

Digital Repository

The DSpace Digital Repository at Cornell University is sponsored by the Cornell University Library. DSpace is an open-source software package developed by MIT and Hewlett-Packard Company.

Located at <http://dspace.library.cornell.edu> this repository is open for anyone at Cornell University as a place to capture, store, index, preserve and redistribute Cornell faculty, staff, student or organizational research materials in digital formats.

The structure of DSpace consists of Communities, which can contain Sub-communities and Collections. Submissions are made to a Collection.

To submit to a Collection, a user must have a DSpace account and be authorized to submit to that Collection.

Some examples of existing Communities and Collections:

- Arts and Sciences (community)
 - Economics (sub-community)
 - Emeritus Publications (collection)

- Cornell University Graduate School (community)
 - Theses and Dissertations (CLOSED) (collection)
 - Theses and Dissertations (OPEN) (collection)

- East-Central Europe Sources (community)
 - Sources in English (sub-community)
 - 0700-1400: Migrations, Medieval Kingdoms (collection)

- Internet-First University Press (community)
 - Books and Articles (collection)
 - Multimedia and Videos (collection)
 - Undergraduate Scholarly Publications (collection)
 - Journals (sub-community)
 - CIGR (collection)

Collections can be created by the Library's DSpace staff and a designated person in your unit can have permission to modify the Collections and submissions.

To enable DSpace in your unit, please send the name and e-mail address of your unit's designated DSpace submitter along with your unit name to dspace-admin-l@cornell.edu. You can also direct any questions you have to the same address.
