies.

Keene asked Corson what his communication with trustees was on the question of Gulf investments and General Motors in South Africa. Corson said there has not been discussion about GM other than informal confidential talks which he did not wish to disclose. He said he abstained on one of the recent proxies on the Gulf matter and one other he voted with the minority. Just after midnight Corson had been prepared to enter the building.

When the demonstrators would not accept discussion and time guidelines and insisted that Corson's entry into the building would be "a prelude to negotiation," Corson decided against entering the building and returned to his home.

When the demonstrators decided to allow him in, Corson returned and entered the Library.

In the morning the following statement by Coskey was read to those in Carpenter Library at 8 o'clock: "I have an announcement to make. I am Captain Ralph Coskey, of the Cornell Safety Division. Every unauthorized person in this room who is a student at Cornell University is temporarily suspended from the University until his or her case is reviewed by the University Hearing Board. Temporary suspension means that a student cannot attend classes or examinations or use University facilities with the exception of dormitory rooms and the University health services."

At 11:30 a.m. the following statement was made by Andrew Schultz, dean of the College of Engineering: "I am very concerned about our students and faculty whose freedom to use their library collections and facilities has been infringed upon by those students and, as I understand it, off-campus individuals who are presently sitting in Carpenter Hall. I have expressed this concern to the central administration. Such interference with the individual freedom of these individuals and with our educational process can have long-range effects that are injurious both to our students and to the institution."

Following a noon-hour rally in front of Phillips Hall attended by some 300 persons, the Cornell Conservative Club and the Campus Coalition presented to Plane a petition signed by about 200 persons opposing the occupation of the Carpenter Hall library.

The petition, which was presented at Day Hall at 1 p.m. read:

COUNTER-DEMONSTRATION: President Corson uses a bullhorn to address the Cornell Conservative Club and the Cornell Campus Coalition. The two groups were calling for

"We the undersigned members of the Cornell community respect the rights of students to protest peacefully on this campus. Without passing judgment on the immediate issue, we object to the tactics employed by the demonstrators occupying Carpenter Hall.

"Therefore, we call on the occupants of Carpenter Hall and other protestors:

"1) to immediately cease their occupation of that building so that students may continue their academic studies without interference;

"2) to discontinue the painting of buildings and the defacing of university property in any other manner;

"3) to accept the consequences of their acts in the true spirit and tradition of civil disobedience."

Plane told the group: "I will see to it that all the petitions are both communicated to the administration, to the community at large and to the people inside Carpenter Hall. I've not seen the petition before, but if I may read it, I have on other occasions signed petitions at this stage if I believe in them." He then signed the petition.

One counter-demonstrator asked, "When can we expect to have free access to Carpenter Hall?"

Plane said he has been in discussions with Schultz.

"I am caught on the same horns of the same dilemma that President (Dale R.) Corson is caught on," he said.

"He has the situation of having two absolutely primary tasks before him. His job is (1) to maintain freedom of the right to study, the rights of academic freedom on this campus and (2) he has the absolute requirement to avoid violence on this campus.

"The problem of finding a way to do both of these is impossible. We will continue to do the very best we can. We feel very strongly in both of these matters and I'm hoping that in not too much time we will have found a way to solve the problem," Plane said.

Thursday afternoon the Executive Committee of the Senate sent the following letter to Corson and the Carpenter Hall negotiating committee:

"We urge that all parties follow the principle of non-violence in resolving the current situation at Carpenter Hall.

"We further urge that delegates be appointed by the Administration and by the people occupying the Carpenter Hall Library, for the purpose of reaching a settlement.

3-Day Occupation, Face Charges to affirm our readiness to assist in constructive talks, in ed agreeable to all parties concerned."

us 6 p.m. the University announced it had obtained a temporary restraining order against those demonstrators who have been occupying the library of Carpenter Hall.

the order, which restrained immediately the demonstrators continued occupation of the library, was signed by Plane issued by New York State Supreme Court Justice Frederick Bryant at 2 p.m. in Ithaca. The order was served and posted at Carpenter Hall later in the afternoon by Attorney John A. Butch of the Syracuse law firm of Bond, Schoeneck & King, attorneys for Cornell in this action.

the order stated the defendants must show cause before Justice Bryant on May 1, 1972.

the text of the order follows:

ess a rally Friday afternoon organized by the Cornell Conservative action against those occupying Carpenter Hall.

"The defendants and all other persons receiving notice of this injunction be and they hereby are restrained and enjoined:

"1. From congregating or assembling within or adjacent to any of plaintiff's academic or administrative buildings, dormitories, recreation rooms, libraries, classrooms, athletic facilities, or any other premises owned, maintained or operated by plaintiff or in any corridors, stairways, doorways and entrances thereto, or in any walkway, roadways or other places owned, maintained, or operated by plaintiff in such manner as to disrupt or interfere with normal functions conducted by plaintiff in such place or to block, hinder, impede or interfere with ingress to or egress from any of such properties by plaintiff's faculty, administrators, students, employees, or guests;

"2. From employing force or violence, or the threat of force or violence, against person or property on plaintiff's premises;

"3. From threatening to do any of the above-mentioned acts."

The University has sought a temporary restraining order, Plane said, because "The order represents a legal step designed to restore free access to all parts of the University campus while minimizing the potential for personal injury." The University has presented the facts to a court which agrees that there is a matter sufficiently serious to warrant appropriate civil court action restraining such activity."

In announcing the obtaining of the temporary restraining order, Plane once again urged the campus community to continue to act in a responsible manner in order to assure the survival and well-being of the entire community and to preserve the University's educational mission which requires a free and open campus.

A temporary restraining order prohibits a defendant or defendants from doing certain acts. The court may grant a temporary restraining order even though the defendant was not notified of the plaintiff's request and even though the defendant did not have an opportunity to present his case to the judge.

Shortly before midnight Thursday the following document was sent to Joan Schmukler and Douglas Ray of the demonstrators' negotiating committee:

"1. The University agrees to the establishment of discussion groups on ROTC, DOD Research at Cornell, CAL, and Investments. There will be one meeting scheduled in each discussion area.

2. Discussion groups will include representatives of the Giap-Cabral group, of STOP — when issues relating to Gulf Oil and investment policy are being discussed — and relevant representatives of: the top administration, Trustees, the Trustee Investment Committee, University Faculty, and the CAL Board of Directors.

"The number of participants in any discussion group will not exceed four members of the Giap-Cabral group, who are members of the Cornell community, and two to four representatives from among the top administration, Trustees, the Trustee Investment Committee, Faculty, and the CAL Board of Directors.

Two representatives each of no more than two other campus groups may participate in each meeting. Any interested group may apply to the University administration, which will select the groups to be represented.

The University Senate Executive Committee will assist in the arrangement and the conduct of the meetings.

All meetings will be scheduled in advance. These discussions will be completed by May 31, 1972 unless the deadline is extended by the Giap-Cabral group.

Meetings will be private not public.

3. Discussions will be concerned with the facts and the political and moral implications underlying each demand.

4. The discussions will be conducted in good faith and with mutual trust.

5. this proposal will terminate at 3:00 a.m. Saturday, April 29, 1972, unless all unauthorized persons have left Carpenter Hall by that time.

6. In the meantime, this proposal shall not be construed as a condonation, by the University, of any violation of the existing Court Restraining Order. Continued violation of the Restraining Order may be the subject of contempt of court proceedings at any time."

At about the same time the University issued a statement to clarify the meaning of the Temporary Restraining Order issued earlier by the Supreme Court. The statement was as follows:

"The order restrains any individual on the premises of the University who has notice of the Order from obstructing the normal operations of the University.

"If the Court at any time receives evidence that a person is in violation of the Restraining Order it can cite that individual for contempt of court. The penalties for contempt of court can include fine or imprisonment or both.

"On May 1 the Court will conduct a hearing to determine whether a preliminary injunction should be issued pending a later trial at which it would be determined if a permanent injunction should be issued. At the hearing on May 1 the University and the defendants will have the opportunity to present their arguments on the question of a preliminary injunction.

"The Restraining Order does not preclude the use of any other legal remedies."

Shortly after 2 a.m. Saturday (April 29) the following statement was sent by University officials to Carpenter Hall demonstrators.

"The previous proposal, which was sent to you late Friday evening, at approximately 10:30 p.m., 28 April 1972, remains as the University proposal with the following additions:

"Add to item 1, "If the meeting proves fruitful, a subsequent meeting could be scheduled with the mutual consent of all parties."

"Add to second paragraph of item 2 "Each group will select its own representatives."

During the noon hour on Saturday the following statement was issued by Corson:

"The occupation of the Carpenter Hall library continues to limit the freedom of our University and to hold over all of us the potential for personal injury and property damage.

"Over the past two days I and other members of the administration have met with individuals in Carpenter Hall to discuss what they perceive to be the issues involved in this matter. We have also been attempting to set up discussions with their leaders on the basis of their willingness to vacate the library. So far these efforts have been unsuccessful. Let me emphasize on this point that we have been willing and continue to be willing to hold discussions of the issues if the group in the library will depart. We will not negotiate demands.

"Because of the unwillingness of the group in the library to leave we went to the New York State Supreme Court yesterday to obtain a temporary restraining order against further obstruction of normal activities on the campus. The order is now in force. This morning Dean Andrew Schultz and a number of his engineering faculty members talked at length to those occupying the library emphasizing the fact that engineering students have a pressing need for access to their library. The occupiers were urged to make the library available to the engineering students.

"In spite of the court order, in spite of repeated efforts by myself, other administrators, and the engineering faculty and other faculty members to open the library for its proper use the group inside continues to prevent access, to deny total freedom on the campus. We will continue to pursue all the legal means available to the University to open the library. So that we may accomplish this objective without violence I urge all members of the University community to continue to avoid exceeding the remedies which are legally available. I am convinced that with your patient cooperation we will succeed in this effort."

At 1:30 p.m. Saturday the following was issued by Plane:

"Limited access to the books in the Carpenter Hall library is now available during normal library hours. This service, under the direction of the Cornell University Libraries system, is being provided by library employees who are being compensated. We will continue in our efforts to return the Carpenter Hall library to normal operations."

Late Saturday the University announced attempts were being made to serve show-cause orders against a number of individuals involved in the occupation of the Carpenter Hall library.

Those served would be ordered to show cause why they should not be held in contempt of court for violation of a temporary restraining order issued Friday.

The University declined to identify those individuals to be served nor would it say how many show-cause orders were involved. On Sunday, (April 30) a University official said that the orders could not be served legally on the sabbath.

Early Monday morning the Safety Division detectives served show cause orders on four persons involved in the occupation of the Carpenter Hall library.

The show cause orders called for the appearance of individuals named before Supreme Court Justice Frederick B. Bryant at 2:00 p.m. Tuesday.

At 9:00 a.m. on Monday, the following statement, was issued by Corson:

"I have a request to members of the University community — students, faculty and staff.

"As you know, the occupation of Carpenter Hall Library continues. This activity has denied proper use of the library to students, faculty and others. It has threatened all with the possibility that physical injury might result if we attempt to open the library with force.

"To avoid the possibility of personal injury we have pursued up to now a moderate course of action. We have applied the remedies available to us under our own campus judicial system and through the courts. The students involved in the occupation of the library have been suspended. We have obtained a temporary restraining order from the New York State Supreme Court. Several individuals have now been served show cause orders to appear before the court. We will serve additional show cause orders when the individuals can be located.

"This approach, however, cannot succeed unless the processes of our own system and those of the court can be applied more broadly. To do this requires the identification of more of the individuals who are occupying the library and denying its use to others. It is to this point that I direct my request to the students, faculty and staff of the University. I ask you to support our use of moderate remedies in this situation by assisting in the identification of those individuals who, by the library, have denied total freedom at Cornell.

"Those who wish to volunteer in this effort should come to the Safety Division office in Barton Hall where they can view a display of photographs of those in the library. The Safety Division office will be open for photo identification purposes daily from 8 in the morning until 6 p.m.

"The importance of the University community's willingness to participate in such an effort was clearly stated in a recent commendatory resolution passed by the University Senate. It stated:

"The Senate wishes to remind the Cornell community that individual rights are only protected when laws are enforced. The Senate therefore encourages the members of the Cornell community to assist the Safety Division in identifying those who violate the laws of the community."

Early Monday afternoon Corson issued a statement regarding the meeting of the Investment Sub-Committee of the Cornell Board of Trustees scheduled to be held that day in New York City. The statement follows:

"I plan to attend today's meeting of the special Trustee Investment Sub-Committee in order to express several concerns of the University community. I should note that this special Sub-Committee was appointed by the Investment Committee on April 12 of this year to decide on the vote to be taken regarding proxies for General Motors, Ford, I T & T, and Kennecott Copper whose annual meetings will be held before the next regular Cornell Investment Committee meeting on May 26.

Bulletin of the Faculty

(Publication of this Bulletin is supervised by the Secretary of the University Faculty Robert M. Cotts, 315 Day Hall, 256-4843.)

Summary of Meeting Of the Faculty Council of Representatives May 3, 1972

The Faculty Council of Representatives met and heard reports from President Dale R. Corson and Dean of the Faculty Norman Penney on the events of the past week related to the occupation of the Carpenter Hall library. The FCR also received a report from the Committee on Freedom of Teaching and Learning, and it took action on several matters contained in the report.

President Corson spoke without a prepared text. He noted that throughout the time Carpenter Hall was occupied, he held to the principle that no one should get hurt and that, as much as possible, only the Cornell Safety Division staff would be used as a security force. He said he recognized the abridgement of the rights of people on the campus to use the library, and tried to deal with the matter effectively. Only civil legal action was initiated, he reported, but he did not rule out the possibility of criminal action if indeed a criminal act occurred.

Following a question from Professor Charlotte Young regarding a radio news report on the status of the temporary suspension of certain students, President Corson read from a press release which is contained in this issue of the Chronicle. Final action on the question of the suspension will be taken by the University Hearing Board which has been asked to meet as soon as possible, he said.

Dean Norman Penney reported that he had been asked by Provost Robert A. Plane on Wednesday, April 26, whether he could assemble a group of Faculty members who could serve at Carpenter Hall to help calm any tendency toward irascibility. Dean Penney then assembled the Executive Committee of the FCR and several other Faculty members to advise him. There being a quorum of Executive Committee members present, the Committee passed the following resolution:

"The Executive Committee of the Faculty Council of Representatives supports the principle in the current emergency at Carpenter Hall that the presence of members of the Cornell Faculty at or near Carpenter Hall may have a calming effect and is therefore desirable. Therefore, the Dean is urged to request members of the Faculty to

Call to Faculty Meeting

Wednesday, May 10, 1972
4:30 p.m., Ives 110

The agenda will include:

1. Address by the Provost, Robert A. Plane
2. Recognition of Retiring University Faculty Members
3. Report from the Dean of the Faculty on progress and status of FCR.

4. Report from the Dean on Review and Procedures Committee and its work during the past year.

NOTE: The R&P Committee has suggested that any communications or suggestions in regard to the operation of the Faculty, the FCR or the R&P Committee be forwarded to the dean in advance of the meeting or raised at the time of the report.

be present."

Dean Penney reported that several Faculty members responded to calls to serve as a calming influence. He also noted that many other Faculty members visited the site of the Carpenter Hall demonstration and talked with the people there.

The Dean also reported that the Executive Committee of the FCR preferred, in view of its own by-laws, not to participate in a formal way in the University response to the occupation of Carpenter Hall.

On other matters, Dean Penney reported that the question of the University policy on the cancellation of classes for such situations as the Moratorium of April 21 has been referred to the Committee on Freedom of Teaching and Learning. He also called the attention of the FCR to the report of the Reviews and Procedures Committee, published in the April 27 Chronicle, on the question of jurisdiction of the FCR with respect to the debate of the FCR.

A Report of the Committee on Freedom of Teaching and Learning was presented to the Council. The FCR voted to accept two sections of the report before the set time for adjournment at 6 p.m.

In one accepted section of the report, the Committee expressed concern "to have examined the question of whether there should be some small representative faculty group to which the President or the Dean can turn for advice, sentiment, or statements during the course of a crisis such as the Carpenter Hall seizure. It consequently is recommending that this matter be reviewed by the Review and Procedures Committee."

In the other section accepted, the Committee called for more readily available information on the issues of the demonstration. Specifically the Committee urged that a number of questions be reported on by the appropriate FCR committee:

"a. The specific organizational arrangements between Cornell and the Cornell Aeronautical Laboratory (CAL) and other related information that bears upon CAL operations and the prospects of its sale or conversion to more benign research activities.

"b. The facts surrounding the University's handling of the Gulf Oil proxy situation and any other information generally relating to the propriety of University investment in Gulf and other corporations having investments in Southern African countries.

"c. Relevant information concerning the University's policy, relationship, and committee structure in respect of ROTC.

"d. The facts and the University's policy in respect of faculty members performing defense research."

The meeting was adjourned at 6:03 p.m.

Protesters Leave Carpenter, Face Charges

I am not a member of the special Sub-Committee and consequently I do not have a vote in the actions to be taken at this meeting. I will, however, report to the Sub-Committee that many responsible members of the University community support the concept that consideration should be given to the social implications of University investments as well as to the economic implications.

"I will also convey to the Sub-Committee the specific concerns of the University community — concerns expressed by the Senate actions and by the more than 1,700 signatures on the recent STOP petition. These concerns refer to the disclosure of information pertaining to corporate operations in Africa. Regarding this question I should note that the only proxy being considered today which involves a call for disclosure on African operations is that of General Motors."

Following the departure of the demonstrators from the Carpenter Hall library early Monday afternoon, Dean Schultz announced, "the Carpenter Hall library has been opened and returned to full operation. President Corson has been informed of this fact."

At 3:30 p.m. the University announced that the preliminary injunction granted by the New York State Supreme Court continues the restraints against obstruction of normal university operations which were contained in the court's original temporary restraining order. These restraints apply to all persons having notice of the order while they are on Cornell premises.

The text of the order for preliminary injunction follows: "Cornell University, Plaintiff, against James A. Livingston, Walter Howard Graze, Michael J. Horowitz, John V. Dennis, Sean McCarthy, Dennis Peskin, Douglas Ray, Milton Taam, and John Doe and Jane Doe numbers

1 to 100, the latter being unknown persons present on Plaintiff's premises in connection with unlawful activities there, Defendants.

Present: Honorable Frederick B. Bryant.

This action and the instant motion having been commenced by Order to Show Cause, dated April 28, 1972 and returnable May 1, 1972, why an injunction should not issue pending the hearing and determination of this action, which Order included a Temporary Restraining Order pending the hearing and determination of this motion; and

*Said Order to Show Cause with attached summons, verified complaint, and supporting affidavit of Robert A. Plane sworn to April 28, 1972 having been served on April 28, 1972 in a manner provided in said Order to Show Cause, as set forth in the affidavit of Robert J. Hunt sworn to on April 29, 1972 and filed in this action in connection with the Order to Show Cause why James A. Livingston, Dennis Peskin, George C. Hildebrand, and Paul B. Mirsky should not be punished for Civil Contempt, issued by this Court on April 29, 1972; and

The motion having duly come before the Court for hearing on May 1, 1972 at 2 p.m.; and

John A. Beach of Bond, Schoeneck & King, having appeared for plaintiff in favor of the motion, and James M. Kerrigan of Wiggins-Tsapis-Golder & Holmberg having appeared for defendants Michael J. Horowitz and John V. Dennis in opposition to the motion;

Upon the summons, verified complaint, affidavit of Robert A. Plane sworn to April 28, 1972, the Order to Show Cause dated April 28, 1972, the affidavit of Robert J. Hunt sworn to April 29, 1972, the affidavit of John A. Beach sworn to May 1, 1972, and upon all prior proceedings in this action, it is hereby

ORDERED that plaintiff's motion for preliminary injunction is hereby granted, and it is further

ORDERED that pending the hearing and determination of the issues in this action, this Order shall have the effect of:

1. Restraining and enjoining each and all of the defendants and all other persons receiving notice of this injunction from congregating or assembling within or adjacent to any of plaintiff's academic or administrative buildings, dormitories, recreation rooms, libraries, classrooms, athletic facilities or any other premises owned, maintained or operated by plaintiff, or in any corridors, stairways, doorways and entrances thereto, or in any walkway, roadways or other places owned, maintained, or operated by plaintiff in such manner as to disrupt or interfere with normal functions conducted by plaintiff in such place or to block, hinder, impede or interfere with ingress to or egress from any of such properties by plaintiff's faculty, administrators, students, employees or guests;

2. Restraining and enjoining each and all of the defendants and all persons receiving notice of this injunction from employing force or violence, or the threat of force or violence, against persons or property on plaintiff's premises; and

3. Restraining and enjoining each and all of the defendants and all other persons receiving notice of this injunction from threatening to do any of the above-mentioned acts.

Dated May 1, 1972.

J. S. Lasdon Estate Donates $2 Million For Medical Housing

In a move to help meet the urgent need for more doctors and other health care personnel, the estate of the late Jacob S. Lasdon has given $2 million for the construction of an apartment residence on a parking lot at 430 East 70th St. for the students of the Cornell University Medical College, Graduate School of Medical Sciences and the Cornell University-New York Hospital School of Nursing, all of which are components of the New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center.

The building will be called The Jacob S. Lasdon House. Lasdon was prominent as a philanthropist and patron of the arts, and through their family foundation, he and his brothers have been active in the support and encouragement of medical research, the arts, education, and other charitable activities.

The gift was announced by Lasdon's brothers, who are the executors of his estate: Stanley S., William S., Philip S. and Milton S. Lasdon; and by Cornell President Dale R. Corson; Dr. E. Hugh Luckey, president of the New York Hospital - Cornell Medical Center; and Dr. J. Robert Buchanan, dean of Cornell Medical College.

Dr. Buchanan took the occasion to announce as well that the medical college's next entering class would be increased by 11 per cent over the present classes. This will provide the opportunity of eventually expanding enrollment by 33 per cent. Dean Eleanor Lambertsen of the Nursing School has also committed her institution to an enrollment increase.

These developments fit in with the overall policy of the Cornell health sciences schools of increasing enrollment without encroaching on local housing. Over the last 15 years, the York Avenue Institutions (which include the New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, Rockefeller University, and the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center) have constructed 43 per cent more middle-income housing units than they have removed from the community. In addition, the New York Hospital was co-sponsor of the first and largest middle-income housing project in the area, the York Hill apartments. Of the 296 units in this project, the hospital has chosen to use only 38 and has relinquished the rest of its share to the community. There is no foreseeable displacement of any community residents. In fact, as more housing is built by these institutions, and their students and staff members occupy them, they vacate private housing units which will become available for community use.

Lasdon House will provide at least 300 self-contained residential units of various sizes which will house more than 400 medical and nursing students.

While the design of the Lasdon building has not yet been determined, it is expected that it will be a 17-story tower arising from a two-story platform that will contain a bookstore, parking space and various mechanical facilities.

The total cost of the building and land will be approximately $14,510,000. At a conservative estimate, the land, which is being contributed by the Medical College, is valued at $3,800,000. The amount over and above the Lasdon gift will be financed by a loan from the Dormitory Authority of the State of New York. Lasdon House is to be completed and ready for occupancy by September, 1974, the beginning of the school year.

NEW STUDENT HOUSING: The Jacob S. Lasdon House, an apartment residence for students at The New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center will be constructed in 1974. This architectural model shows one possible design for this building and how it will look in its setting.

Statler Foundation Provides Grant For Hotel Research, Development

The School of Hotel Administration has received a $410,000 grant from the Statler Foundation in support of the school's research and development activities in the hotel industry, it was announced Saturday.

Peter J. Crotty, chairman of the Statler Foundation, made the announcement during a banquet highlighting the school's 47th Hotel Ezra Cornell. More than 300 persons associated with the hotel and tourism industry took part in this year's three-day program at the school. The program featured a series of seminars and workshops on various aspects of the hospitality industry.

In receiving the grant from Crotty, Robert A. Beck, dean of the Hotel School, said he was pleased that "the Statler Foundation continues to recognize, as it has in the past, that the growth and expansion of the hospitality and tourism industries requires continued evaluation and reappraisal of the traditional philosophies and concepts of its operating procedures and that the present research and development program established with the Statler funds at the Hotel School must be continued.

"The hotel industry," Beck said, "sorely needs our program for research and development to help achieve essential technological and operational improvements. But to satisfy the demands of the market place with its increasing expenses and considerations the hotel industry itself must mobilize behind our program."

In 1969 the Statler Foundation, Beck pointed out, awarded $2.2 million to the Hotel School to provide the physical facilities necessary to undertake a first-rate program.

"To date," he said, "the school's Department of Research and Development, previously under the direction of Professor Emeritus C. I. Sayles and more recently under Professor Paul R. Broten, has made great strides in the areas of computer applications for hotels, food and beverage, tourism and travel and economic and marketing studies. With this additional grant it is expected this important work will be continued and expanded."

Since 1922 the Statler Foundation has awarded the Hotel School more than $10 million.

James Driscoll, 54

James W. Driscoll, 54, associate director of student housing, died Sunday in Arnot Ogden Hospital in Elmira, where he was a patient for almost three weeks.

For the past 26 years, Driscoll was employed by Cornell. He began his work here in the Department of Buildings and Properties. In 1946, he became manager of housing in the Department of Housing and Dining. When housing and dining split into two departments in 1970, he was named to his latest position.

An alumnus of Cornell, Driscoll received a bachelor's degree in agriculture in 1940.

Funeral services were held Tuesday in Bangs Funeral Home, and burial was in Calvary Cemetery. He is survived by his wife, Angela, a daughter and two sons.

The University Photography Policy Bill—(I)

SA-138 (C-28-a)

The Senate recognizes the desirability of taking pictures to allow for later identification as an alternative to making arrests at campus demonstrations. Recognizing this, however, we are concerned that the use of photographs may go beyond simply assisting law enforcement to infringing on individual rights. THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED:

1. The Senate endorses the Administration's decision to burn its photo file and urges that the practice of maintaining a photo file not be reinstituted.
2. The Senate is satisfied that the procedure outlined in Mr. George's letters of 3/9/72 and 3/16/72, safeguarding the photographs Safety Division uses in actual prosecutions, provide adequate protection from abuse.
3. Since the Safety Division has taken photographs as an alternative to making on-the-spot arrests it is the sense of the Senate that pictures should only be taken when, given sufficient police power, arrests would normally be made. Therefore, the Senate recommends that the Safety Division take pictures only when its officers have "probable cause" to suspect the commission of an illegal act, i.e. - only when they would otherwise make arrests.

4. The Senate, having considered the sensitive function of the Office of the Dean of Students personnel, recognizes that each staff member must individually decide whether or not to come forward to assist the Safety Division. Further, the Senate, under its legislative powers granted in Article VII of the Constitution, declares that the Office of the Dean of Students shall not be under any special obligation to assist the Hall Manor," and taken up residence at the "Day Hall Fortress." They have done so in order to petition the "Nobleman, Sir Dale Corson," to end "Cornell Ivory Tower's" involvement in some of its more lucrative extracurricular activities. (Let's remember for future reference that "Sir Dale" is in the service of "King Purcell's" court, the "High Court of the Trustee Round Table.")

It is these trustees who discreetly pull the strings of power, while "Sir Dale's Administration," the "Council of Learned Ones" (faculty) and the "stripling Senate," act as "buffer zones" to absorb the responsibility for Campus disruptions. Another issue, for which "Noble Kisker, the Judicious One," must bear the burden, is that of banishment from this place. That must be a sorrowful task for one who has so much responsibility and so little authority.

The Giap-Cabralians, who have suffered banishment, feel that campus order is less important than the lives of millions of people around the world. In other words, the "helping hand" which the "Corporate Person Gulf," and others like him, uses to paternalistically pat "underdeveloped*" nation on the head, is actually the poorly concealed iron gauntleted fist of imperialism. (a n underdeveloped nation (UD) is one which for any of several reasons, does not use the natural resources that the overdeveloped nations (OD) crave. The OD's, promising future wealth and prosperity to the UD's while robbing them blind, feel obligated to cause the OD of the UD's. This way they can have adjoining grave sites and share a quick death of all rather than the present slow death of a few).

Therefore, let the word go forth to the Giap-Cabralians and other citizens of the "Hamlet of Ithaca": The ultimate power rests with the "Omnipotent High Court of the Trustee Round Table," not with "Sir Dale." He can do little in the face of their awe-inspiring presence and has not the power to approve a petition demanding an end to "Cornell Ivory Tower's" complicity with imperialistic ventures. If the citizens of "Giap-Cabral Province" want results, they must appeal to the seat of power, not to one of its agents.

In conclusion, congratulations to the Giap-Cabralians and the "Knights of the Ivory Tower" in their orderly, highly organized exhibition of disciplined commitment. Their refusal to be intimidated by each other wrote a new page in the doctrine which supports non-violent actions, where ever possible.

Cornell Casts Proxies Against Management

minimize in all feasible ways the ecological damage caused by its operation. The company, which conducts mining, smelting and refining operations, had urged a vote against the proposal.

On a Ford Motor Co. proposal, the committee said it felt a demand for detailed information on employees indicating, among other things, the race and sex of the workers, was "unreasonable." In this matter, the committee was in agreement with Ford. However, the Cornell committee disagreed with the company in favoring a proposal which recommended that the corporation publish in its annual report each year "reasonably detailed" descriptions of specific new techniques in automotive air pollution control and motor vehicle safety which the company may develop. Ford had recommended a vote against this proposal.

Voting against a GM recommendation, the committee cast its ballots in favor of a resolution which would require the corporations' Board of Directors to provide a written report to shareholders within four months on the involvement of the corporation in the Union of South Africa. The resolution also called for disclosure of employment policies in South Africa.

Noyes said the committee also will write a letter to GM management saying that Cornell is in favor of a request for public meetings to discuss matters of public policies. Also by letter the committee will express its appreciation to GM for information made generally available to Cornell. This letter will express the opinion that wide release of detailed information by GM will advance the social cause in South Africa.

The committee, ignoring an ITT recommendation for a negative vote, cast its ballot in favor of a proposal to request the establishment of a committee of directors and employees to make the recommendations to provide for an orderly transition to civilian oriented production.

(Notes from the Department of Buildings and Properties)

East Avenue Area — Landscape Improvements

The planting season at long last is here! The major building construction projects between Tower Rd. and Campus Rd. are completed. The utility replacement projects in the area are also completed with the exception of the condensate line and sanitary sewer replacement work which will take place this summer in the lawn area between the East Ave. sidewalk and Sage Center parking lot.

The landscaping of the Social Sciences Building and the planting of Red Oak street trees has been started by the Grounds Division of the Department of Buildings and Properties. It is hoped that both these projects will be completed by Commencement.

After careful study and consideration, a decision was made last fall to sod the earth strip between the sidewalk (newly widened) and the curb along East Ave., and then to plant new trees this spring. The remaining American Elms have been examined and those found sound and healthy will be preserved. The planting program along East Ave. is moving ahead as a landscaping commitment of the highest priority in anticipation of the success of the overall Campus Beautification Fund Drive.

The choice of Red Oak trees as the most appropriate species was made on the basis of a recommendation from a landscape task force group comprised of University planners, horticulturists, plant pathologists, groundsman and landscape architects. The street tree plantings along Tower Rd. consists of Red Oaks also.

The new oak trees will generally be placed in the same location as the original Ostrander Elm trees. The dense network of utilities which has developed over the past 100 years precludes a substantially different arrangement in this area. The overall site design has been developed by James W. Yarnell and Albert K.S. Ma of the Planning Office; George T. Swanson and Edward L. Kabelac of the Grounds Division; Richard L. MacDowell, civil engineer; and Robert J. Scannell, the newly appointed campus landscape architect.

The glen, south of Day Hall, will be planted with Tulip, Poplar, and Larch trees to complement the Campus Store plantings. The contractor parking area west of Day Hall has been removed and finished landscaping is underway. Fortunately, the walkways which were constructed before the parking lot have been saved. The future of the remaining section of Tower Rd., between Day Hall and Stimson Hall, depends on the development of a source of funds. The plan is to create a pedestrian area, with the service function to Sage Chapel and Stimson Hall being retained.

Sage Notes

The Division of Biological Sciences has agreed to set up a registry of graduate students in the biological fields who are looking for teaching assistant positions. Graduate students interested in teaching assistantships for 1972-1973 should see Dr. Robert Marshall, 200 Stimson Hall, and complete the registration form. Faculty members who need teaching assistants will be urged to use this file as a means of locating interested students.

There will be a meeting of the Graduate Faculty at 4:30 p.m. on Friday, May 12, in Olin M to consider the approval of the May "Degree List." Since there will be no other questions considered at this meeting, faculty members will not be notified individually as provided for in the recently modified Code of Legislation of the Graduate Faculty.

Goethe Prize Competition

The Goethe Prize, endowed in 1935 by Ludwig Vogelstein, is awarded annually and is worth $100. The topic for this year's competition is any aspect of Goethe's works. Essays may be in German or English, with a suggested length of 10 to 20 pages; they should be written under an assumed name and should be submitted together with a sealed envelope containing the author's identification to the Office of the Registrar, Day Hall, by tomorrow. The competition is open to juniors, seniors, and graduate students. The members of the Prize Committee are Professors Sander L. Gilman, Bertel Pedersen, Rainer Warning and Lucy G. Collings. Any questions regarding the competition should be addressed to Professor Gilman in Goldwin Smith 188, 256-3932.

Children's Tuition Reminder

Diedrich K. Willers, director of Personnel Services, has issued a reminder to Cornell faculty and staff members who have children eligible under the Cornell Children's Tuition Scholarship Plan.

Willers said, "Scholarship applications are required for all students who will attend Cornell (undergraduate and graduate) as well as other institutions (undergraduate) under the Cornell Children's Tuition Scholarship Plan. To assure prompt processing of fall term scholarships, completed application forms must be in the Office of Personnel Service no later than June 1, 1972.

Application blanks and detailed information may be obtained during the morning hours from Ruth Kent at 256-5226 in the Office of Personnel Services, B-12 Ives Hall.

'Cabaret' Presented This Weekend

Octagon Productions will stage the Broadway musical "Cabaret" in Alice Statler Auditorium at 8:15 p.m. today, tomorrow and Saturday. There will also be a matinee at 2:15 p.m. Saturday. Ariel Ashwell will star as Sally Bowles. Tickets are on sale at Willard Straight Hall and McNeil's Music.

Sage Chapel Convocation

The Reverend T. William Hall, professor and chairman of the department of Religion at Syracuse University, will speak at the Sage Chapel convocation on Sunday at 11 a.m. His topic will be "Consciousness IV".

Geologist to View Growth Problems

Vincent C. McKelvey, director of the U.S. Geological Survey in Washington, D.C., will present a public lecture titled "Mineral Resources, Environmental Quality and the Limits to Growth" tomorrow. The talk, scheduled to start at 4 p.m., will be presented in 101 Phillips Hall.

McKelvey will discuss the pressure of increasing population and the rising expectation of the populace for material goods that ultimately are manufactured from raw materials taken from the earth. He will take into account the conflict of the desire for goods and services with the important priorities of environmental pollution, declining export income and wilderness preservation.

Communications Seminar Tomorrow

Pierre Renault, professor of "Animation Culturelle" at the University of Quebec will present a special communications seminar tomorrow at the Graduate Center of the Department of Communication Arts, 640 Stewart Ave.

The talk is scheduled for 3 p.m. and an additional symposium will be held at 7 p.m. at the graduate center.

Renault, who is a member of the National Film Board of Canada, will discuss "Political Change and the Democratization of Communication Technology — Quebec's Experience" and will present several films.

The seminar is sponsored jointly by the Department of Rural Sociology and Communication Arts at the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell.

Conference on Black Prisoners

Howard Moore, chief defense attorney for Angela Davis, will take part in an all-day conference on "Law, Justice and the Black Prisoner" Saturday.

The conference is sponsored by Graduate Student Association of the Africana Studies and Research Center at Cornell in order to "increase the awareness of the plight and hardships of the black political prisoner."

Moore will open the conference with a public lecture at 10 a.m. in Room 120 of Ives Hall. In addition to Moore, a number of speakers from throughout the country will take part in the conference.

Kermit Coleman, black civil liberties lawyer from Chicago, will speak about the deaths of Black Panthers Fred Hampton and Mark Clark, and the recent grand jury indictment of Illinois State Attorney Edward Hanrahan.

Dr. Lonnie Shabazz, Minister of Muhammad's Temple of Islam No. 4 Washington, D.C., and Brother Reico Cranshaw, formerly associated with Chicago's P. Stone Nation, will also be on the conference agenda.

Additional information may be obtained from Thomas Simmons or Reuben Munday at the Africana Center.

Busy Week for Purse Snatchers

Friday and Saturday evening proved to be times of easy picking for thieves interested in unattended wallets and purses. Other thefts during the week included two calculators — one electric and one a "mini" — and a telephoto lens.

A bicycle chained to a post was also stolen.

—Thursday evening, two freshmen women reported their unattended purses stolen from the Game Room of Noyes Center in separate incidents. At 7:45 p.m. the Safety Division received the first report from a South Baker Hall woman. Her purse and its contents were valued at $31. Less than an hour later, the second freshman woman, a resident of Sperry Hall, reported her purse stolen. It was valued at $5.

—The following night, four unattended purses were stolen from persons at a dance in the Memorial Room of Willard Straight Hall. The first report came from an Ithaca resident who said her purse, total value $45, was taken at about 9 p.m. An hour later, a graduate student reported a $35 loss — $3 in cash, plus eyeglasses and personal items. The following morning, a freshman engineering student in Founders Hall reported the theft of her purse during the same event, as well as that of her friend, an out-of-state visitor. Their combined losses were set at $41.

—Also, on Saturday wallets were stolen from three Syracuse lacrosse team players. The wallets, left in unsecured Teagle Hall lockers, were taken late in the afternoon. One player lost personal effects, but no money, while the other two lost $26 and $1 respectively in addition to personal items.

—A Denon electric calculator worth between $300 and $400 was stolen April 25 from Roberts Hall sometime during the week prior to the report. The report was made by a laboratory preparator.

—During approximately the same period, $50 in cash and a Craig mini calculator were stolen from Grumman Hall, according to a professor in aerospace engineering. Both the cash and the calculator, worth a total of $232, belonged to the professor's secretary. There were no signs of forced entry.

—Despite the fact it was chained to a post in the basement of University Hall 3, a $100 bicycle was stolen during the week and a half prior to April 26, the date a report was filed. The bike belonged to an engineering student, '75.

—At about 5:15 a.m. April 26, the Safety Division received a report on the theft of a $160 135mm telephoto lens stolen at 9:55 p.m. the previous evening from an Ithaca College student. The theft occurred in front of Willard Straight Hall.

—On the same day, April 26, reports were received on two incidents of vending machine break-ins. The first incident, reported at 12:30 a.m., occurred in Goldwin Smith Hall. The coin box was missing. At about 2:45 a.m., a building guard reported the coin box missing from a soda vending machine in Cascadilla Hall. The amount of money or merchandise missing is unknown.

—The New York State Police responded to a burglary in the golf pro shop of the Moakley House reported Monday morning at about 5:45 a.m. The break-in occurred sometime between 10:15 p.m. Sunday night and the time of the report. Entry was gained by breaking a window and a stockroom door. A safe in the stockroom had been struck with a blunt object, causing realignment of the dial. A check of the safe's contents revealed nothing missing.
