NSF Awards Cornell $2.7 Million Grant

Cornell has received a $2,760,000 grant from the National Science Foundation (NSF) for support of the University's Materials Science Center. The grant, effective from July 1, 1972, to March 31, 1974, is the largest from the federal government in the University's 107-year history.

With this grant, financial support of the center will pass entirely from the Advanced Research Projects Agency (ARPA) of the Department of Defense to the civilian-oriented NSF.

Robert E. Hughes, professor of chemistry and head of the center, said $2.2 million of the grant will be used for operating expenses and capital equipment; the remaining $560,000 is a building use charge paid by the government for use of Clark Hall where the center is headquartered.

The center includes 57 faculty members: 19 from the Department of Physics, 12 from the Department of Chemistry, 13 from the Department of Materials Science and Engineering, six from the School of Applied and Engineering Physics, four from the school of Electrical Engineering and three from the Department of Theoretical and Applied Mechanics. It also supports about 50 graduate students, approximately 16 postdoctoral candidates, 25 technicians and several visitors in the Cornell Materials Science Program each year.

The center was created in 1960 when ARPA granted money for its establishment as part of a program to stimulate research in materials science. Materials science is the area of research concerned with the investigation of physical and chemical processes of solids such as metals, ceramics, semiconductors and plastics. The center operates 12 central facilities in Clark Hall, Baker Laboratory and Bard Hall.

Sgt. Eisenberg Winds Up 35-Year Career

Part of the warp and woof that makes the fabric Cornell is the fact that 35 years ago this spring, Professor William Strunk Jr., the author of "The Elements of Style," crossed paths with big Jim Eisenberg.

It must have occurred to Strunk that the unemployed iron worker with the booming voice, the to-the-point, earthy dialogue and the tough but oh-so-gentle manner might be just the man to fill the police job open on campus.

"And besides," as big Jim puts it, "my wife Evie was a damn good cook and Strunk didn't want to lose her. Times were tough back in '37 and I was going to have to move out of Ithaca to find work. There were lots of guys trying to get that job at Cornell. But I guess that it was Strunk and C.V.P. Young (professor of physical education) who got it for me."

At the end of this month big Jim retires from the Safety Division and makes no bones about "leaving with a lump in my throat. I've had the best of it here. I've loved every minute of it. I've got more friends ... Cornell is the greatest place in the world. It's got the greatest bunch of people you'd ever want to meet in your life. I loved the place the minute I got here; I fell right into it."

And so he also has said many times, "if you don't like people and students, you don't have any damn business being here."

The elements of big Jim's style have changed little since he patrolled the campus on horseback, as Cornell's only policeman.

There's no doubt many an old grad back on campus this week will hear the familiar voice — seemingly always on the verge of laughter — let out with a "Why you old b*?x!" It's sure to bring back memories of the past when the voice bellowed from one end of campus to the other, little things like: "Hey you little so-and-so, get your butt out of there."

The son of a mule skinner from the coal fields of Pennsylvania, big Jim's voice and laughter have been his day-to-day tools. He's never worn a sidearm during his 35 years at Cornell. He says he's got a bad hip and the weight of the gun throws his back out of whack.

But no one ever accused Jim of being a pacifist, particularly the few students in the old says who felt the sting of his solid right cross. Things were different then, though. There were no lawsuits as an aftermath of such episodes. Usually there were

Bradley Writes History of Alumni Association

Hunt Bradley, Cornell's general alumni secretary, emeritus, and a graduate of the Class of 1926, dates his working association with his alma mater from his senior year, when he managed the Cornell track team at a historic meet against Oxford and Cambridge at Stamford Bridge, England. "But," he said, "Cornell had been my hobby ever since I was a freshman."

Nearly a half century later, Bradley's interest in Cornell affairs culminated in a book about the history of the University's alumni associations titled "Her Honor Forever Maintain." The title is from the second verse of the Alumni Song. The 180-page book commemorates the centennial anniversary of the founding of the Cornell Alumni Association in June, 1872. Bradley said the book, published by University Publications in hard cover, will be available at cost by early summer.

"The book was my original idea," Bradley said. "I knew many of the alumni personally."

The history has taken nearly three and a half years to write. "I started late in 1967, but not being a writer, I didn't realize it would take so long ... I'm not a Morris Bishop," he said.

Bishop, Class of 1914, Cornell historian and Kappa Alpha Professor of Romance Literature, Emeritus, wrote the introduction to Bradley's book, which is dedicated to the memory of Bradley's wife, Margaret Cornell Bradley.

Of the book, Bishop writes:

"All sorts of men crowd these pages, many of them, like Du Pratt White and Bob Treman and Foster Coffin, famous in Cornell history, many of them the worthy subordinates ... It is a great pleasure to meet again in these pages old friends summoned to live again briefly in the rosy glow of memory."

"No one but Hunt Bradley could have written this book," Bishop writes. "He is the complete Cornellian."

Bradley officially began to work for Cornell in 1948 and spent three years as an area director with the Greater Cornell Fund, a $12 million fund-raising campaign. He spent the next five years as executive secretary with the Cornell Alumni Fund, before being appointed general alumni secretary in 1956. He remained there for the next 11 years until 1967 when he became assistant to the president of Cornell for alumni relations, a post he held until his retirement in June, 1969. He continued to work for Cornell until 1971.

"I don't believe in retirement," said Bradley, who still maintains an office in the Alumni House.

There, surrounded by a total of 13,500 pages of

Hunt Bradley

Xeroxed material from old copies of The Cornell Era (1878-89), a weekly newspaper with some alumni articles, and the Cornell Alumni News, (1899 —), his two primary sources, as well as with personal tape recorded interviews, and with minutes from meetings of various alumni associations and files, Bradley wrote his book.

The rest of the material came from "ol' man Bradley's head," he admitted. "I had to write a whole chapter about myself, but I've kept myself out of the book except for that."

The book itself has six chapters and 50 illustrations — old photographs of men, buildings, committees, advertisements, facsimiles of original minutes and covers of the old publications, according to the author. The index contains 575 individual names of noted Cornellians. "There are a lot of famous fellows when you look back through the alumni," Bradley said.

"I don't discuss the alumnae at great length," he added, noting that the Associate Alumnae, founded in 1892, which became the Federation of Women's Clubs in the early 1900's, remained separate from the alumni association until 1939.

The original Cornell Alumni Association was founded in 1872. The first class graduated in 1869, but it was not until five years later that the University could claim 100 alumni — the minimum specified in the University's charter before alumni were allowed to elect one alumni trustee. This was changed in 1885 to allow alumni to elect two trustees.

The early alumni concerned themselves with University matters such as faculty salaries, the development of a three-year law curriculum, and rather unsuccessful fund-raising activities, according to Bradley.

This original association (1872-1903) was known as the Associated Alumni of Cornell University. In 1903, it was incorporated and remained unchanged for the next 20 years, when it was reorganized into the Cornell Alumni Corporation. The present Cornell Alumni Association was formed in 1939 to coordinate the alumni activities to the Association of Class Secretaries (founded in 1905 by Charles E. Treman '89), the Cornell Alumni News, and the Federation of Women's Clubs, and to cooperate with the Cornellian Council, a fund-raising organization founded in 1909.

Also in 1939, the association purchased the Alumni News, using the receipts from the sale of Cornell Glee Club records and of Wedgewood plates depicting 12 Cornell scenes to pay off much of the debt.

The Associated Alumni, the Association of Class Secretaries, the Alumni News and the Cornellian Council were instrumental in the creation of the Cornell Alumni Office in 1920 and in the establishment of the office of alumni representative, a post first held by Foster M. Coffin '12.

The association now includes about 130,000 living alumni, a category which today refers to both non-degree and degree holders who have attended Cornell.

Emmet J. Murphy '22 served as first alumni secretary of the alumni association from 1940 to 1942, and later also directed the Alumni Fund as general alumni secretary from 1945 to 1951. Walter C. Heasley was acting alumni secretary for three years during World War II, from 1942 to 1945.

R. Selden Brewer, Bradley's predecessor, became the second general alumni secretary in 1951, holding the post for five years. Frank R. Clifford '50, succeeded Bradley in 1967 and is the present general alumni secretary.

In gathering material for the book, Bradley traveled to many locations in the United States to tape record the recollections of men like Coffin and Murphy. He tracked down old photographs of key figures in the University's archives and even found a photo of the first alumni trustee, Samuel DuMont Halliday '70, at the Central Fire Station — Halliday was a volunteer member of Hook and Ladder No. 3.

Bradley's book is, Bishop writes, "a full-dress story of our alumni affairs."

The history will be available through the Cornell Alumni Association Merchandise Division at the Alumni House.

Safety First

Bicyclists Reminded of Regulations

With the increase of bicycle traffic on campus, the Cornell Traffic Bureau has issued a reminder to the community that bicycles, under law, are considered proper vehicles for street use and must be given the same consideration as motorized vehicles.

Bicycle riders are subject to all the rights and duties applicable to the driver of a vehicle, according to Lance W. Haus, a graduate student and administrator of transportation services.

The following regulations, summarized from the New York State Vehicle and Traffic Law, 1970-71, Article 34, apply specifically to bicycle riders:

1. Traffic laws in general apply to bicycle riders.
2. A bicycle rider must ride on a permanently attached seat with his feet on the pedals. A bicycle should carry no more than the number of persons for which it was designed.
3. No person riding a bicycle shall attach himself or his bicycle to another vehicle being operated on a roadway.
4. No vehicle operator shall knowingly allow a person to attach himself or any device to the operator's vehicle.
5. Bicycle riders must ride as close to the right side of the road as practicable, using care when passing a vehicle or bicycle standing or going in the same direction. Persons riding bicycles on a roadway must not ride more than two abreast, except on bicycle paths. Bicycle riders must use such paths, when provided adjacent to a roadway.
6. A bicycle operator shall not carry any article which prevents him from keeping at least one hand on the handle bars.
7. Every bicycle in use one-half hour after sunset to one-half hour before sunrise shall be equipped with a front lamp that emits a white light visible for 500 feet and a three-inch red reflector on the rear that is visible from 50 to 300 feet when directly in front of lawful upper beams of a motor vehicle. A red rear lamp may be used in addition to a reflector.

Also, a bicycle may not be operated unless equipped with a device capable of giving an audible signal that can be heard at least 100-feet away. Such a signal cannot be a siren or whistle. Every bicycle must have brakes that will enable the operator to make the braked wheels skid on dry, level, clean pavement.

J. Cima Named Asst. Corporate Secretary

Joyce White Cima has been elected assistant secretary of the corporation at Cornell, and becomes the first woman to hold a corporate office at the University. Announcement of the action taken by the University Board of Trustees was made by Neal R. Stamp, University counsel and secretary of the corporation.

In this position Mrs. Cima will have full authority to perform any and all of the duties of the secretary of the corporation under the secretary's general supervision. Among other duties, she becomes assistant secretary to the Board of Trustees and to its executive committee.

In making the announcement, Stamp noted that the promotion not only recognizes Mrs. Cima's past achievements, but also reflects the substantial increase in activity of the secretary's office due to the recent expansion of the Board of Trustees and the proliferation of trustee committee work.

Mrs. Cima had been administrative aide to Stamp since 1964 and had been on the staff of the dean of the New York State College of Human Ecology for three years prior to that time. Mrs. Cima earned her bachelor's degree from the College of Human Ecology and is a member of the Class of 1952.

Mrs. Cima is active in alumnae work of Alpha Xi Delta, a national women's social fraternity.

Sage Notes

All graduate students who hope to get a degree this fall are reminded that all requirements must be completed by Aug. 18, 1972. This includes the submission of an acceptable version of your thesis to the Theses Secretary by that date. The thesis should bear the date August, 1972.

Golf Coach G. Hall To Retire Sept. 1 After 38 Years

George L. Hall, the dean of Cornell coaches who has been in charge of golf since 1934, is retiring effective Sept. 1. Jon T. Anderson, director of athletics, announced last Friday.

Robert J. Kane, dean of physical education and athletics, said:

"George has become such a Cornell institution that it is inconceivable to think in terms of golf without him. . . . He came to Cornell during my senior year, so we have had a long and cherished friendship.

"He has a certain charisma and a native intelligence that few men have ever possessed."

A testimonial dinner for Hall will be held at the Moakley House tonight.

Hall, 68, a versatile professional, has been associated with the game ever since he was a youth and watched the late Water Hagen perform at the Rochester Country Club, near Hall's home.

He has long been associated with the great names in golf through his connection with the Professional Golfers Association (PGA). He served as chairman of the public relations committee and conducted the PGA's Caribbean and South American tours for several winters. For three years he was the professional at the Nassau (Bahamas) Golf Club.

Hall served as a vice president, a secretary, a treasurer and a member of the executive committee of the national PGA for 11 years. During those years, The Professional Golfer, official publication of the association, made some of its greatest advances. Hall became closely associated with such names as Arnie Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Gene Sarazen, Ben Hogan, Byron Neslon, Dr. Cary Middlecoff, Bobby Locke and innumerable other headliners in the game.

At Cornell, Hall's name has been synonymous with golf for almost 40 years and he has been the University's only director of the program. A graduate of the Rochester Business Institute, he came to Cornell in 1934 as an instructor and eventually as coach. Before starting here, he had worked as an assistant at the Corning Country Club, becoming head professional in 1928.

Hall's teams had a record of 163 wins, 112 losses and eight ties. In 1946 his team won the Eastern championship. His club this spring had a 7-3 mark and placed fifth in the 21-school Eastern tournament, one of the Big Red's best showings in recent years.

As a teacher of the game, George is recognized throughout the nation. He has worked with many top amateurs and professionals, both men and women.

Joseph P. Ripley, George Newbury

2 Named Presidential Councillors

Two former bankers, Joseph P. Ripley of New York City and George A. Newbury of Buffalo, were elected Presidential Councillors at Cornell at the May meeting of the Board of Trustees.

Election as a Presidential Councillor is "a distinction conferred for life upon men and women who during their most active years have given high service to Cornell and have made an outstanding contribution to the future of higher education."

No more than 25 persons can hold the designation at one time. With the election of Ripley and Newbury, 17 persons now serve on the panel.

In announcing the elections, University President Dale R. Corson said:

"Mr. Ripley has achieved a respected reputation in the area of finance and investments and it is in this professional field that he devoted his efforts to the betterment of his alma mater. His dedication, loyalty, concern and deep interest have not wavered, as Cornell has always been uppermost in his priorities."

"The service of George Newbury is an outstanding example of a dedicated alumnus continually at work for his alma mater. Ever willing to assist, he continues to work tirelessly toward our never-ending and common objective of strengthening Cornell's position of educational leadership."

Ripley, a native of Oak Park, Ill., is a member of Cornell's Class of 1912. In 1922 he entered the field of investment banking in New York City with W.A. Harriman & Co., Inc. From 1925 to 1934 he was an officer with the National City Company. In 1934 he took part in the organization of Harriman Ripley & Co., Inc., serving as chairman of the board from 1958 to 1966. Since then, he has been honorary chairman of Drexel Harriman Ripley, Inc.

Ripley served on the Cornell Board of Trustees from 1944 to 1959, when he was named a trustee emeritus. During his 15 years on the board he served on the investment committee and was committee chairman for 12 years.

For several years he represented Cornell as a member of the Joint Administrative Board of the New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center in New York City. In 1964, during Cornell's Centennial Campaign, he gave the University $300,000 to establish the Joseph P. Ripley Professorship in Engineering.

Ripley was one of the founders of The Tower Club, an organization of men and women who give $1,000 or more each year to Cornell.

Newbury, retired president of the Manufacturers and Traders Trust Company of Buffalo, is a member of the Cornell Class of 1917 and the holder of a Cornell law degree. He is counsel to Hodgson, Russ, Andrews, Woods & Goodyear, a Buffalo law firm.

He entered law practice in 1919 with Ottaway & Munson in Westfield. In 1924 he joined the firm of Locke, Babcock, Adams & Hollister (later Babcock, Newbury & Russ) in Buffalo. Newbury left the practice of law in 1946 to become executive vice president of Manufacturers and Traders Trust, becoming president in 1954, in which capacity he served until his retirement in 1962.

Newbury was appointed to the Cornell Board of Trustees by the Governor in 1959 and served for 10 years. During that time he was a member of the buildings and properties and investment committees. He was elected a trustee emeritus in 1969.

He served three years as national chairman for the Cornell Fund, the University's annual alumni fund-raising campaign, and was the first chairman of The Tower Club.

Fenner, Zeilie Named Successors to Hall, Dividing Golf Duties

Two long-time assistants to George Hall, veteran golf professional at Cornell who is retiring Sept. 1, will replace him in his multiple duties, according to Jon T. Anderson, director of athletics.

They are James H. Fenner, who becomes head golf coach and head professional, and Joseph P. Zeilie, who will be the teaching professional, director of instruction for men's and women's physical education golf, and manager of the Moakley House.

"I have been aware of the attributes of these men and am confident both will perform at the highest level," Anderson said.

Fenner, 41, has been a teaching professional, freshman coach and is manager of Cornell's golf shop. He has taught physical education classes and has given group and private lessons. He has supervised various club events, including tournaments, among them 11 Central New York Professional Golfers Association (PGA) tournaments.

He served in the Navy from 1951 through 1953 and attended Cornell. He is a member of the Class of 1953.

Fenner is a member of the PGA.

Zeilie, 51, has been a teaching professional and secretary-treasurer of the Central New York PGA from 1966 to 1970. He has been a delegate to the national PGA meetings the last five years and had an article on group golf instruction published in the April, 1953 issue of Golfdom Magazine.

He is from Endicott, and is a 1939 graduate of Union-Endicott High School where he was an outstanding player, winning the Section IV title in 1939. He was a scratch handicap player for the En-Joie Golf Club in Endicott from 1941 through 1945.

From 1946 through 1950 he was an assistant professional at the En-Joie Club, coming to Cornell as a teaching professional and assistant to Hall in 1951.

Reply to Faculty Anti-War Group

Editor:

In your issue of May 25 under "Chronicle Comment" appeared two pages, entitled "Faculty Anti-War Group Responds to May 11 White Paper." I would appreciate the opportunity of making a brief rejoinder to the "Faculty Anti-War Group."

Now that both the University Hearing Board, made up of faculty, students and staff, and the Supreme Court of the State of New York have made it clear that the occupation of Carpenter Hall was unlawful and represented a gross invasion of the rights of all members of the Cornell community, it is discouraging to find not a word of criticism for the outrageous performance of those occupants but only criticism for "too much university time and money ... spent prosecuting..." them.

To turn, nevertheless, to the four issues raised by the "Faculty Anti-War Group," CAL, ROTC, "War-Related Research on Campus," and University Investment Policies, a few observations might be made.

CAL

Whatever the wisdom of the trustees' decision to sell CAL, the stewardship of this valuable asset of Cornell University and the price to be realized for it cannot be based on either the political views of various groups on the campus or the political views of the trustees themselves. The law of trusts for centuries has made trustees of educational institutions responsible for safeguarding property held by them for the institution and for its disposition at no less than its true value. If the trustees were to adopt the proposal of the "Faculty Anti-War Group" that "...Cornell accept no new classified research at CAL..." and "...not permit the renewal of any existing contracts involving classified research..." there, it seems clear that the resale price of CAL would be immediately and adversely affected. The law simply does not permit trustees to destroy the value of assets held by them in a fiduciary capacity, and the penalty can be a surcharge for such loss against their individual property.

Let Us Not Condone Disruption

ROTC

To reveal a faint glimpse at the obvious, there is not a consensus on the Cornell campus with respect to ROTC. As against the profound distaste for it in any form expressed by the "Faculty Anti-War Group," there are many who would retain it with various modifications and those who see ROTC as a strength of the nation that cannot be turned on or off like a faucet, depending upon the political popularity of American foreign policy with certain groups at a given time. In any case, after prolonged debate and not without some disruption a compromise was arrived at and is being supervised by a student-faculty committee. Since the compromise was not a surrender to the views of the "Faculty Anti-War Group," they are unable to accept it.

Now comes the proposal, from the Group, slyly couched in terms of criticism of President Corson's temporary suspension of persons charged with occupation of Carpenter Hall, that the President "...temporarily suspend the full time officers of the Air Force and Navy attached to Cornell..."

Faculty colleagues, you have dismally failed to do your homework! The Rules for the Maintenance of Public Order limit the suspension power of the President to persons charged with violation of the Rules on the Cornell campus.

"War-Related Research on Campus"

As to "War-Related Research on Campus," the "Faculty Anti-War Group" suggests a "...major public debate in the fall, on the scale of a teach-in." This may be the most sensible suggestion from the "Group," but the term "teach-in" reminds some readers of past "teach-ins" on Vietnam, for example, where only one point of view was presented. A debate connotes presentation of both sides of a controversy.

University Investment Policies

In some respects this issue is the most perplexing one raised by the "Faculty Anti-War Group." The position of the Group is that faculty and students should share in the responsibility for making investment decisions. Here again, as in the case of CAL, there is law on the subject. The law places on the trustees and only on the trustees the responsibility for husbanding the investment assets of an educational institution. No trustee can avoid personal liability for the consequences of an imprudent investment decision by explaining that he was simply responding to "rage on campus." Input from faculty and students has been accepted by the trustees; ways of acquiring input from that huge but neglected element of the Cornell community, the former students, our alumni, have not been developed, and the fiduciary responsibility of the trustees under the law goes even further: they must weigh the consequences of investment decisions on the students yet to come for whom the institution must be preserved.

The complexity of investment decisions is pointed up by the recent news that a bastion of the Third World, the refuge of Eldridge Cleaver, etc., Algeria, has contracted with Gulf Oil Corporation to sell its crude oil in the world market!

In closing may I say to my friends of the "Faculty Anti-War Group" what I believe is the view of the quiet majority of the Cornell campus: we do not like the Indochinese War either, but let's not permit our feelings about it to convulse Cornell University with vandalism and disruption, and let's discuss the issues that divide us without any encouragement, even implied, for the unlawful occupation of university buildings.

William Tucker Dean
Professor of Law

Dr. A.H. Hayes Named Associate Medical Dean

Dr. Arthur H. Hayes Jr. has assumed the post of associate dean of Cornell University Medical College after having been assistant dean since 1970.

He will continue to serve as head of the Office of Academic Programs (OAP), with responsibility for the organization and implementation of the Medical College's curriculum.

Commenting on the promotion, Dr. J. Robert Buchanan, CUMC dean, praised Dr. Hayes for the "superb job he has done in helping to design our new academic program. It is to him that we must give major credit for the administration of our curriculum changes."

As head of the OAP, Dr. Hayes is in charge of reviewing and evaluating the new first and second year curricula, including the new elective program for these years; implementing and evaluating the new pass-fail-honors grading system; exploring suggestions for new courses and research projects; and counseling students in these areas.

In addition to his administrative and teaching duties, Dr. Hayes is very much involved in research and patient care. Now associate professor of pharmacology, he continues his investigation of cardiovascular drugs, especially the antiarrhythmic agents, studying their efficacy, toxicity, and kinetics. He is also working with the atropinic drugs to determine their effect on the neural control of heart rate.

Dr. Hayes also holds an appointment in the Department of Medicine as assistant professor, and serves as assistant attending physician-in-charge of the Pacemaker Clinic.

Dr. Paul Ebert Appointed To New Chair in Surgery

Dr. Paul A. Ebert, chairman of the Department of Surgery at Cornell University Medical College, has been named to the Johnson & Johnson Distinguished Professorship in Surgery.

The establishment of this new chair is being made possible by a pledge of $500,000 from Johnson & Johnson, the medical products manufacturer, through its Associated Industries Fund.

The company awarded identical gifts to Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons and New York University School of Medicine so that they could also set up new chairs in surgery at their institutions.

An outstanding cardiovascular surgeon with an exceptionally broad background in general surgery, Dr. Ebert has been chairman of the department since Feb. 1, 1971. He came to The New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center from Duke University Medical Center, where he had been associate professor of surgery.

Ithaca Summer Repertory Set

An enjoyable treat is in store for playgoers of the region with the just-announced summer schedule for the Ithaca Summer Repertory. The third season of repertory produced jointly by the theatre departments of Cornell University and Ithaca College again offers six plays, with 10 performances of each on 40 evenings, over an eight-week period. The season opens June 22 and continues through Aug. 12, with three plays given in the theatre in Willard Straight Hall at Cornell and three in the Ithaca College Performing Arts Building.

Season tickets are now available, whereby all six plays may be seen for the price of five. Single admission tickets will also be available for all performances. Tickets will be sold on both campuses at the respective theatres and will also be available this year in Rothschild's Department Store in downtown Ithaca, at the rear of the first floor. Box Office hours will be noon-5 p.m. Monday through Saturday (Tuesday through Saturday at Rothschild's) and from 7 p.m. to curtain time at the theatres on performance evenings.

Group rates are available. Senior citizen discounts apply. This year a Student Rush Policy will enable students of any level who present their ID cards at the box office of either theatre, 15 minutes before curtain time, to purchase remaining seats at considerable discount. A season brochure may be obtained, giving full details on the summer season, from the Theatre Business Office in Willard Straight (256-5165).

Opening the season on June 22 at Cornell will be a highly-acclaimed award-winning play, "Home" by David Storey, a memorable and poignant work with subtle hints of ribaldry. At Ithaca College on the same evening will be the long-running musical "Jacques Brel is Alive and Well and Living in Paris." Book is by Eric Blau and Mort Shuman, based on Brel's lyrics and commentary, and with music by Jacques Brel. The two will give further performances in tandem on June 23, 24, 25, July 1, 7, 12, 23, Aug. 1 and 9.

On June 29, Kurt Vonnegut Jr.'s "Happy Birthday, Wanda June" opens alone at Ithaca College. It may also be seen on June 30, July 2, 8, 13, 16, 25, 29, Aug. 2 and 11.

At Cornell on July 5, Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew" opens, followed by performances on July 6, 9, 14, 15, 21, 26, Aug. 3, 6, and 12. This classic takes on a Mexican flavor, a Mexico of 1912, in this production.

Also playing in tandem and opening July 19: at Ithaca College, Joe Orton's "What the Butler Saw," and at Cornell, "Lady Windermere's Fan," with some of Oscar Wilde's most brilliant wit. The two give additional performances July 20, 22, 27, 28, 30, Aug. 4, 5, 8 and 10.

There will be an extra "Special" feature added to the repertory schedule this summer in "Sunday Circus" — a short, informal, and extremely varied program of all kinds of theatrical fare — music, song, dance, short plays, etc. — given Sunday afternoons in Drummond Studio at 2 p.m. These are scheduled for July 2, 9, 16, 23, 30 and Aug. 6.

The acting company appearing in all six plays and in "Sunday Circus" is made up of area professionals, graduates in Cornell's MFA professional program, and talented students from both campuses.

Reunion Supplement

1972 Reunion of Cornell Alumni Features a Variety of Events

As a service to Cornell alumni returning to the campus for reunion, Cornell Chronicle today prints a special section containing pertinent reunion data ranging from timetables to an in-depth history of the Van Cleef Memorial Dinner.

It is the hope of the Cornell Chronicle staff and the staff of the Office of Alumni Affairs that this Chronicle special will prove to be a valuable and informative aid to those attending reunion activities.

The annual President's Cup Golf Tournament, an 18-hole tournament, begins on Thursday morning on the University Golf Course and continues through Friday and Saturday. The cup itself will be presented Saturday at Cornelliana Night in Bailey Hall at 9:30 p.m. and will be inscribed with the winner's name and class. Prizes will also be awarded to the runners up and to the winners in the women's division. Even to nonparticipants, the tournament presents an opportunity to view the beautiful 18-hole University Course.

Entry blanks are available from George L. Hall, the University golf professional, and his staff at the Course.

Alumni Luncheons

A traditional feature of the Reunion program, the alumni luncheons serve as a meeting place for all returning Cornellians. The luncheons will be held Friday and Saturday, June 9 and 10 at 11:30 a.m. in Barton Hall. Tables for the various classes will be reserved. The luncheons are catered by the Department of Dining Services and there will be an a la carte menu to choose from. Many classes will have their class pictures taken at this time. This year, immediately following the Saturday luncheon, President Corson will give his report to alumni.

Faculty-Alumni Forum

Alumni returning for reunions have almost universally been disappointed in the lack of faculty contact during the weekend.

A new dimension has been added to the Reunion schedule which was planned to overcome the criticism — the Barton Hall Faculty-Alumni Forum.

Barton Hall has been arranged as an exhibit center for 33 departments of the University. Each department has a booth which will be occupied by faculty from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Friday and from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday.

The concept, according to Frank R. Clifford, director of alumni affairs, is to present the University faculty in an informal atmosphere by using Barton Hall as a focal point for the reunion program.

There will be more than 100 faculty present at the booths. However, Clifford said, "The success of the program rests with you, the alumni. The physical arrangements were planned to facilitate the traffic flow. The design and decorating are early YASNY. The faculty signed on enthusiastically, but — it is you, the alumni, who must take the initiative to make it all work. We are confident you will find it an enjoyable and enlightening experience."

Reunion Forums

The Reunion Forum program for this year, above and beyond the innovative Barton Hall Faculty Forum, continues to reflect the University's desire to give a number of prominent members of the alumni body the opportunity to share the platform with distinguished members of the University faculty and staff.

The program is a varied one.

Today at 8 p.m. in Alice Statler Auditorium, there will be a movie and discussion on "Ornithology at Cornell" with Olin Sewall Pettingill Jr., director of the Laboratory of Ornithology.

Tomorrow at 9:30 a.m., also in Alice Statler Auditorium, "Something of Value," a slide show and panel discussion on estate planning. Members of the panel will be Joseph B. Buglieri, associate professor of agricultural economics and of public administration; Robert S. Smith, professor of farm finance; James S. Reid '37, vice president and trust officer of the First National Bank, Washington, D.C.; George A. Newbury '17, trustee emeritus and a member of the National Estate Affairs Committee; and G. Richard Gottshalk, director of the Office of Estate Affairs.

At 2:30 p.m. tomorrow, Urie Bronfenbrenner, professor of human development and family studies, will explore the roots of alienation through a movie entitled "A Place to Meet; A Way to Understand."

Saturday at 10 a.m. in Alice Statler Auditorium, Representatives Howard W. Botis '37, LLB '39, Republican of the 33rd Congressional District, and Ogden R. Reid, Democrat of the 26th Congressional District (both New York State), will present a panel on "National Elections '72." The discussion will focus on why each man supports his position in relation to the administration.

Alumni Meeting

A highlight of reunion for many is the annual joint meeting of the Cornell Alumni Association and the Cornell Fund Board. Robert Cowie '55, president of the Alumni Association, and Harold Uris '26, chairman of the Cornell Fund, will each present a summary of the year's activities at the meeting to be held in conjunction with the alumni luncheon Saturday in Barton Hall.

At the meeting, also, University President Dale R. Corson will give his report to alumni, and the result of the alumni trustee election will be announced. Another highlight of the meeting will be the presentation of the $1,000 Excellence in Teaching Award. The award, given to a faculty member for excellence in engineering teaching, is this year being awarded jointly by the Cornell Society of Engineers and Tau Beta Pi, the scholastic honorary engineering fraternity.

Cornell Women's Breakfast

Dr. Barbara Everitt Bryant '47 will be the guest speaker at the All-Cornell Women's Breakfast to be held at 8 a.m. on Saturday in the Memorial Room of Willard Straight Hall.

Since 1970 Mrs. Bryant has been employed with a Detroit market research and opinion surveying firm and is currently vice president for Social Research. Her topic, "Now That You Ask ... Opinion Polling in an Election Year," is a timely subject for this presidential election year.

All alumnae are cordially invited to attend this year's breakfast, a tradition which began in 1899 when a luncheon was served in connection with the June business meeting of the Cornell Women Graduates Association, forerunner of the Federation of Cornell Women's Clubs.

Memorial Service

The Rev. S. Hall Barrett '22 will deliver the memorial meditation at the interreligious Alumni Reunion Memorial Service Sunday at 10 a.m. in Sage Chapel.

Barrett received a bachelor of arts degree from Cornell and a bachelor of divinity degree from Union Theological Seminary in 1925. He was ordained that same year by the Presbytery of Long Island at Sag Harbor, and later did graduate work at Syracuse University and Auburn Theological Seminary.

He retired from his position as minister of the

Welcome from Corson

Dear Cornellian:

Welcome back to the University for Reunion '72.

Your stay on campus will be all too brief, but I hope in the time you have you will get a sense of the continuity of Cornell's focus and dedication to the ideals of educational excellence. In a period when it seems so much of our time is consumed by matters that are, in a sense, peripheral to the basic purpose of our University, the constancy of our educational process tends to become obscured.

I want to assure each of you returning for Reunion, as well as all other alumni, that Cornell has not deviated from its mission. We are still going about the business of educating an outstanding student body with a faculty that is without peer.

Please take advantage of the activities that have been planned for you and in particular, I hope you will visit the Barton Hall Alumni-Faculty Forum. More than thirty University Departments will be represented with at least one hundred members of the faculty present both Friday and Saturday.

You will have an opportunity to learn of developments in the disciplines represented as well as the University in general.

I hope you have an enjoyable Reunion.

Sincerely,

Dale R. Corson,

University President

Welcome from Cowie

Fellow Cornellian:

On behalf of the Alumni Association I want to welcome you to Reunion '72.

The Reunion Program, which combines the planning of your Class Reunion Committee and the University is designed for your enjoyment and information. I believe you will find it advantageous to join in the festivities as much as possible. It will add to your pleasure as well as your knowledge of the University as it is today.

Those of us who serve as officers of the Alumni Association are pleased with the manner in which alumni are responding to the many activities in the University's alumni program but Reunion is special because it is a time of revitalization of our Cornell interests and friendships and also a time of reaffirmation of the wisdom of our choice to become Cornellians.

I hope your stay will be all you anticipated and at its conclusion you will take with you all the pleasures of a successful and happy Reunion.

Robert A. Cowie '55, President
Cornell Alumni Association

Savage Club To Perform At Reunion

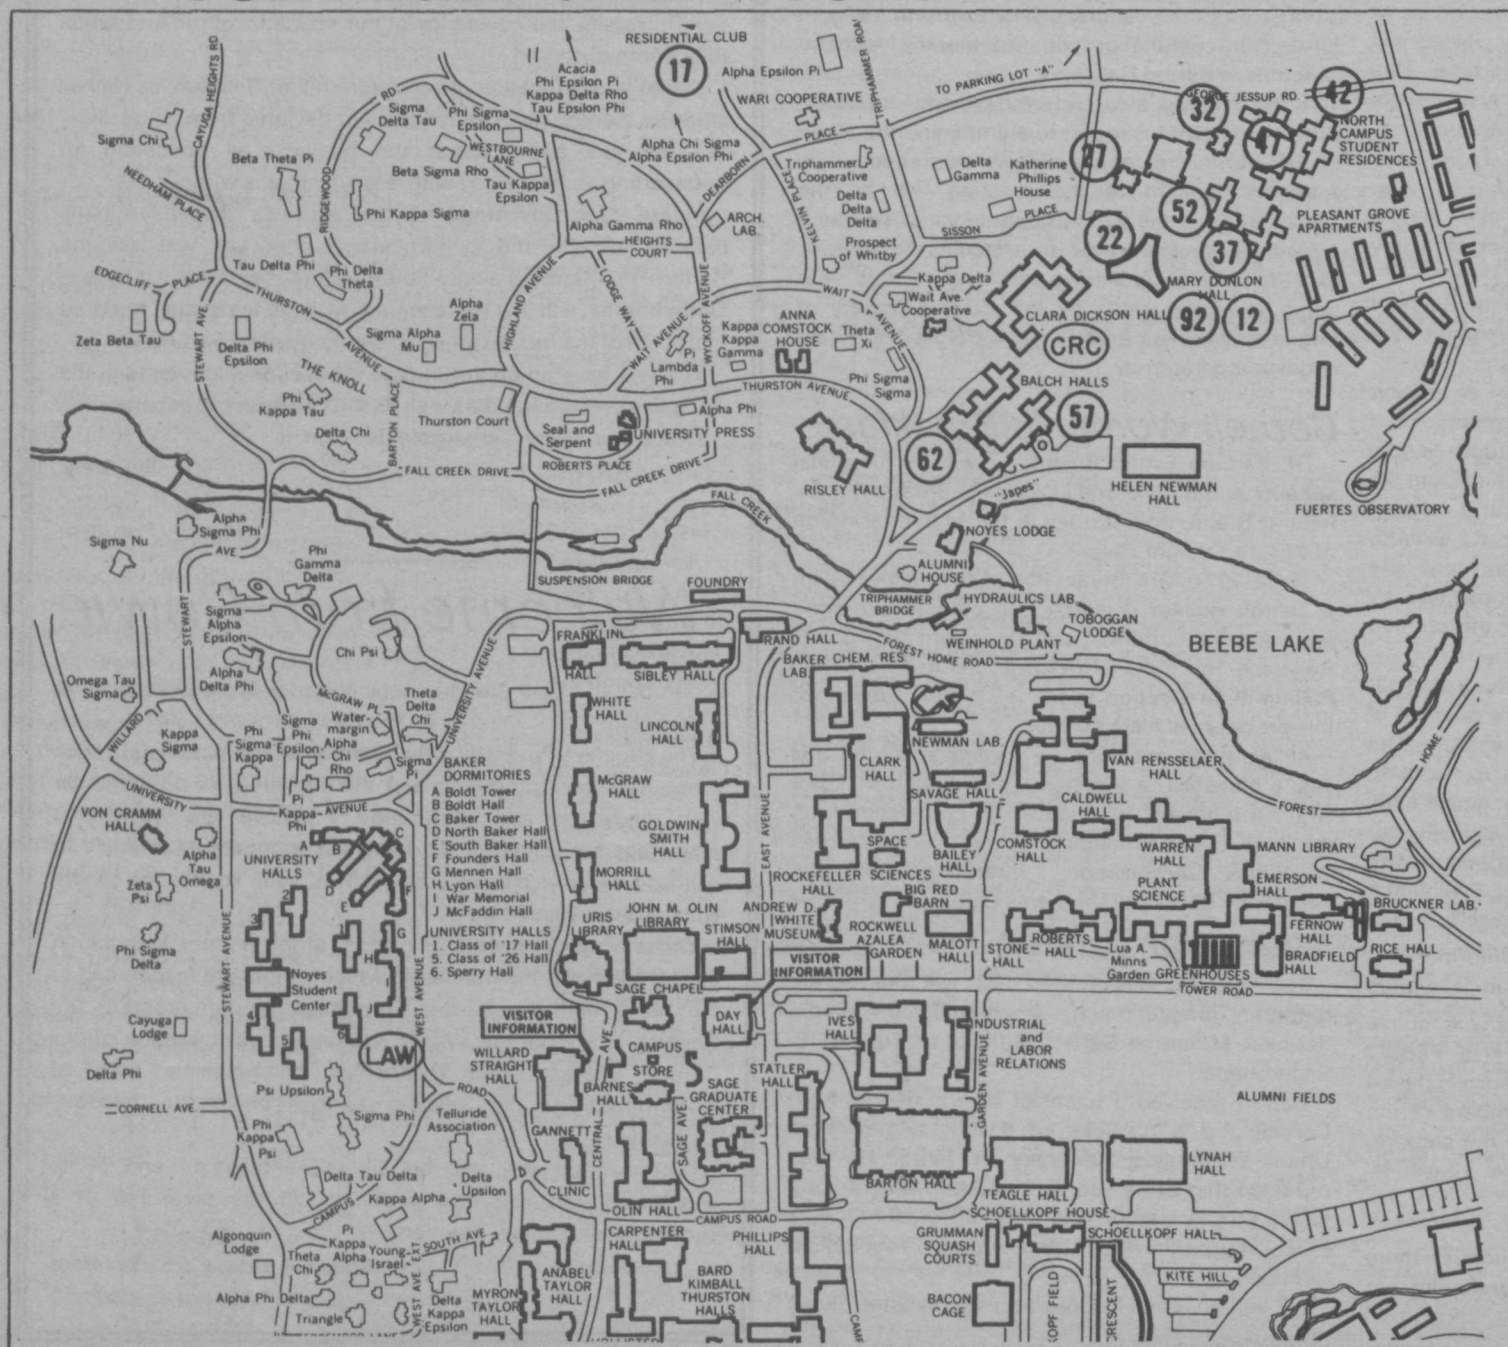

Ithaca's Savage Club will perform at this year's reunion tomorrow at 9 p.m. in Bailey Hall.

The Savage Club of Ithaca was formed in 1895 by a group of Cornell undergraduates who had performed for the original Savage Club of London in that year. The London group was founded in 1857.

The Cornellians who performed in England were members of the Glee Club and had accompanied the Cornell crew then competing in the Henley Regatta. The Ithacans and Savages were apparently delighted with each other, and when the Cornellians returned to Ithaca, they wrote the London group asking permission to form a Savage Club of Ithaca. The group became active in the fall of 1895, the only one in North America.

The group has members from Cornell, Ithaca College, and the Ithaca area. Membership is based on the ability of an individual to entertain the group when called upon by the president. Authors, artists, dramatists, and musicians have enriched the club with their talents for the past 74 years.

Items of Interest

White Museum of Art

The Andrew Dickson White Museum of Art in what was once the President's House on the corner of East Avenue and Tower Road, has since its founding been guided by two basic objectives: to serve as one of the major teaching arms of the University, enhancing the function of the various art faculties, and to provide a broader cultural experience for the student body and the wider community of Ithaca and the Finger Lakes Region.

By 1973, the museum will have a new home. The Herbert F. Johnson Museum of Art, made possible through the generosity of Herbert F. Johnson '22, will be built at the Southwest corner of University and Central Avenues.

Currently on view in the White Museum are the Dr. and Mrs. Milton Kramer collection; sculpture, prints and drawings by Robert Dowd; recent acquisitions (paintings, sculpture and prints); and modern European paintings.

Sapsucker Woods

The Cornell Laboratory of Ornithology is a world center for the study and appreciation of bird wildlife. Dedicated in 1957, the Laboratory is centered in the Lyman K. Stuart Observatory at Sapsucker Woods sanctuary, three miles northeast of the main campus.

Ornithology at Cornell owes its origin to the efforts of the late Professor Arthur A. Allen '08, and it was he who initiated the special tours to the Laboratory which have become a tradition on Reunion weekends. Throughout the year, visitors from all over the world cross the threshold of the uniquely designed Stuart Observatory, and many of them walk the four miles of well-marked trails that wind through the woods and fields of the 180-acre sanctuary. Within the Sanctuary, over 200 species of birds have been seen at one time or another and at least 60 species nest each year.

In the Stuart Observatory, where picture windows overlook a ten-acre pond, home of a variety of waterfowl, visitors may enjoy watching the birds while listening to the Laboratory's famed bird-song recordings, all of them produced under the direction of Professor Emeritus Peter Paul Kellogg. Paintings of birds by prominent naturalist-artists, including Richard E. Bishop '09, Roy Mason, and Cornell's beloved Louis Agassiz Fuertes, are on exhibit, along with outstanding color photographs. A modest reference library is available for leisurely browsing. It includes most of the leading ornithological journals, received in exchange for the Laboratory's own publication, The Living Bird. Visitors wishing to assist and participate in the program of the Laboratory are invited to become supporting members.

Cornell Plantations

The intrinsic value of its physical environment has been recognized by Cornell since its founding. The Cornell Plantations was established in 1944 as a continuation and expansion of the Cornell Arboretum and is the outdoor laboratory and arboretum enterprise of the University.

The Plantations is responsible for 1,500 acres. Its objectives are (1) to preserve as much as possible of existing natural resources for study and inspiration; (2) to enhance the natural setting by judicious planting of native materials, exotic species, and specially cultivated strains; (3) to maintain and develop these existing resources in support of instructional and research programs in the natural sciences, and (4) to stimulate awareness of the educational and aesthetic value of the University's natural surroundings.

Visitors who come in June can see azaleas in bloom in the Mary Rockwell Azalea Garden, a display of poisonous plants in the W. C. Muenscher Garden, wildflowers blooming in a section of the Rockwell Field Laboratory, rhododendrons growing in Mitchell Woods, and a variety of woody plants dotted throughout the Test Garden. Collections of viburnums, lilacs, tree peonies, and hedges can also be viewed at various points on the campus. The work of the Plantations is in evidence throughout Cornell's environs.

Cornell Alumni News

To continue the spirit of Reunion, more than 50,000 alumni now read the prize-winning Cornell Alumni News. It keeps them in touch with classmates and other Cornell friends. Colorful and informative articles and picture stories on the work of the University written by faculty members and others; sprightly comment and interpretation of the passing scene by Bob Kane '34, John Marcham '50, the editor, and others; and reports on "personalities" in sports, the faculty, and the alumni appear throughout the year.

Every alumnus is a shareholder of the News, because every alumnus is a member of the Cornell Alumni Association which owns and directs the magazine. It is published by and for alumni; it has been published continuously since 1899.

Reunion Central Tent

All alumni are invited to join in the festivities at the Reunion Central Tent. It will be located behind Mary Donlon Hall and will be open 8 p.m.-1 a.m. Friday and 1:30-4:30 p.m. and 8 p.m.-1 a.m. Saturday. There will be two live bands, free beer, dancing and places to sit. A visit to the Reunion Central Tent is a must.

The Van Cleef Dinner

The following passages from "Behind the Ivy" by the late Romeyn Berry '04 (Cornell University Press, 1950) capture the spirit in which the Van Cleef Dinners were founded and which has prevailed at them ever since.

"Mynderse Van Cleef came from Seneca Falls, but he stayed in Ithaca after he graduated in 1874.

He was a Trustee, attorney for the University, president of the (Ithaca) bank, and all the other things that you can't escape when once you're that.

He liked Class Reunions, organized, managed, and attended all his own, and was rather put out when informed that formal Reunions were supposed to end with the Fiftieth.

"It was characteristic of the man that what he didn't like he did something about. When he found there were many Old Timers in town who like himself, had had their Fiftieth and now had no place to go, he rounded up the lot and invited them to dinner.

"After that, the Van Cleef Dinner became an annual affair...

"And now we come to the nubbin of the story! When Mynderse Van Cleef died, his daughters (Jeannette Van Cleef — Mrs. Arthur W. Booth — and the late Miss Eugenia Van Cleef endowed his Reunion dinners for Old Timers. Nobody could stop him doing what he wanted to while he lived, and the girls fixed things so nobody should stop him when he wasn't around any more to attend to matters himself ... It will always be the Van Cleef Dinner to which the ancients repair on Saturday evening to recall old days and to argue whether President White did, or did not, personally ring the Chimes after the Saratoga regatta of 1875."

David Kaser, director of Cornell University Libraries, will speak at this year's Van Cleef Dinner on "The Twenty-first Century Library for Cornell."

The dinner will be held in the Memorial Room of Willard Straight Hall at 6:30 p.m. Saturday.

Trustees Name Four Professors Emeritus

Knight Biggerstaff, Chinese History

Knight Biggerstaff, professor of Chinese history, has been named professor of history, emeritus, by the University Board of Trustees, effective upon his retirement July 1.

Biggerstaff is the author of "The Earliest Modern Government Schools in China" (1961), co-author with S.Y. Teng of "An Annotated Bibliography of Selected Chinese Reference Works" (1936, 1950, 1971), a contributing editor of the Rand McNally "Atlas of World History" (1957) and "World History Wall Map Series" (1962). He is the author of a number of articles on modern Chinese history.

Biggerstaff joined the Cornell faculty in the fall of 1938 as an assistant professor, advancing to professor in 1946. He had taught Chinese history and language at the University of Washington in Seattle from 1936 to 1938. During 1943-44 he headed the Chinese Area and Language Section of the Army Specialized Training Program at Cornell. He was chairman of Cornell's Department of Far Eastern (now Asian) Studies from 1946 to 1956, and of the Department of History in the College of Arts and Sciences from 1956 to 1964.

Born in Berkeley, Calif., Biggerstaff was graduated from the University of California at Berkeley with a bachelor's degree in 1927. He received his master's degree in 1928 and his doctorate in 1934 from Harvard University.

Biggerstaff was a graduate student in Peiping, China, from 1928 to 1931, studying for the first year in the North China Union Language School and the subsequent years in Yenching University on a Harvard-Yenching Institute Fellowship. In 1934 he returned to Peiping for two years on a post-doctoral Social Science Research Council Fellowship. In 1944-45 he was a China specialist in the Department of State in Washington. The following year he was Chinese Secretary of the American Embassy in Chungking.

Trevor Cuykendall, Engineering

Trevor R. Cuykendall, the Spencer T. Olin Professor of Engineering who has been associated with Cornell for 43 years, has been awarded emeritus status by the Board of Trustees.

During his long association with Cornell, Cuykendall has made many significant contributions to the college and to the engineering profession. Included in his long list of accomplishments is his role in development of an undergraduate program in engineering physics which was introduced in 1946.

The first course in nuclear engineering at Cornell was initiated in 1952 under his direction. He also is responsible for the development of the program for a graduate major in this field and for construction of a special laboratory building housing a nuclear reactor used for training as well as for research.

During the 1930's Cuykendall's research interests in thin gauge steel, precision casting and photoelastic methods for studying stresses in earth dams formed a link between the disciplines of engineering and physics. He was director of a research project at Cornell for the American Iron and Steel Institute on mechanics of thin gauge formed structural shapes from 1938 to 1941. Continuation and extension of this project has led to building codes for this type of structural members.

With the late Henri S. Sack, Cuykendall developed a method of measuring soil moisture and density in the field by scattering of neutron and gamma radiation.

As a consultant for the U.S. Engineering Department, New York District, from 1939 to 1941, he applied methods of stabilizing dikes during construction of the Washington National Airport.

He was named the Spencer T. Olin Professor of Engineering in 1966, a title he will retain in his emeritus status.

Howard Fairchild, Engineering

Howard N. Fairchild, a professor of mechanical engineering in the College of Engineering and a faculty member for 40 years, has been awarded the title of professor of mechanical engineering, emeritus, by the Board of Trustees. The award is effective July 1.

Fairchild joined the Cornell faculty as an instructor in 1930 after earning the degree mechanical engineer in 1929 and the degree electrical engineer in 1930 at the University. Except for two years in his career, when he was an instructor in the Department of Mechanical Engineering at Pennsylvania State College, he has taught thermal engineering at Cornell continuously since his initial appointment.

Fairchild progressed from his post as instructor to the positions of assistant professor of heat power and experimental engineering, associate professor of mechanical engineering and, ultimately, professor.

Fairchild is regarded at the Sibley School of Mechanical Engineering as the authority in the Department of Thermal Engineering in the area of thermal technology. He offers senior and graduate-level courses in such subjects as refrigeration, air conditioning and combustion engines. He has been particularly effective in developing the program leading to the professional degree of master of engineering (mechanical), and has served as faculty adviser for the design projects of many students in this program.

Fairchild served as Secretary of the Faculty of the Sibley School of Mechanical Engineering during the past four years.

During World War II, Fairchild was assigned to the Naval Training School that was established at Cornell, and took charge of classroom and laboratory instruction in Diesel engines. During his Cornell tenure, he also served the United States government in two national laboratories.

Frederick Waage, History of Art

Frederick O. Waage, a member of the faculty since 1935, has been awarded the title of professor of the history of art and archeology, emeritus, by the Board of Trustees, effective upon his retirement July 1.

Instrumental in developing the Department of the History of Art since its inception in 1939 as the Department of Fine Arts, Waage served for 22 years as department chairman. He was acting chairman of 1939 to 1942, when he was named chairman, a post he held until 1961.

When the department was formed just before World War II, there were two faculty members who offered nine courses to some 100 students. Today there are 11 faculty members offering 40 courses to some 1,600 students.

For years, Waage's course, Fine Arts 101-102, a survey of the history of art, was one of the more popular courses in the College of Arts and Sciences.

An authority on classical archeology and prehistoric and primitive art, Waage has published numerous articles in his field and has taken part in a number of archeological expeditions. In particular he was active in explorations during the 1930's at Antioch-on-the-Orontes in Syria (now Turkey). He was editor of and a major contributor to several volumes published concerning the findings at this site.

He also has been on expeditions in Greece and is the author of "Greek Bronze Coins from a Well at Megara," published by the American Numismatic Society in 1935. His other book is "Prehistoric Art" published by William C. Brown Co. in 1967.

Waage became an instructor in the classics at Cornell in 1935; assistant professor in fine arts in 1938; assistant professor in history of art and archeology in 1938; associate professor, history of art and archeology, 1942, and professor in 1945.

Trustees Approve Check-Off Plan To Help CNYPIRG Collect Funds

Cornell is preparing to assist the Central New York Public Interest Research Group (CNYPIRG) to collect funds through a voluntary check-off system that will be included with student billings.

The matter was reported by University President Dale R. Corson to the Board of Trustees at its May meeting in Ithaca.

The collection assistance plan was recommended in May by the University Senate. The statement received by each student will include a line that may be checked, indicating if a student wishes to contribute $2, over and above the general fees, to CNYPIRG.

CNYPIRG is a non-profit group that concerns itself with research, analysis and public education on issues such as consumer protection, discrimination, environmental concerns, occupational health and safety, landlord-tenant relations and other matters that affect the welfare of people in central New York.

According to Corson's report to the board, the collection of CNYPIRG funds will be made providing that the following conditions are satisfied:

—that CNYPIRG incorporate and obtain tax exempt status;

—that if less than 50 per cent of the student body participates, the University will consider termination of the collection agreement after discussion with leaders of the University Senate;

—that CNYPIRG monies be deposited in the organization's own bank account and that the University be reimbursed for any expenses incurred from collection of CNYPIRG monies;

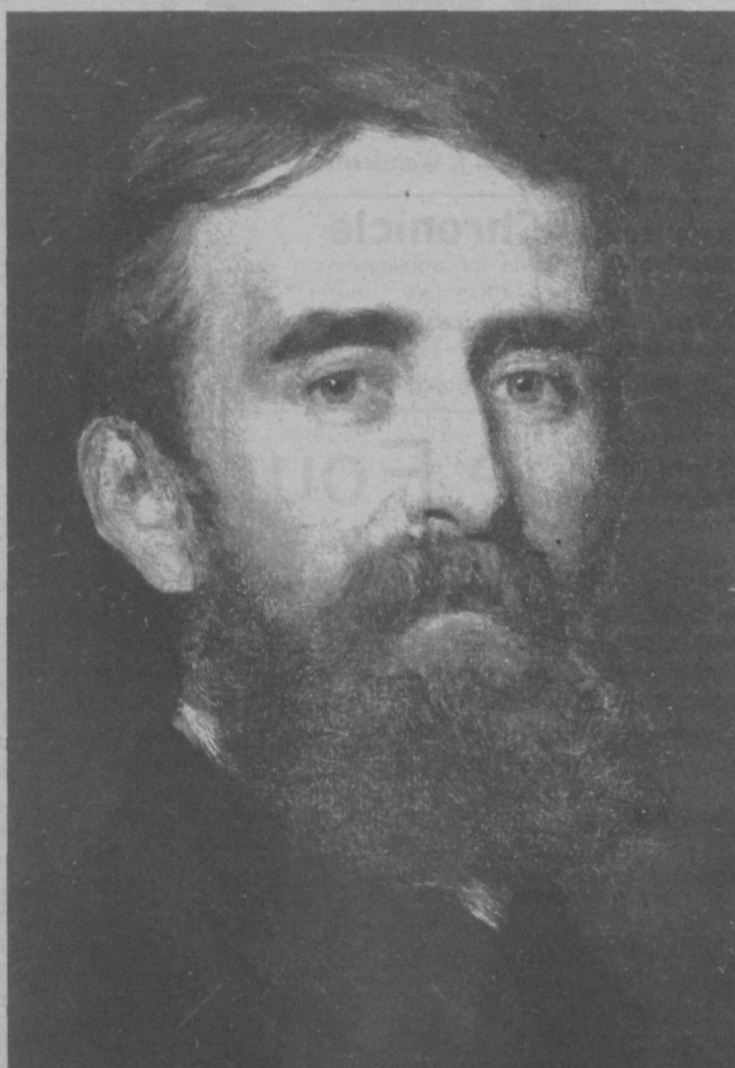

—that the University counsel confirm the legality of the arrangement with the Office of the Attorney General and the Counsel for the Education Department, both in New York State, and the State University of New York.

—"That it be expressly understood that the University is acting as collecting agent only and that there is no other connection with CNYPIRG or endorsement of its activities."

Mansbach, who was graduated from Cornell this spring, won the prize for his essay titled "Marx and De Stijl: The Withering Away of Art." Mansbach majored in the history of art.

The prize is awarded to the "honors essay giving evidence of the best research and most fruitful thought in the field of human progress and evolution of civilization during some period in human history or during human history as a whole."

Sherman-Bennett Prize

Michael Goldsmith of Forest Hills, a graduate this spring of the New York State School of Industrial and Labor Relations (ILR) at Cornell, has been named the 1972 winner of the University's Sherman-Bennett Prize worth $180.

Established in 1905, the prize is given annually "for the best essay discussing the principles of free government," and is open to all undergraduate and graduate students at Cornell. The faculty of the Department of Government in the College of Arts and Sciences selects the winning essay. Goldsmith's essay was on civil disobedience.

Frosh Residency Requirement Rescinded

The Board of Trustees has rescinded all previous regulations requiring freshmen to live in University housing and stipulated that such requirements will not be in effect as long as dormitories financed by the New York State Dormitory Authority are filled to capacity.

The board took the action at its recent meeting here in May.

Upon the recommendation of the University Senate, the requirement that freshmen must live in University housing was dropped in practice last January.

Corson, Holland Honored

University President Dale R. Corson was among 12 men and women who received honorary degrees this Tuesday during Commencement ceremonies at Columbia University.

Corson was awarded the honorary doctor of laws degree. Jerome H. Holland, a Cornell alumnus and U.S. ambassador to Sweden, was also among those who received a doctor of laws degree from Columbia.

Late last month, Corson was honored by the University of Kansas and its alumni association when he was among seven men and women who received citations for distinguished service. A native of Pittsburg, Kan., Corson earned his master's degree from Kansas.

Thompson Edits Journal

Daniel Q. Thompson, professor of natural resources at the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell, has been named editor of the "Journal of Wildlife Management."

He will also direct the development of a new publication that will serve as an outlet for "management" articles, philosophical articles, institutional analyses, and comments on legislative matters.

At Cornell, Thompson is leader of the New York Cooperative Wildlife Research Unit.

Smith Wins Merit Award

Robert S. Smith, professor of farm finance in the Department of Agricultural Economics, was recently honored with the Merit Award presented by the graduating agricultural seniors.

The award is made annually to a faculty member of the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences to recognize excellence in the teaching and advising of students.

Two Named Danforth Associates

David Connor, assistant professor of German literature and assistant dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, and his wife, Patricia Kolk Connor, assistant professor of art history at the New York State University College at Cortland, have been named Danforth Associates.

They are among several hundred faculty members and their spouses the Danforth Foundation has appointed to its associates program at some 700 colleges and universities throughout the United States.

"The program is unique," according to Robert Rankin, vice president for the Foundation and director of the program, "in that the associates work directly with students on a personal basis in an effort to improve student-faculty relations and to strengthen the teaching-learning process."

(Notes from the Department of Buildings and Properties.)

Campus Excavations

"The flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of the birds is come, ..." and the Department of Buildings and Properties commences the digging of trenches on campus.

The next target for our excavators is the northeast corner of the Campus Road — East Avenue intersection. We are replacing three old pipes that are leaking — one a large sanitary sewer which serves the State Campus, the second a smaller storm drain which protects one of the main electric substations from flooding; the third a main condensate return line. The area between the East Avenue sidewalk and the Sage parking lot will be cut by three trenches in prompt sequence, starting in mid-June, but these will be filled back in and levelled off well before fall registration. Please be tolerant of the noise - and unsightly conditions.

Kindly express all questions of interest to Edward Kabelac, acting superintendent of grounds forces, and George Gillespie, project manager for steam system improvements.

Power Outage

Several residence halls north of Fall Creek, as well as the Sibleys and Rand Hall, lost electric power for a number of hours last Thursday night. The outage resulted from water penetrating the seal of a 25-year-old cable splice and creating a ground fault in a 2,400-volt distribution cable. The B&P line crew replaced the defective splice, restoring power at 2 a.m. Friday morning.

Sgt. 'Big Jim' Eisenberg to Retire After 35 Years on Safety Division

only lifelong friendships.

"They fixed me a couple times good too. But there were no hard feelings."

It was like the day the Class of 1939 jumped him and threw him in Beebe Lake.

"I was madder than hell. Then I saw them laughing as I crawled out of the mud and knew they didn't mean any harm. It became a tradition. For years after every time the class of '39 and '41 came back they threw me in Beebe Lake. So, I'd wear my old clothes to work at Reunion time. They haven't done it lately. Afraid I'd get rheumatism or something."

Instead of throwing him in the lake last year, the Class of 1941 made big Jim an honorary member of the class.

Today he no longer roams the campus on horseback. He traded the horse for a patrol car back in 1952 and is now a sergeant on the 43-man Safety Division staff. "The greatest bunch of guys you'll ever want to meet," says big Jim.

Other things have changed for him. Instead of using the boxing skills he picked up during his childhood in mining towns, he has turned to growing flowers, a quarter acre of them on his small farm in Danby. With fishing, flower growing and just visiting, big Jim is looking forward to an active retirement.

He will also continue — at least through December — as president of Cornell's Policeman Association, which he helped establish. It's a social club, he said, that plans to help young boys and needy families in the area as part of its activities. "These are activities I can take part in for a long time to come."

Jim spends a lot of time already visiting with the old people in nursing homes and hospitals around the area. It's not particularly a planned activity.

"But every time I visit someone, I end up talking to almost everyone there. I used to drive my family nuts back when I was a kid. Every Sunday when we went to church I had to stop and say hello to everyone.

"My mother, who is 95 and just as sharp as a tack, says I started talking at a year old and haven't stopped since. But the old people love it, you know. They look forward to you coming and seeing them."

Big Jim's attractions are not only for the old, as many former Cornell students can avow. This was again expressed only last Sunday in a note sent him by the teenage daughter of one of his colleagues:

"To me he's a very special person, who I love very much.

"He brings joy and happiness whenever he's around, and no matter what he's doing or who he's with, he always has a little time for me.

"He's also very generous, kind, and thoughtful. I've heard he gives a lot of help and assistance to those who need it. Especially those who need it the most.

"He's a very warm and loving person, who is greatly respected by others, other than myself. His name is Jim Eisenberg and our birthdays are on the same day. Not only this year but in the many more to come.

"He calls me his girl, and you know what, I'm glad."

Precautions Advised

Safety Division Warns of Thefts

Petty cash stolen from purses, coffee funds, petty cash drawers and stamp money totaled nearly $1,800 in personal and office losses during the first quarter of the year.

Lowell T. George, director of the Safety Division, suggested the following seven points be considered by office personnel to reduce the number of these thefts:

— refrain from keeping money in desk drawers, open boxes and conspicuous places in offices;

— Lock office doors before leaving the building;

— use an office safe to secure money, if one is available, and keep it locked at all times;

— keys or access to petty cash funds should be limited to the custodian of the funds or the department head;

— if office funds for coffee exceed $25, deposit the excess in an account;

— record the serial number of bills in the petty cash fund and keep the list in a separate place; and — keep purses locked in a drawer or cabinet when a secretary is absent from her office, even for a few moments.

Safety Division records show a large number of purse thefts from secretaries, according to George.

George asked that offices having security problems contact the Safety Division immediately. By implementing the division's suggestions and by keeping the division informed, George hopes University offices will be able to keep cash thefts to a minimum.

Cornell Chronicle will publish its next edition on Thursday, July 6.

Bulletin Board

Insurance for Student Spouses

Spouses of students at Cornell will be eligible in September, 1972 for the same medical coverage offered to students by the University Health Services.

The University's Board of Trustees approved the extended coverage, as recommended recently by the Board on Student Health, at its May meeting in Ithaca.

Coverage to spouses will be offered for $71 per year, the same fee charged to students, and will be optional. It will be for a two-year trial period and will be evaluated each year to determine whether extended coverage should be continued.

Student medical coverage includes unlimited visits to Gannett Medical Clinic, up to 14 days hospitalization each semester in Sage Infirmary, emergency surgical care, laboratory and x-ray examinations, counseling services, including those provided in the Mental Health Division, and limited specialist consultations.

Professional Skills Roster

The Professional Skills Roster, 410 College Ave., will be closed until Aug. 21. However, mail will be received through the summer at that address.

Traffic Bureau Hours

Cornell's Traffic Bureau will be open to the public from noon to 2 p.m. daily from Monday, June 12, through Friday, June 23. The abbreviated hours are being put into effect so that the bureau can revamp its office procedures.

Requests by telephone from June 12-23 may still be made to the bureau between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. at 256-4600. The Traffic Bureau is located in G-11 Barton Hall.

Beginning July 3, the bureau will be open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. for all business except oral appeals. These may be presented from 10-11:30 a.m. and from noon to 2 p.m. daily.

In other traffic matters, the bureau has instituted a 25-cent per vehicle fee for conference parking on the campus. The fee is now in effect.

Parking Permit Deadline Is July 1

Applications for 1972-73 Cornell University parking/registration permits are now available to faculty and staff members. The applications must be submitted to the Cornell Traffic Bureau in G-11 Barton Hall by July 1.

A memorandum recently sent to faculty and employees by the Traffic Bureau concerning vehicle registration erroneously said the deadline for applications to be submitted was June 1.

All persons who work for the University or who work for an agency located on the University grounds must register their vehicles with the Traffic Bureau if those vehicles will be operated or parked on Cornell property. Unregistered vehicles on the campus will be subject to a $10 fine.

Prices for the yearly parking/registration permits range from nothing for the outlying parking areas to $108 for U and S permit areas.

A description of all available parking permits, the areas to which they give access and those persons who are eligible for the various permits may be obtained from the Traffic Bureau.

U permits enable the driver to park a vehicle with a U sticker in all parking areas except loading and service areas, visitor areas and dormitory and commuter student areas. S permits give access to service areas and all U-permit areas.

Persons with LT permits may park in the Lynah-Teagle and Schoellkopf areas. Those with E permits may park in lots adjacent to Anabel Taylor Hall, Myron Taylor Hall, Hollister Hall, Grumman Hall, Kimball and Thurston Halls, part of Helen Newman Hall and in Hughes Circle.

O permits give access to agriculture and veterinary lots east of Wing Drive and a portion of West Ave., and O3 permits may be used for Wilson Synchrotron Laboratory parking.

Available for free are the following permits: AB, for parking in either A or B lots; RP, for the Research Park; O1, for Graphic Arts, Service Building and the Heating Plant; O2, for west dormitories, north dormitories and various outlying areas.

In addition to the regularly available permits, the Traffic Bureau will issue to any University department a floating visitor's permit for $5 per academic year. This permit would allow a department to lend a visitor's permit to guests with unregistered vehicles.

Special arrangement may be made for car pools, persons with medical disabilities, faculty and staff members whose sole offices provided by the University are off-campus, and emeritus professors. Also, those who want permits for one semester only will be charged half price.

Bust of 1st Architecture Professor To Be Placed in Chapel Tomorrow

A portrait bust of Chales Babcock, the first professor of architecture at Cornell, will be placed in Sage Chapel tomorrow in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the teaching of architecture here. The brief public ceremony is scheduled for 3 p.m.

The bust, which eventually will be cast in bronze, is a new work by sculptor Victor E. Colby, professor of art in the College of Architecture, Art and Planning. The work was commissioned by the college with a gift from Nathaniel Owings, a 1927 graduate of the college and a founder of the architectural firm Skidmore, Owings and Merrill.

The bust will be placed in the right-hand window at the inside of the main entrance to Sage Chapel, one of several buildings on campus designed by Babcock in the Victorian Gothic Revival style.

Taking part in the ceremony will be Mrs. Stephen Fish of Ridgefield, Conn. a grandniece of Babcock.

Babcock began teaching architecture at Cornell in September 1871 and remained the sole member of the Department of Architecture, then part of the College of Civil Engineering, for five years. He later served as dean and director of the College of Architecture until 1897. Cornell was the first school in the United States to offer a four-year course in architecture.

Babcock also was an Episcopalian minister and conducted the Episcopalian services on campus.
